Faulty Computer Delays Takeoff, Target Is Aloft

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The hard-luck Gemini 9 flight was postponed two days today because of last-minute problems that prevented the Titan II rocket from being launched.

The space walk and rendezvous mission was rescheduled for 9:39 a.m. Friday.

The flight was called off at 12:40 p.m. with the astronauts, Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan, sealed in their cramped Gemini 9 spacecraft atop the nine-storey-tall Titan rocket.

The target satellite which the astronauts were to chase across the sky had been fired into space at 11 a.m. from another launching pad 6,000 feet away.

"I just can't believe it," said Cernan, a 32 - year - old space rookie, disappointed for the second straight time in his goal to take the longest space walk in history.

There was also a hint of trouble with the target satellite, even though it entered a near-perfect circular orbit. Ground stations were unable to confirm that a shroud covering the docking collar had fallen away as planned.

WOULD FOIL LINK-UP

If the shroud did not come off, the astronauts will not be able to link up with the target, but will be able to carry out rendezvous missions.

Until they get within eyesight of the target, they will not know whether the shroud is off.

The guidance problem in the Gemini 9 spacecraft was not discovered until less than two minutes before it was to blast off on a three-day mission.

The countdown on the Titan II proceeded smoothly down to the minute, 40 seconds before scheduled liftoff. Then a hold was called and the count was recycled to three minutes and holding when a new signal was rejected by a computer in the spacecraft.

The guidance signal was designed to adjust the computer that is inside the steer the Titan into the proper path to begin the pursuit of the target.

The count was resumed twice

Violence Flares On Waterfront In Dock Strike

MONTREAL (CP)—Some 100 RCMP officers, 75 National Harbors Board police and an unspecified number of Montreal city police were on duty in Montreal's strike-bound waterfront today after incidents of property damage and violence Tuesday.

Sgt. Paul Dansereau of the harbor police reported early today that "six or seven" men were arrested Tuesday for trespassing and are to be arraigned today.

Two fires were set in gear sheds but were easily overcome, he said.

Some 50 RCMP officers were posted to the waterfront Tuesday as groups of men slashed truck tires and damaged furniture in the Shipping Federation of Canada and two other offices.

Sgt. Dansereau said there may be more trouble this morning when the Russian passenger liner Alexandr Pushkin leaves Montreal harbor for Europe.

Police later reported that some 30 harbor police have been stationed near the Pushkin to guard its passengers and luggage are brought aboard.

DAMAGED LUGGAGE

Tuesday two trucks carrying luggage to the Russian vessel were stopped by a mob of men who ordered the drivers out, then damaged the luggage.

Police said two men were arrested in connection with the violence which broke out after some longshoremen left a meeting called by the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC).

At the federation offices, nine men overturned furniture, ripped out telephone lines and smashed typewriters while terrified office workers watched.

Waterfront offices of Beaver Construction Co. and Inspiration Inc. Ltd. were also damaged.

Trucks also were reported to have been damaged in the area and stones were thrown as police moved in to handle tense groups of longshoremen.

Federal cabinet ministers met in Ottawa for two hours Tuesday night, but a spokesman denied the meeting was prompted by the reported violence.

Prime minister Pearson told reporters after the meeting he had no announcement to make.

He confirmed, however, that the cabinet had discussed the strike, that has tied up the ports of Montreal, Three Rivers and Quebec City since May 10.

Mr. Pearson said earlier he had been meeting with the Montreal port council that any further delay in settling the strike would have "catastrophic" consequences and said:

"action is being taken."

Meanwhile in Montreal, federal mediator Judge Rene Lippe said he had sent telegrams to the executives of the six strike-bound longshoremen's locals asking them to meet with him and conciliator C. E. Potter today.

A statement by a union spokesman that negotiations in-

Civil Servants Aided

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill handing a host of civil servants collective bargaining and the right to strike won general approval in the Commons Tuesday.

Although the complex bill setting out collective bargaining procedures for some 200,000 civil servants was given second reading, many MPs served notice they want to go over its 116 sections and 1,000-odd references during clause-by-clause study, next stage for the bill.

Revenue Minister Benson said it would probably take about two years for all provisions to filter down through the public service and get employees sorted into their proper categories.

A companion bill also went into second reading. It would create the Civil Service Commission a training and recruiting organization and change the name to the Public Service Commission.

Earlier, third reading was given a government reorganization bill that now goes to the Senate for approval. It shuffles responsibilities and changes names of some departments.

FOCUS ON DIVISION

Closing hours of debates on the bill focused on what Conservative MPs called a division of resource responsibilities.

An amendment by Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) to make the proposed energy, mines and resources minister responsible for territorial waters and the continental shelf was defeated 69 to 28.

Mr. Fulton withdrew a second amendment, specifying that the energy minister be responsible for natural resources, after the government promised to draft one on the same lines.

The government amendment,

One in 7 Hospital Patients Suffer From Drug Reactions

TORONTO (CP)—Adverse reaction to drugs is responsible for the conditions of up to 14 per cent of all hospital patients, Dr. K. V. R. Wightman, professor of medicine at the University of Toronto, said Tuesday.

He told the annual meeting of the Consumers' Association of Canada asubcrlits cannot tell how many persons who never enter hospitals suffer from adverse reactions to drugs because there are no figures. "It worries us."

Physician-in-chief at Toronto General Hospital, he said there is no knowledge of what self-medication is doing in the population.

But there probably was a strong case for self-medication. If self-medication were ruled out, medical men would be swamped and this "might mean that persons with serious illness could not get necessary attention."

Frank Buckley, director of the Proprietary Drug Association of Canada, said drug manufacturers are "fed up with" lethal whipping posts" for a population that insists on poisoning itself with overdoses of drugs or by ignoring directions on labels.

Mr. Buckley said labelling drugs as dangerous or toxic would not prevent poisoning. Half the persons poisoned could not read—children up to four years of age.

Public Hanging Planned Of Congo Ex-ministers

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—Radio Leopoldville today invited the entire population of the city to be in the main square for the public hanging Thursday of four men accused of plotting against the Congolese government.

The hanging in the square, a giant field in the heart of the capital, was set for 9 a.m.—unless behind-the-scenes efforts to have the four reprieved succeed.

A military court in a grassy clearing of Kokolo military camp Tuesday found the four ex-cabinet ministers guilty of treason.

The trial lasted about 90 minutes. The three judges took about six minutes to reach their verdict—death by hanging.

About 10,000 Africans crowded around the open air court, shouting and fighting.

No evidence was presented at the trial. No prosecution case was made. The defendants had no counsel. And there were no witnesses.

Each accused was invited to make a statement in his own defence. All bore themselves well but a good part of what they

TORONTO (CP)—A 10-year-old boy, identified only as Grant, was placed in a ward with 73 adult patients when committed to a Hamilton mental hospital, a member of the legislature said Tuesday.

Stephen Lewis (NDP — Scarborough West) said the boy, from Welland, was certified as a patient for the Ontario Hospital by two doctors on the staff of the Welland County mental health clinic.

Try to Head Off Strike Of QPP

QUEBEC (CP) — Representatives of the government and the Quebec Provincial Police Association were scheduled to meet again today in a final attempt to head off a threatened strike by QPP officers Thursday.

The parties met Tuesday after Premier Jean Lesage offered limited recognition of the association.

The association called the strike last week in support demands that included government recognition of their organization as a bargaining agent.

Claiming to represent 1,800 of the force's 2,300 men, the association also wants source deduction of its dues from pay cheques and submission of problems between the two to an impartial arbitrator.

When the first meeting ended early this morning, both sides said the talks were amicable. One said: "Nothing has been settled but there are certain points on which we agree."

EXPLAIN ACTION

Premier Lesage said Tuesday he made the offer of limited recognition to avert the strike. He invited lawyers for the force to meet government lawyers "to draw up the conditions under which recognition can be

Grenade Wounds Monk

By ROBERT D. ORMAN

SAIGON (AP) — Buddhist leaders resumed their peace talks with Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's military junta today despite a mysterious grenade attack on one of the leading monks involved.

While the resumption of the negotiations seemed a hopeful sign in South Viet Nam's political crisis, rampaging student mobs sacked and burned the deserted U.S. consulate and at least three other buildings in the rebellious Buddhist stronghold of Hue.

Surveyor Streaks To ward Moon Landing

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor I, streaking toward a landing on the moon Thursday morning, carries not only a camera but U.S. hopes of making the first touchdown gentle enough for men to survive.

Surveyor is due to settle on a broad equatorial plain at 2:17 a.m. EDT Thursday and begin radioing pictures which will help scientists pick the safest areas for Apollo astronaut landings later this decade.

If everything works, Surveyor will fire retro-rockets to break its supersonic speed from 6,100 miles an hour to 3½ miles an hour, then drop gently the final 14 feet with less impact than a parachutist feels on earth.

Russia's ball - shaped Luna IX, which radioed the first pictures from the lunar surface Feb. 3, apparently was ejected from a carrier vehicle at a height of several hundred feet.

"Information and pictures recently released in Moscow indicate the fall probably would have been fatal to an unprotected human," said Dr. Thomas Vreeboivich of Jet Propulsion Laboratory which is guiding Surveyor on its 250,000-mile trip.

The Soviets never disclosed how Luna IX was landed, but monitoring of Soviet signals indicated the carrier vehicle fired a retro rocket about 40 miles above the lunar surface and shortly afterwards ejected the 226-pound crushproof ball, which popped open on impact and started a camera, he said.

The 2,200-pound Surveyor carries both camera and retro-rockets on its spindly three-legged frame.

The main retro rocket is designed to ignite 60 miles above the moon's surface, slowing the speed from 6,100 m.p.h. to 250 m.p.h. in 40 seconds. The rocket case then falls away and smaller rockets take over to slow the descent to 3½ miles an hour at a point 14 feet above the lunar surface.

The craft then drops to the moon, its impact cushioned by shock absorbing legs and crushable pads on its circular feet.

The retro - rocket descent is the method planned for Apollo astronauts.

See Good Chance of Getting Russians To Agree to Ban on Moon Warfare

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. officials said today the prospects for negotiating a treaty with Russia to ban use of the moon and other heavenly bodies for military purposes appear to be good—despite tension between Moscow and Washington over the Viet Nam war.

The two countries are in agreement on the need for such a treaty which also would provide for international co-operation in exploring the moon and other celestial bodies.

President Johnson proposed May 7 that the United Nations should start early discussing of a moon treaty. The Soviet Union made what seemed to be a parallel proposal to UN Secretary-General U Thant Monday. It was disclosed in New York Tuesday by Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko.

The Johnson administration welcomed the Soviet call for action and said the matter is so important that work on it should begin "without delay" in the UN outer space committee.

A state department spokesman said "we are encouraged by the apparently affirmative interest shown by the Soviet government in President Johnson's proposal. . . ."

The president, in his May 7 proposal, said the moon and other celestial bodies should be "free for exploration and use by all countries" and "no country should be permitted to advance a claim of sovereignty."

In December, 1961, the United Nations adopted a resolution providing that international law, including the UN charter, applied to outer space. It also specified that outer space and celestial bodies were free for exploration by all countries and were not subject to national appropriation.

In December, 1963, an additional resolution spelled out legal points which should apply to the development of exploration in the possible use of space and celestial bodies.

Warden Hall Calls Session For June 9

The summer session of Hastings county council has been called by Warden Clayton Hall for June 9th and 10th with a possible evening sitting on the 9th.

Reports from the various standing committees will be heard, including the Hastings Manor committee, the special committee and salaries, finance and public property, roads and bridges, the secondary school committee and the county board of health.

At the last session of council there was a spirited discussion on school matters following the report of the county Public Schools Consultative Committee and apparently many questions are still unanswered.

The committee report dealt with larger school areas and new regulations whereby township school areas with less than 100 pupils must be attached to an adjoining area.

Since the last session county clerk treasurer Carl Bateman reports he has been asked many questions with respect to the school matter. The questions were recorded and were later presented to the Department of Education by Warden Hall and Mr. Bateman.

A copy of the questions and of the answers given by department officials has been forwarded to each county councillor.

Adjourn Bank Holdup Trial To Thursday After Voirdire

The trial of four Montreal men charged with the $18,000 armed robbery of the Bank of Montreal at Frankford, March 30, was adjourned yesterday afternoon until Thursday morning to allow defence counsel Robert Temple time to consult with his clients about evidence presented in a voirdire.

The adjournment will also give Judge Anderson time to decide on the admissibility of the evidence given in the voirdire by O.P.P. Cpl. J. Claude Courville, Cobourg.

Tuesday, Gary D. Waller, Kepiville O.P.P., testified that he and his police dog Butch were called to the scene of an abandoned 1963 Oldsmobile just west of Glen Miller March 30.

He said the dog was encouraged to track south from the car through the bush following a trail of footprints and broken brush.

"We were conveyed by an Ontario Hydro helicopter to the top of a large hill. From the hill the dog followed the trail southeast for about one-quarter mile where he located 22 .38 calibre cartridges.

"From there he went to a large rock 20 feet in diameter. He then went south to a stream, turned and went back to the rock, then went north. At this time I noticed one set of footprints going south," he testified.

Cst. Walker said he and Butch followed the set of footprints through Batawa and came back to the CNR tracks before the prints ended.

He said they went to the area early the next morning but failed to find anything. "At 9:20 a.m. March 31 we were again called out to the area of the 401 and the Stockdale Road. About three-quarter mile south of the Stockdale Rd. Butch located a spot where a fire had burned. We dismissed the search then because of snow falling.

SNIFFED CLOTHES

"On Saturday (April 2) we returned to Belleville and went to the area around the 401 and CNR tracks south of Glen Miller.

"At 4 p.m. Sgt. Lyle (O.P.P. Det. Sgt. Lloyd Lyle) produced a large box containing articles of clothing. Butch was allowed to sniff them and then was encouraged to track.

"We went through the tunnel under the 401 and went south approximately 30 yards to a large piece of cardboard. Butch showed great interest in the cardboard so I picked it up and found a grey plastic raincoat and approximately 11 .38 calibre cartridges in the pocket.

"Then we went south for a while and went to the bush, where Butch located a number of articles of clothing.

"From there we went east, then north approximately 100 yards from where the clothing was found. There the dog went towards, a seeded thicket and showed his alsoe right into the bush. There we located a greenish duffle bag. It was turned over to O.P.P. Cst. Larry Smith at 3:45 p.m."

Cst. Robert Burkholder, Belleville O.P.P., testified that he was at a roadblock on Highway 401 and 33 at 2:30 a.m. March 31 when he stopped a 1957 grey Chevrolet sedan.

"The driver identified himself as Peter Lee, driver's license as Maurice Langis and he was alone in the car at the time and he said he had come from Toronto and was going to Toronto to pick up a friend.

"He was very co-operative.

"I noticed when he pulled away that the left rear taillight was missing but the red glass was missing.

"I believe the ownership card showed me was in the name of Pelletier."

CAR STOPPED

Cpl. H. R. Banting, Cobourg, testified that he went to a roadblock March 31 at 1:05 p.m. on Highway 401 about one-quarter mile east of Highway 45.

"At 1:45 I observed Sgt. Grey had stopped a 1957 grey Chevrolet and was talking to one man outside the car.

"I assisted Cst. Lunn in searching this vehicle. We found a pair of brown leather boots.

"They were size 8 and brown.

"The four men were taken to Cobourg and I interviewed them separately."

When Cpl. Banting was asked to identify the four men in the courtroom he said that Armand Bisson and Victor Tessier correctly but at first mistook Langis for Gilles Gaudette.

He said Bisson was the first to be interviewed. "Bisson said he had left Montreal last night and stayed in Ottawa at a friend of Langis.

"Langis was next. He had paper matches from the Embassy Restaurant, 334 Princess St., Kingston, and from Bo-peep Restaurant 849 Princess St., Kingston. He stated he was an insurance salesman. A driver headed to Toronto to look for work.

"Gaudette told me he was going to Toronto to look for work in construction.

"Tessier had a grey jacket, which was damp. He said he had been out in the bush looking for a contractor in Montreal and then had gone to Ottawa. He said he left Ottawa today to go to Toronto to look for work."

Blind Man Wins His Chance To Operate Tourist Resort

REGINA (CP)—Natural resources Minister J. M. Cuelenaere wasn't entirely convinced that the blind man who had come to see him could successfully run a tourist resort in northeast Saskatchewan.

But Ted Olson, seeking to purchase Crown land for the resort, pulled out a map and traced with his finger a route to the proposed resort about 70 miles west of Flin Flon, Man.

"You should have seen the minister," a department spokesman reported. "He almost flipped."

Mr. Olson, whose blindness hasn't stopped him from fishing, bowling and water skiing, was well prepared. He had marked the route with pinpricks which he could feel with his fingertips.

The lodge opened in 1965 on the Crown land he wanted.

Mr. Olson lost both eyes in a hunting accident in 1960 when a gun discharged near him. Then 22, the German-born immigrant enrolled in a school of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Within a year he had decided to become a physiotherapist. He completed a two-year course in Toronto which qualified him to attend a school for blind physiotherapists in London, England.

MAY EXPAND CAMP

The school refused him admission because of his German background, he said. Its officials didn't realize he could speak good English.

Mr. Olson, long an outdoorsman, thought of the tourist lodge But the CNIB was slow to grant a loan. Other possible avenues of financial backing fell through.

Finally six Regina businessmen heard of his plans, impressed with his "determination and tremendous drive" they formed a corporation to back the venture.

Mr. Olson, who married a Regina girl, took an initial trip to the site last June to build the lodge. It accommodates 16 people but he hopes to expand it this year.

The site is near Deschambault Lake. In first-class fishing country, the lodge is the only one from which the northern invalid's system can be reached by water.

Mr. Olson, who came to Canada in 1956, aims to build a series of satellite cabins in the surrounding area. He now lives in Flin Flon but hopes to live permanently at the camp.

He bowls what he calls an average game, golfs in the low 90s and water skis with ease.

Issue Warrant Against Alyea In Land Dispute

TRENTON — A hearing before a county judge in Cobourg will be held Friday afternoon in connection with the issuing of a warrant by the Trenton Public Utilities Commission against Murray township landowner Jack Alyea.

Mr. Alyea has forcibly restrained workmen hired by the PUC from entering upon 12.5 acres of land the commission wants for a section of a proposed new water storage pond. Expropriation proceedings have been entered by the PUC.

PUC Is Host At Dinner

TRENTON — The Trenton Public Utilities Commission played host last night to 60 builders, contractors and representatives of various town boards, councils and service clubs, at a dinner meeting in the Trenton Country Club.

Guest speaker was Jack Thompson, superintendent of lighting with Ontario Hydro. Mr. Thompson showed colored slides of various ways of lighting public or privately owned buildings, churches and gardens. Of particular interest was the Eastern Ontario Hydro office at Napanee, the Christmas lighting display at Casa Loma in Toronto, ($7,000 worth of lighting); the Bata Shoe building at Don Mills and the Ontario Bridge of Trenton projected structural steel and buildings of in Kingston and Peterborough.

Commission members present were chairman Charles Hilton and C. A. Baker. Mayor James MacDonald was absent but was represented by councillors. Also at the dinner were personnel from the utility office James Page, manager; Howard Hallick, chairman of the meeting; John Ormsby; Charles Chard; Wm. McLaren and Barry Box.

House Building Shows Increase Over Last Year

House building in Belleville is up this year as compared to last year, according to building permits officials in the area.

The above is indicated by May building records from city hall, anc by the sign of at least one per builder which indicates'units of a three building apartment complex on Dundas Street are completed or erected — and all before construction is completed.

The building statistics at city hall show that construction for the past month was predominantly residential.

In all 41 permits were issued, (three of them for signs) with total estimated value at $292,388. Permits for 21 dwelling units were issued, 15 for single family homes and one permit for a six-plex apartment.

Last year there were only ten permits for residences taken out during May.

There is a strong demand for rental residential accommodation with apparently both rentals and apartment units hard to come by.

One builder constructing three six-plexes on Dundas Street, East, has one structure about completed with still two more to go.

But a realtor's sign on the property indicates that already all units have been rented.

Issue 18 Permits

TRENTON — During May, 18 permits were issued from the office of building inspector William Anderson. Values stood at $75,250.

Three permits were for new homes, value, $33,000; two for commercial buildings, $15,500; two for repair, $11,000; seven, for additions to dwellings, $11,050; three for garages, $2,700; and one for demolition, no value.

In April, 12 permits were issued; value, $27,000.

TRENTON — Last evening, tenders for the construction of a swimming pool in the high school were opened by members of the Trenton School Board and service club representatives at a meeting in the board office.

However, none of the tenders submitted met with the approval of the group and the architects, Barnard, Reider and Creighton, will be asked to recall tenders.

Water Safety Subject of Talk To Kiwanians

The importance of water safety was impressed on members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club yesterday when Kiwanian D. D. Dickson, past District Commissioner of the Canadian Power Squadron spoke on a subject he termed "critical". He emphasized the need for everyone to learn to swim, observing that many people drown within 10 ft. of safety.

"We have an obligation to see that our children learn to swim" he said.

He described life preservers as a tremendously import a nt item for boaters and, with the help of four club members, demonstrated the correct way to wear two types of government approved preservers; discussed the uses of buoyant cushions, and explained that a ski-belt was not a preserver but was useful in that it would raise a portion of a person's body, improving chances of rescue in an emergency.

"You must know how to put these preservers on properly. It can be disastrous if they are put on wrong. A complete knowledge of the equipment available is essential.

"The highest number of boating and drowning accidents occur in spring and fall. Hunters operate under poor conditions in the fall. They tend to overload their boats and if they do find themselves in the cold water, may go straight to the bottom, weighted by heavy clothing and boots. In the early fishermen face the same problems. Don't take chances and risk your life unnecessarily.

NEED SUPERVISION

"In summer, authorities express concern over poor use and the use of floating toys and mattresses in deep water. These things are forbidden on the beaches. Children using them need constant supervision for obvious reasons."

Mr. Hickson described "drown proofing" for his audience, commenting that it takes courage and knowledge to become adept at this skill, which, if done properly, can keep a person afloat for hours at a time.

"Let yourself sink to a depth of 12-18 inches. Your body will be buoyant and when a breath of air is required, a quick push with the hands, a kick, and your nose will come out of the water. Using a minimum of effort, this can be repeated for hours, but it takes courage."

Turning to boat handling, he said that he is in favor of licensing persons operating boats powered by motors "greater than 5 horsepower."

"Young people should be safe enough with motors of 3½-5 h.p. but more powerful motors are very tricky. Again, I favor a minimum age of 16 for operators of boats with motors over 5 h.p.

"There are safe and unsafe operators. Experience is the main thing. Split second decisions are required frequently and there is no time for a second choice."

GOOD PROFIT REALIZED

In conclusion, Mr. Hickson reposted that he was pleased in the importance of learning to s wim and practicing drown proofing, a safety skill that is "not easy but can be done when we have to do it."

William Stewart reported on results of the club's recent Feature Day blitz, stating that a profit of $935.83 had been realized.

"That's an all-time record," observed president Frieda Bellstedt.

Commenting on the Motorcycle Scramble sponsored by the club Saturday, Ralph Mercon said the turnout for the event had been very good and that a "substantial" profit would be shown.

Tax Board Rules Upon Teacher's Case

OTTAWA (CP)—The Tax Appeal Board has ruled that a teacher should be allowed to deduct from his income the cost of school supplies other than books he buys personally to help him teach.

But the board has also ruled that the travel expense of going to a teachers' convention or to attend summer school classes cannot be allowed as an income deduction. The cost of tuition fees for part-time study is deductible.

The board made its rulings in the case of John Kenneth Carson, a salaried Ontario teacher at Parry Sound High School and at Barrie District Collegiate in 1963.

He claimed a deduction for pencils, ball-point pens, paper clips, books, charts and other materials he bought at his own expense to help him teach.

The board said materials which were consumed in teaching should be allowed as an income deduction. But it said the purchase of books could not be allowed since books were not consumed, merely used.

in hope of sending the signal through but each time it was rejected.

In order to catch the target today, the Titan would have had to have been launched in a six minute period ending at 12:44 p.m.

The spacecraft apparent the condition could not be corrected in time, mission director Wilbur J. Schneider called the launch off for two days.

The reason is that the target satellite will not be in position for a pursuit until Friday morning.

The space agency will have six minutes to get the Gemini off the ground the first time Friday morning. If it doesn't work, it will have 35 more minutes beginning at 11:15 a.m. the same day.

For Stafford and Cernan, it was the second disappointment in 15 days. Their flight was scrubbed May 17 when an Agena target satellite failed to go into orbit.

FOURTH DISAPPOINTMENT

For Stafford, it was the fifth trip up in a spacecraft cabin to await a launch, and the fourth time he has been frustrated.

Earlier, when test conductor Lee Schall informed the astronauts in their spacecraft of the successful orbit of the target, Stafford said: "Good shot, Bill."

Schall replied: "We knew if you stuck there long enough we would get you a good one."

Wife of PEI Liberal Leader Lived in City

The leader of the Liberal party in Prince Edward Island where Monday's general election is still in doubt, has family connections in the Belleville district.

The wife of Alex B. Campbell, former Liberal party leader, is the former Marilyn Gilmour and at one time lived in Belleville. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Gilmour. Mrs. Campbell's grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gilmour still live in Frankford.

Weslemkoon Road Project Is Approved

The Ontario Department of Highways will rebuild the Weslemkoon Road through Tudor and Cashel townships as a development road project.

Clarke T. Rollins, MLA for Hastings East, reports he has been advised by Highways Minister Hon. G. S. McNaughton, that construction designation on the road project has been approved and agreement documents are being forwarded to the district municipal engineer for the necessary signatures.

Memorial Day Toll Is Record

CHICAGO (AP) — A total of 542 persons were killed in traffic accidents in the U.S. during the 78-hour Memorial Day weekend, shattering the record for three- and four-day observances of the period.

The total surpassed the previous record for Memorial Day of 525 in 1963, a four-day weekend.

The death count began at 6 p.m. local time last Friday and ended at midnight Monday night.

California led with 56 deaths followed by Michigan with 46, Pennsylvania, 32, New York 28 and Florida 26.

Crew Abandons Sinking Vessel

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—The crew of the sinking freighter Aktor has abandoned efforts to keep her afloat and boarded two commercial vessels which responded in an SOS 800 miles northeast of here.

Twenty of the crew boarded the Pioneer Isle, a cargo vessel, late Tuesday night, U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said. The other seven aboard the Kendall Fish, another cargo ship.

An association spokesman said they had requested such a meeting for some two months.

The QPP association, under its present charter, does not have the right to negotiate with the government and has no executive powers. Also, under the QPP is considered an essential service, members are not legally allowed to strike.

In Montreal Friday, 400 members voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike and other officers throughout the province later gave strong support.

The strike would not affect services such as criminal investigation and traffic. However, no men would be provided for the June 5 provincial election.

WILL FIGHT CHARGES

Earlier Tuesday, Mr. Lesage and Justice Minister Claude Wagner indicated they would be happy to go to court and fight any charges of criminal libel and slander which were brought against them by Arthur Vachon, QPP Association president.

Mr. Vachon said earlier he would lay the charges because Premier Lesage had described him as being considered a "security risk".

Mr. Lesage said Monday he had learned from Mr. Wagner that the RCMP had a file on Mr. Vachon.

Mr. Vachon was dismissed from his QPP job for what were described as "disciplinary reasons." He was ordered to appear before a disciplinary committee Wednesday.

Following Mr. Lesage's offer of limited recognition Tuesday Mr. Vachon said his lawyers had advised him to hold off further consideration of legal proceedings against Mr. Lesage. Mr. Wagner. Mr. Vachon said he was doing so in the hopes that Mr. Lesage's offer might lead to a "peace settlement."

North Ontario Cree Village Is Flooded

TORONTO (CP)—The lands and forest department and the Red Cross are standing by to send aid to a Cree Indian village reported washed out by the flooding Winisk River in Northern Ontario.

Frank MacDougall, a deputy minister of lands and forests, said late Tuesday night a DC-3 aircraft sent in from Timmins would remain overnight and radio a report of conditions.

The village, situated near where the river enters Hudson Bay, is about 300 miles north of Timmins, has a population of between 400 and 450.

Mr. MacDougall said no loss of life was reported but "you can never tell with that river."

The report of the flooding came from a construction crew working on the side of the river opposite the village. The crew is at the site of an old RCAF radar station which is being dismantled.

Women in Politics

There is no reason why women should not take a more active part in politics, as Pauline Jewett, former Liberal member of parliament for Northumberland, suggested recently in an address to the Ontario-West regional conference of the Canadian Federation of University Women.

The parliaments of Canada and Britain both have their quota of women members, but they are admittedly few in number. Politics is still very much a man's world, and judging by the state of the world it cannot be said they have made a notable success of the job.

It may well be that the more women who find their way into government — particularly well-educated, articulate women with a responsible approach to the problems of the day — the better it will be for the future of the country.

But the road into politics is a hard one for women aspirants. To reach their goal they must have more than their share of determination as well as a good grasp of the country's problems. In her quest for the public's recognition and respect, the woman candidate cannot make do with half measures.

Miss Jewett said as much when she urged women to take responsible positions in party politics and prepare to get a step on the ladder to important appointments.

"Looking at past statistics," she said, "these avenues are closed to women. But another avenue has opened. Daughters and widows of politician have followed in their fathers' and husbands' footsteps.

"Even with this background they have a tough time getting a nomination. But they have had the chance to learn to think and talk politics. They know the ropes and this is of tremendous value."

In the United States, a good example of political awareness is the wife of Alabama Governor George Wallace, Democratic nominee for the position being vacated by her husband. And in Atlanta, Mrs. Frank Welchel, 41, widow of a former Georgia congressman, has announced she will be a candidate for governor of the state in September's Democratic primary. "We can't let Alabama get ahead of us," Mrs. Welchel is quoted as saying.

We want more of this kind of interest in politics among the women of Canada. Our present parliament is a tired group of administrators, scarred by the strife of too many election campaigns, too much acrimony, too much talk and too little action in the critical period facing the nation. With more women in the House the country would stand to benefit from their particular viewpoint. Canada needs a fresh outlook on Parliament Hill, and a few more women in the House would afford it.

The Creative Arts

How much value do Canadians place on culture and the arts? Quite a lot, judging by the fact that Toronto Mayor Philip Givens expects the $100,000 needed to purchase the Henry Moore bronze sculpture "Three-Way Piece No. 2" will be raised in a short time.

Councillors originally turned down the strange, anvil-shaped sculpture but the city is now acquiring it through private subscription. Now the British pavilion at Expo 67 is making a bid to borrow the piece for display at the big Montreal exhibition next year.

This is an indication, if any is needed, that no matter what the cost, the eccentricity of the Moore work (now retitled "The Archer") and the fame of its creator are sufficient to assure it a lasting place in the world of art. That much, particularly a status of growing significance in that world.

Meanwhile there are other signs of Canada's growing emergence as a country to be reckoned with in relation to the creative arts. That much of its talent in this sphere must be subsidized is an unhappy fact of life, but nonetheless the country benefits greatly from the goodwill and other intangible dividends that accrue.

The Canada Council, for example, has announced grants totalling $265,912 for music, ballet and opera. The Banff School of Fine Arts gets $6,000 to assist with the cost of an opera and ballet orchestra to tour in western Canada and the United States.

The National Youth Orchestra receives $12,000 for a training session and teachers' seminar in Toronto in August.

Other grants will enable Canadian groups to perform overseas. The Hart House Orchestra of Toronto for instance, gets $13,700 for performances at the Aldeburgh and Bergen festivals in Norway and for a Scandinavian tour.

The largest grant to go to two groups which are in the forefront of Canada's modern cultural tradition. They are the Canadian Opera Company, which receives $130,000 for its 1966-67 season, and Les Feux-Follets of Montreal ($85,000), the folk-dancing group, which has made such an impact here and abroad in the few short years of its existence.

Canada may take pride in these and other groups which help maintain our cultural tradition, rise in the face of public indifference and a society that is geared more to the harsh facts of economic life than it is to the development of the creative arts.

Strictly Personal

Cheating Only the Computer

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Cheating is probably as old as testing, and certainly much older than any school system. The contemporaries cheated in exams, and I am sure my father's did, and his father's, too.

There is, however an interesting and significant difference between cheating in the past and cheating today. In the past, it was the poor pupils who cheated, the ones who were afraid of failing unless they were given the proper answers by the brighter pupils.

Today it is mostly those near the top of their classes who do the most cheating. It is not the dumb students, but the smart ones who need to seem smarter in order to compete for stiffer college entrance exams.

And not only is cheating more prevalent among the brighter students; it is also more persistent in the better classes, and in the better schools — for those are the ones bucking for college, where the pressure for high grades is most relentless and severe.

It would be easy to deplore this as a growing moral problem, but I don't happen to think it represents a lowering of moral standards. Rather, it seems to me more of an indictment of educational and social system which places far too much emphasis on grades and exams, and too little stress on personal and individual considerations.

The youngsters who cheat are not so much rebelling against the morality of testing as against its irrelevance. They don't believe that the tests test very much of value, and they are quite right: what gives anybody to cheating — even among bright and ethical students — is the feeling that they are being pushed too hard (mostly by overambitious parents) to get a high mark rather than to understand their subjects.

With the vast and unprecedented numbers going on to college today, there is not enough time or talent available to judge the candidates' capabilities on much besides a computer basis: in pop the answers, and out come the rankings. And personality and morality simply cannot flourish in so mechanistic an environment: who can consider it a crime to drop a machine it acknowledges and cares nothing about you?

The mass-production method works well for cars and such, but rather less well for people. And this is particularly true in the mass-production system of exams Sioes not call for comprehension of a subject, but merely for memorization of names, dates, formulas, recipes and all the rest of what Whitehead has so aptly termed "inert ideas."

If the tests were left by the brighter students to be meaningful indices of their relative capabilities, and if the social pressures were relaxed, cheating among this superior group would drop abruptly. Until then, what we have is a crisis in competition, not in personal morality.

To Your Good Health

Care of Enlarged Heart Depends Upon Cause

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: You have never written concerning the meaning of an enlarged heart and its main causes. I don't smoke or drink. Is there any special way to take care of an enlarged heart? I am 65 and still working. — Mrs. M. E. T.

Dear Lady, you must have been somewhere else on the days that I have discussed enlarged heart. It is also described and discussed in my booklet "How to Take Care of Your Heart," which may be obtained by sending 20 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

An enlarged heart is just what the words imply. The organ is bigger than normal. The principal causes are high blood pressure; disease or defects of the valves (often due to rheumatic fever); or certain Vitamin B. deficiencies.

Whatever the specific cause, the heart is laboring under more difficulty that forces it to work harder to accomplish its task of pumping blood. Under such circumstances, the heart muscle thickens and enlarges (just as other muscles tend to enlarge under continued stress.

An enlarged heart is not necessarily a weak one. It may have enlarged so successfully that it tembles and it's ready able to serve you well. It is even possible for the original cause of the enlargement to have been corrected in some way, so that although the enlargement remains it does not grow any greater. In other instances it may actually reduce in size.

What to do about an enlarged heart — if anything — depends on the cause of the enlargement. In some instances limiting the amount of physical exertion, to keep the demand for circulation within the limits which the heart can support without too much strain, might be the only requirement.

In the case of high blood pressure, cutting down on adequate rest, diet, weight reduction and certain medications are in order. There is no do-it-you-self method of evaluating an enlarged heart. Size is best determined by X-ray of the chest. You must leave that to your doctor, and you must look to him, consequently, for counsel on what to do for your heart, if it requires any special care.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it any use to give a "Pep test" to a person who had a hysterectomy 26 years ago? And what is malignant hypertension? It sounds like cancer to me. — K. M.

First question: Possibly yes. The exact form of the operation and just what was removed from what left in, would have a bearing. Second question: Malignant hypertension has nothing to do with cancer. It is a severe form of high blood pressure.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can syphilis be transmitted by kissing? Does it show up in a blood test later? — H. D.

Yes, especially if there is some break in the membranes in the mouth. It would show up in a blood test.

Dear Dr. Molner: Are pernicious anemia and pellagra the same? — M. B.

No. Pellagra results from a lack of niacin, and is corrected by making up for the deficiency. Pernicious anemia is the result of the system being unable to create a material which is necessary for proper production of red blood cells. It cannot be cured — but giving regular doses of Vitamin B12 makes it possible for the body to operate normally anyway.

Tasteless!

Ottawa Journal

The Canadian Post Office without a trace of shame, admits that it never thought of giving flavor to the new stamp glue.

"Peppermint and licorice flavors," we are told, were considered in planning the components of the 'new glue,' says the PO magazine, Postmark.

And why not, pray? Because, the magazine continues, "There is no difficulty in finding varying pastes as the glue is completely tasteless."

There goes the Government again, taking the flavor out of life.

Majority Taste in Entertainment

Louis Dudek in the Montreal Gazette

Sometimes I'm just fit to hate mankind — like now.

I get so incensed at the burlies of popular taste, the "tyranny of the majority" that governs in the media, the entertainments, all the arts except those that need no audience.

I have just sat through one of the best, one of the most moving films I have seen in years and years. The Shop on the Main Street playing at the Classic Place Ville Marie. The theatre was half empty. The film will probably not last another week in this city.

Boccaccio whatever-it-is, on the other hand, monopolized the screen for months on end. And I have seen queues a block long stand in winter weather, week after week, to see a nymphomaniac go through several amorous affairs, or a man beat wild with a razor by a psychotic female.

These are "fundamental entertainments" in Montreal. Ireland once called them, and people will always flock to them instead of the rare experiences that might free them from boredom and refresh their lives.

One might think that the average man would be ashamed — to buy Playboy or line up for Darling. It's so obvious a confession of failure, a search for a substitute, where there can be no substitute. I am not opposed to sex, certainly not to sex in art, where that is the theme and where what we say about it is the issue, not the experience of sex itself. (This is the simple difference between pornography and art: pornography is a substitute for normal sex, while art is feeling and reflection about life, not a substitute for life. The emotions in a book like Lady Chatterley's Lover are about the meaning of sex, not the emotions of sex itself).

The trend of present-day entertainments is toward pornography, and toward increasing directness and openness in this design. You can see it in the new type of Italian magazine, in the films and of course in books. What is it people want? A sex experience in a movie? In a book? Surely this is so absurd that even the dull average audience will in the end turn away from the dish.

Let's hope he does, and turns instead to movies like The Shop on Main Street. This is a Czech film produced by Jan Kadar and Elmar Klos in the conservative mode of social realism; it begins as comedy and ends with a relentless pace to overwhelming tragedy. I was moved to tears by this Czech film. It is really a very fine human document.

What makes it excellent is the lack of melodrama, the lack of any stereotyped good and evil, although the subject is Nazism and persecution — and its simple truth of depiction, directed to character, setting, and moral questioning. Of course, since it avoids melodrama it also misses tragedy in the real sense, because the characters are quite commonplace and their suffering cannot be raised to the same compassion. The result is pathos, which is the most that entertainment calls are able to achieve; but it is high pathos, and it is very honest.

Something like this, I thought that communism, art, like all extreme democratic art, must always fail somehow because it refuses to accept any nobility except in general and the average. And yet we know that the general and the average is what inspires us down. The trivial weighs us down. (In a country like Canada the artist always becomes paranoid to escape from the trivial.) If we could rise above our ordinary trivial selves we might escape from our degraded entertainments. But these entertainments, even at their best, will not let us escape.

Ontario's Northern Coastline

Dept. of Lands and Forests

In recent years the Province of Ontario has been reserving wilderness areas — lands with unique natural features — that will be permanently protected from human exploitation. The largest and most recent of these is Cape Henrietta Maria, the extreme south-eastern tip of Ontario separating Hudson and James Bays.

This area, which was discovered about 30 years after Henry Hudson's voyage to these seas in 1610, was apparently named by the wife of Charles I, the reigning King of England. Today it must be known to few but the experienced explorers. Although only 800 airmiles north of Toronto its out-of-the-way location has isolated it from most of the sea and air traffic to the Arctic from southern civilization. Life, as a substitute for life. The emotions in a book like Lady Chatterley's Lover are about the meaning of sex, not the emotions of sex itself).

Typical of a large part of Ontario's sea coast, Cape Henrietta Maria is in the zone of southern Arctic tundra in the world, is low, flat and still rising from the sea. Its geology suggested it following the last ice age in North America. Ice is still a predominant feature here as Hudson Bay is frozen about nine months of each year and often much ice is left around the cape until early August.

The Arctic character of this region is also apparent in its vegetation. There are no trees; willows and other shrubs are seldom more than a few feet high in height and smaller plants are limited to the hardiest species. Similarly, the kinds of animals which inhabit the cape are more characteristic of the Arctic than of temperate Ontario.

During the summer months, when Hudson Bay is more or less free of ice, there is an unusual variety of animal life. Polar bears resting along the shore find the cape and some adjacent islands particularly attractive. Here one may see a large biologists of the Department of Lands and Forests studying some of these animals. The largest breeding colony of snow geese or wedge as it is known, in the world — 25,000 birds, is near the base of the cape and Canada geese and several species of ducks nest in the grassy, water-logged plains inland from the sea. Herds of caribou migrate across the tundra and feed on seaweed along the tidal flats.

During the winter, when bitter northwest winds blow off Hudson Bay, the cape is abandoned by most of the birds and mammals. Those that remain are hardy species and hunters wolves, subsist on carrion, and other small animals. The carnivorous birds of the forest to the south where the snow cover is not heavily packed and they can obtain protection from the wind. The marine mammals leave for deeper water where there are always leads or openings in the ice or for the North Atlantic, which does not freeze. The waterfowl migrate to the south, in the case of snow geese to the Gulf of Mexico. Enroute they are hunted by Indians from James Bay and sportsmen throughout large areas of eastern North America.

Cape Henrietta Maria with its animal life is a unique feature of Ontario. It is being reserved for scientific study and for future generations of citizens interested in primitive, unspoiled landscapes.

"Instant Forests" Planned

Dept. of Lands and Forests

A new forest is about to spring up on 24,200 acres of unproductive Crown land in Northern Ontario. In a few weeks, between the end of May and the end of August, 27 million tiny trees will appear in 16 Forest Districts (with a limited number also appearing in Algonquin); the result of a revolutionary discovery which for the first time in history will lead to a series of tests and field trials.

A new challenge was created for the Department of Lands and Forests when a method had been found by which forest wastes where natural regeneration and conventional planting methods in the rough terrain were not successful.

Then, a member of the Lands and Forests research staff had an idea which would give the seedlings a chance to establish roots before winter, which would be protected from wind and temperature changes, and which would supply three-inch-long tubes, partially filled with soil and planted with the seedlings, to the field (by aeroplane, red pine and jack pine). After the seed germinated and grew for a few weeks in the four to six weeks, the tubed seedlings could be placed in the ground by aeroplane.

Department foresters were willing to give it a try. Before the spring thaw, they received a tube bed to be found which would be durable, moist tureproof and economical. After various trials, a satisfactory product was obtained from a manufacturer.

The tubes, three-inches-long, one-eighteenth of an inch in diameter, are split down one side to allow for growing room and will eventually be cast off by the young trees, like old snake skins. They can be filled with soil, and the seedlings planted, ready for seed germination — by one man at the rate of 1,200 an hour. Then, one man can fly and plant them with a specially designed planting stick at the rate of 250 an hour.

This year's big test, of a unique tree-growing technique, will determine whether this process or regular seeding procedures is best for the various areas.

The tubes are placed in flats for convenience; each holding 100 tubes. Twenty-seven flats, or 40,000 trees, are housed in one portable green house. The temperature is green house is covered with plastic to control temperature and humidity. A mixture of peat moss, vermiculite, and provision is made for adequate light, moisture and nutrients.

The areas to be planted are usually clearcut or burned, and, therefore, by the hearing covered with slash and debris. As the seedling must be placed in contact with the earth, the area is mechanically cleared from the planting site. A heavy crawler tractor with a brush rake drums filled with concrete and tube chamber, is supplied with three-inch-long tubes, partially filled with soil and planted with the seedlings (red pine, jack spruce, red pine and jack pine). After the seed germinated and grew for a few weeks in the four to six weeks, the tubed seedlings could be placed in the ground by aeroplane.

promise to add civilians to the 10-man ruling directory.

In a statement broadcast by Saigon radio, Ky was quoted as saying:

"The government of Viet Nam has decided to enlarge the national leadership committee to include representatives of mass organizations, religions and political parties.

"The national leadership committee will make immediate contact with mass organizations, religions and political parties to define the methods of participation and enlarge scope of the committee."

Government sources said it was possible the junta would be doubled-seating at civilian representative for every military member.

The attack against the consulate took place about the time the grenade in Saigon severely wounded Thich Thien Minh, deputy chairman of the Buddhist Institute and head of its youth movement. His youthful supporters reacted angrily with more anti-American, anti-government acts.

Minh was taken to a hospital, where doctors said he was in a coma.

Monks declared the attack "must have been the work of governmenl henchmen."

Thich Tam Chau, chairman of the Buddhist Institute, did not say what effect the incident might have on the negotiations. Both he and Minh had taken part in the talks with Ky and other junta members Tuesday.

Tam Chau is a leader of the moderate wing of monks, while Minh is the principal lieutenant of Thich Tri Quang, leader of the Buddhist struggle movement in Hue and elsewhere in the northern provinces.

ONE-WAY RIDE — Three men will climb into a Cessna 172 at Baldwin, Ont., but only one will come back in the plane. Jumpmaster Barry Brand (left) and student Brian O'Rourke will step out at 3,000 feet and float down under parachutes. Clubs are making the increasingly popular sport easier to try. They lend a parachute for the early instructional period and the student supplies helmet, boots and coveralls. (CP Photo)

First Parachute Jump Always Nerve-Wracking

By CRAIG BIRCHALL

BALDWIN, Ont. (CP) — The four-passenger Cessna skims to 70 m.p.h. and levels out at 3,000 feet over this dot on the map south of Lake Simcoe.

The air whistles past the doorway as the starboard side of the high-winged aircraft. The door has been removed.

It's your first parachute jump and, despite Jumpmaster Barry Brand's assurances that all is well, you're as nervous as every student who has gone before.

You try to remember everything you learned in nine hours of classroom instruction. There's practically no chance the static line attached to the aircraft will fail to pull your chute open properly. But you still review the procedure for opening your reserve chute in case something should go wrong.

You step out of the doorway, grabbing the plane's strut with your hands, placing one foot on a step and the other on a wheel that has been frozen into immobility by the plane's brake.

At the command "Go" from the jumpmaster you jump backwards, your back arched and your hands and legs spreadeagled. You keep your eye on the jumpmaster while counting a six - second count: Arch thousand, look thousand, reach thousand, pull thousand, five thousand, six thousand.

IMPACT IS SLIGHT

You go through the motions of pulling the ripcord but it's only a dummy. The static line does the job.

You feel yourself floating toward earth, experiencing for the first time the serenity that until now has been only words. And you get some idea of what has attracted the thousands of other Canadians to jumping since the country's first club was founded in St. Catharines, Ont., in 1947.

At about 100 feet you hear instructor Hugh Fellowes on the ground shouting to you to put your feet together for landing. Moments later you bump down with about the impact of a jump from a tabletop.

This is the first of 10 static-line jumps you have to make as a student before graduating to the stage where they let you pull the ripcord yourself.

It's also the relatively inexpensive period of jumping. That's because the Parachute Association of Toronto lends you the chute and you need only a helmet, sturdy boots and coveralls.

You take a rigid department of transport medical examination and pay $30 for the intensive training course (which covers everything from the history of jumping to free and water landings).

BUY INSURANCE

There's also $12 to the Parachute Association of Canada, a fee that includes insurance against liability — to somebody's car, for example.

Before you're allowed to jump you must write an examination and pass with at least 85 per cent.

Each jump from less than 3,000 feet—the height set for trainees—costs $2.50. It's $3 for the 3,000-5,000 level and $3.50 from 7,200 feet, the height usually used by experienced jumpers.

Some time after your third jump the club takes a vote to decide whether you have the proper attitude — responsibility and co-operation — the majority decides whether you may become a member. The fee is ordinarily $12 but your first year membership is $6.

Later, if you decide to take up the sport in earnest, you can figure on laying out at least $200 for good second-hand equipment and as much as $700 for the best imported gear.

That includes main canopy and back pack, reserve chute, helmet, jump suit, jump boots, altimeter and stopwatch, packing equipment, goggles, gloves and logbook.

By this time you should be ready for delayed ripcord pulls and supervised free falls gradually lengthening until you have 60 seconds before your chute opens.

And that may lead, in time, to acrobatics (carrying out manoeuvres while falling) and "relative work" (hooking up with other jumpers, passing batons and even taking pictures during free fall).

The 34-day-old strike is costing the shipping industry an estimated $1,000,000 a day.

In Montreal Tuesday, Jean-Claude Delorme, secretary and general counsel for the 1967 Montreal world's fair told a parliamentary committee the strike is having a "very serious" effect on construction of some fair pavilions.

An ILA spokesman Tuesday said the union has sent a telegram to Labor Minister Nicholson urging him to re-examine the recommendations resulting from earlier investigations of the retirement and pensions situation of longshoremen.

V.O.N. Body Hears Report

The monthly meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held at the Y.M.C.A.

Miss Dorothy Connors gave the nurse's report, stating that two half days were spent at both Corbyville and Douglas Atkins Schools.

Following the resignation of Mr. Reeve, Mr. Kent has taken over as treasurer.

Mrs. Hall gave a report on the proposed "meals on wheels" project. V.O.N. nurses attended a seminar at Napanee.

Miss Mary Ellen McElrath, a graduate of Hamilton General Hospital School of Nursing and of McGill University in public health, worked with the Belleville V.O.N. for a short period during the last few weeks.

TO TOUR FRANCE

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Dumont-Fresette, public relations officer for the CBC's French language network, has started on a tour of France and Belgium to drum up interest in Canada's centennial celebrations. Mr. Dumont-Fresette will outline to European audiences the attractions Canada will offer visitors in 1967.

Down Go Skirts Word From Paris

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Down go skirts.

Those three words from Paris and New York today caused surprise, gloom and defiance in London, original home of the thigh-high hemline.

"I just don't believe it," said Alice Pollock, a young designer. "It's all a terrible mistake."

In Paris a spokesman at Jean Patou said:

"Skirts are going to lengthen in the autumn. The short-short skirt is as dead as mutton."

British fashion writers reported that Yves St. Laurent too is hitting at the death of the shortie. They quoted him as saying that fashion must be both elegant and respectable.

In New York, Jacques Tiffeau, a French designer who is celebrating 15 years in the United States, is showing tweed skirts for autumn several inches below the knee.

Said Jean Rook, one of London's brightest fashion writers:

"It's more than a drop. It's an avalanche."

If there is going to be a return to Dior's old new look, it won't catch Miss Rook napping. A year ago she predicted long, long skirts were coming.

If milady does embrace the long-long skirt for autumn and winter it could cause chaos here, where manly designers are banking on skirts going even higher.

"It would be fatal if hemlines would drop," said Miss Pollock. "But I don't believe British girls would accept it. Every girl I know is either wearing mini-skirts or dieting to get to them."

James Wedge, who does a flourishing business in the way-above-the-knee skirt, said: "The long skirt report is terrible. I won't accept it. I shall go on selling short skirts."

IODE Will Retain Name

MONTREAL (CP)—Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire will retain its 66-year-old name despite a recent movement to update it on grounds the empire is non-existent. It was stated Tuesday at the group's annual meeting here.

"We shall continue to urge use of the initials IODE rather than the full name," Mrs. D. W. McGibbon, of Toronto, past national president, said.

Decision to retain the name followed a survey by a committee planning for the future of the order.

Retention of the name was favored, she said, on the grounds that the 20,000-member organization had already created a world image under the name IODE Canada, and that a suitable substitute incorporating the initials could not be found.

The order has been using IODE as its official name ever since the 1958 annual meeting in Halifax.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN ROBERT LANE

Lane – Jamieson

Rev. George Ambury was the officiating minister at the ceremony in Redeersville United Church when Barbara Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jamieson of R. R. 1, Cafrynn Place, was united in marriage to John Robert Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lane of Belleville. The wedding took place at 2:00 p.m. on Saturday, May 21, 1966, with Mrs. George Ambury as pianist and Mrs. June Reid as soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length sheath gown of pure silk chiffon over taffeta, with bateau neckline and deep V back. The bodice and elbow length sleeves were enhanced with Chantilly lace and sequins of the same lace decorated the skirt and train. A matching headdress held her veil and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Elizabeth Simpson, maid of honor, wore a floor-length sheath gown of pure silk in turquoise color, trimmed with Chantilly lace. She carried a bouquet of pink 'mums. The bridesmaids, Miss Linda Lane and Miss Janet Jamieson were dresses similar to that of the maid of honor, but in a berry pink shade. Their flowers were turquoise tinted 'mums.

Kenneth Alexander attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Mike Bradin of Ottawa and Dennis Lane of Belleville.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Lane will live at 271 John Street, Belleville.

Successful Living
Breaks TV Pattern
Now Enjoys Hobbies

DEAR DORIS: I am retired and loving it. But it wasn't always that way.

It suddenly occurred to me as I watched television one night that this was getting to be quite a pattern. I told myself there was nothing wrong with just sitting and being entertained (more or less), but when I thought how active I used to be, I began to feel some discontent.

There was a part of my mind and my hand that were not being used at all.

Why wasn't I organizing my great pile of snapshots — a job I had promised myself to do when I retired? What happened to all those letters I was going to write, to "keep friendships mended"? And there were other things.

DORIS CLARK

But I needed a place to spread out; otherwise, getting out the snaps, or the stationery, working on them, putting them back, was a discouragement in itself.

I picked the one empty wall in my apartment and had my nephew build in a table-bench-desk, complete with storage space. Now I am customarily selective when I switch on the TV. Occupation is keen. And I am having fun with my hobbies. — SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS YOUNG.

DEAR SEVENTY-FIVE: Good for you! Physical arrangements are often the key to success with a project and something we neglect far too often. Happy hobbying!

DEAR DORIS: We have been invited to a "dress optional" dinner and dance. At this affair, I plan to wear a street length lace dress with matching three-quarter coat.

Could you please tell me, do you remove this coat for the dinner, or is it considered a part of the dress, and removed for dancing, as a jacket is? — R.C.

DEAR R.C.: If the three-quarter coat is of matching lace, and not too warm, it would be better to wear it for the dinner and remove it for dancing.

DEAR DORIS: I'm 13, grade eight, and am quite popular with boys. I'm average in school and enjoy myself on the whole. I find that I can sit and talk with a boy more easily than with some girls and not feel out of place.

Most girls think I'm a flirt, but I'm uncertain. My girl friend thinks I'm very lucky to be able to be so carefree. Would you say it's jealousy on the girls' parts or flirtations on my part? I want to know if I'm making a mistake or if it is quite normal. — A SHALL-OR-SHAN'T-BE FLIRT.

DEAR SHALL OR SHANT: From where sonte Timid Tessies sit you are a lucky teen if you are carefree and comfortable with the boys.

But there's a might of difference between flirting and friendliness. The dictionary says to flirt is to "trifle amorously"; it smacks of insincerity, flippess, self-display. There is a kindness, a giving, to friendship, which labels it as sincere.

Which describes you?

DEAR DORIS: Please send me the name of the diet booklet which list 2,000 foods and their calorie content. — VICKI.

DEAR VICKI: I'd be glad to — but where are you?

To FATTY AND SKINNY: You ask for information, but gave no name, address or stamped envelope. Write in again, enclosing 20 cents and a five-cent-stamped envelope, and request the two leaflets, "Be Figure Perfect" and "Chart for Curves."

Revive Art Of Tapestry In Montreal

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Modern architecture is producing a revival of the art of tapestry and two Montreal women are in the forefront.

Micheline Beauchemin and Mariette Rousseau - Vermette have developed the art form in different directions, but the inspiration of both will brighten the Centre of Performing Arts in Ottawa when that building is completed in 1968.

Miss Beauchemin, whose concept of tapestries as a "flexible walls" is still in the experimental stages, has been awarded the commission for curtains for the opera hall.

Mrs. Rousseau-Vermette, who works in wool, will provide curtains for the theatre.

The artists were selected by national judges.

Miss Beauchemin says her design will be woven in Japan because the Japanese have more experience in curtain making and "labor and material is cheaper."

BLENDS COLORS

A company in Huntingdon, Que., will weave Mrs. Rousseau-Vermette's design.

"I thought it was a wonderful opportunity to show this could be done—and well done—right here in Canada," she said.

"Purples going into blues on the right-side and purples going into yellows on the left, with blue closing on green," is the way Mrs. Rousseau - Vermette described her abstract design in wool.

Miss Beauchemin has chosen fibre glass, aluminum and acrylic for her curtains.

"It is a sculptural, three-dimensional design," she said. "It has optical effects, but it isn't op art. It will change with the lighting and the angle of vision."

Miss Beauchemin said it was difficult to find the colors she used in her design, which is also abstract, as color depended upon the lighting as well.

"Blues and green, reds, pink and mauve, generally, but the curtain can be any one of those colors."

STUDIED STAINED GLASS

Interest in this type of effect arises from Miss Beauchemin's early interest in stained glass windows. After attending Ecole Beaux-Arts here, she spent five years in Europe—two in France studying stained glass techniques in Chartres.

"While in Chartres I started doing embroidery on my own and sales in Canada and Europe became more aware of wools. But what interested me most was the effect light has on color for a more vibrant texture."

She said she turned to tapestry because contracts for stained glass windows were rare for churches and "very limiting."

The artist has work in Malber Gallery and Associates and in Montreal's Place des Arts. Two of her tapestries are to be displayed in an interior decorator. She travelled through Europe "to see what was being done" during the Museum of Quebec in Quebec City.

Mrs. Rousseau-Vermette, who took her training at Laval classes in Quebec City and studied textiles in San Francisco, spent two years in an interior decorator. She travelled through Europe "to see what was being done" during the Museum of Quebec in Quebec City.

The young mother of two has her studio in Ste. Adele in the Laurentians.

Her work hangs in Quebec House in New York and in Paris, in the National Gallery and in several embassies in Ottawa, in the University of British Columbia and in many buildings in Quebec.

U.C.W. Meetings

STONE CHURCH U.C.W.

The May meeting of Stone Church U.C.W. was held at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Twiddy on May 25. A well prepared devotion was given by Mrs. Omar Chisholm, basing her thoughts on Jesus' prayer in John 17, Wonder, Reverence and Adoration. She explained the scripture lesson in Psalm 8.

Mrs. Everett read the ten Beatitudes for friends of the aged.

Mrs. J. Chisholm read and explained "My Mother's Dairy." This was followed by a discussion on the book and the life of Job.

The business was conducted by the president, Mrs. E. Demorest. The hostess, Mrs. Twiddy, served a lunch and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

MR. AND MRS. ALLAN W. CLEARY

Cleary – Cook

Rev. Roy Vessey officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in College Hill United Church when Judith Eleanor Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cook, Belleville was united in marriage to Allan Wilson Cleary, son of Mrs. George McKillop, Belleville R. R. 4 and the late Mr. Wilson Cleary.

Mrs. L. Blakely who presided at the organ rendered traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Thomas Hipchey as he contributed appropriate selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length sheath bridal gown of nylon organza over corded taffeta featuring a bolero type bodice enhanced with French guipure lace which carried forward to the short sleeves. The back of the dress was highlighted with a detachable chapel train bordered with guipure lace. A four-tier scalloped veil flowed from a headdress of seed pearls and crystals.

Miss Gail Richardson as maid of honor wore a sheath styled turquoise gown with an Empire bodice outlined with velvet ribbon. The short sleeves were trimmed with white cut-out lace and matching turquoise ribbon. The bridesmaids Miss Sally Cook, Miss Terry Cook, both sisters of the bride and Miss Pat Cleary sister of the bridegroom were styled identically to the maid of honor but in pink shades.

Chicken Salad Filling: one 7-oz. can chicken chopped (or 1 cup ground cooked chicken), 2 tablespoons sweet pickle, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise. Egg Salad Filling: 4 eggs hard cooked and finely chopped, 6 ripe olives, chopped, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon curry powder, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise. Ham Salad Filling: one 4-oz. can deviled ham (or ¾ cup ground cooked ham), 2 tablespoons minced green pepper, 1 teaspoon minced green onion, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise.

With razor-sharp knife trim top and bottom crusts from standard sandwich loaf. Slice it lengthwise to 5 slices approximately ¼ inch thick. On your bread board spread bottom slice with cream white. Put on second slice and spread it with Chicken Salad Filling. Cover with third slice and spread it with Egg Salad Filling. Cover with fourth slice and spread it with Ham Salad Filling. Cover with top slice and press down gently. (Note: If desired side and end crusts may be trimmed off but if did not.) Spread top and sides with Cream White Frosting: Cream together 10-oz. white cream cheese and 2 tablespoons milk until of soft spreading consistency. Cheese should be at room temperature. Garnish top of loaf with double or triple lengthwise rows of thin radish slices tucked on edge into Cheese Frosting. Cover with tent of foil and chill overnight. Serve on long platter garnished with watercress or sprigs of parsley. Slice with razor-sharp knife. Serve on tea plates with forks.

See tomorrow for Red Fruit and Short Jelly Ring to serve with Party Sandwich Loaf.

PARTY SANDWICH LOAF

There should be two of me, I cannot get around to all of the exciting places I should be where lovely food is being served. But I do have wonderful scouts.

My sister Peady attended as end-of-the-season Y.W.C.A. executive meeting. She said the luncheon table was beautiful — the two standouts being a Party Sandwich Loaf and Red Fruit and Nut Jelly Ring.

Both of these items should be made in advance to be served thoroughly chilled so our hostesses will welcome them with open arms. I will give the Party Sandwich Loaf today and the Red Fruit and Nut Jelly Ring tomorrow.

WEDNESDAY
Dinner Menu
by Mary Moore

Braised Short Ribs of Beef with Vegetables; Mashed Potatoes; Tossed Leaf Lettuce, Radish and Watercress Salad with Russian Dressing; Rhubarb Pie (See Tues.); Tea.

PARTY SANDWICH LOAF

In three small bowls mix together the three fillings:

To clean crazy stains off carpets, apply trichlorethylene with a paper towel and rub. Do this several times until the grease is transferred to the towel.

Trichlorethylene is available at drugstores and is preferable to carbon tetrachloride, whose fumes are toxic, says Mrs. Stevenson.

Then clean with lig. detergent to 1 cup warm water and dry with a soft cloth.

Grease on wallpaper can be removed with a paste of fullers earth (drugstore) and trichlorethylene, applied thickly. Let dry and brush off.

Grease comes off walls with a mixture of fullers earth and cleaning fluid mixed to a paste, brooking off when dry.

Ovens can be cleaned by pouring half a cup of ammonia into a saucer. Set it in a warm oven, close the door and leave overnight. Wash with soap.

For refrigerators, clean with a mixture of 2 tbsp. baking soda in a quart of luke warm water.

WEDDING

FRASER — CRAWFORD

Hazel Marlene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Crawford and Clarence Robert Joseph son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fraser were united in marriage by Rev. A. S. McConnell of St. Andrew's Anglican Church on Friday May 27, 1966.

The bride wore a navy suit with powder blue accessories and she was attended by Miss Gena McCurdy who wore a white suit with white accessories. The groom was attended by Mr. Allan Whan.

The wedding reception was held in the dining room at Johnny's Restaurant, Belleville.

The Experts Say
Prompt Attack Makes Cleaning Chore Simpler

By ANNE MASON

EDMONTON (CP)—Attack a stain when it occurs, or shortly after, and you'll make your toughest cleaning chore much simpler.

"It's a lot easier to get off surface dirt and stains," says Mrs. K. J. Stevenson, natural-home service director at Northwestern Utilities Ltd., a firm supplying natural gas to the Edmonton area.

Armed with a trick or two, a few chemicals and household standbys, even the most stubborn stains can be removed, Mrs. Stevenson says.

A "good, all-purpose cleaner containing a mild amount of ammonia is indispensable.

Here are some of her cleaning hints:

To get stubborn water stains and rings off wood floors and furniture, try a good furniture cream or emulsified oil first. Make several applications rubbing with the grain.

If this does not work, place a clean, thick blotter over the rings and press with a warm iron. Repeat. Or try another method — moistening a cut, raw potato sprinkled with baking soda and rub.

To get water spots off shellacked floors, rub lightly with steel wool. Apply several coats of hair and hair mixture of shellac and rubbing alcohol.

ALCOHOL STAINS

To remove alcohol stains and cigarette burns from wood, try furniture cream. If this doesn't work, use a paste made of rottenstone and linseed oil rubbed with the grain. Polish with a clean cloth and repeat. Rottenstone is available from a druggists, instead of linseed oil.

If the stain has penetrated, the wood will have to be refinished.

To keep oiled wood in good condition, apply boiled (not too hot) linseed oil with a soft cloth, let stand for an hour. Rub off residue with a soft, lintless cloth. Do this about four times a year. A furniture or lemon oil can be used between applications.

Film on furniture from a polish build-up can be removed from panelled, varnished and oiled furniture with a mixture of 1 qt. hot water, 2 tbsp. linseed oil and 1 tbsp. turpentine.

Dampen a cloth with this mixture and rub it into the polish, being careful not to soak the wood.

White spots caused by heat or water on unwaxed furniture may be treated by a mixture of 1 tbsp. vinegar, 3 tbsp. olive oil and ½ tbsp. turpentine. Let stand for a few minutes then wipe with cloth.

USE STIFF BRUSH

To clean carpets, apply with a stiff brush a mixture of 1 qt. warm water, 1 tsp. vinegar and 1 tsp. liquid detergent. Leave to dry and vacuum.

Emphasis Being Placed On Needs of Individuals

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Greater emphasis is being placed on the specific needs of the individual in the current educational work of the IODE, Mrs. J. A. Turner, educational secretary for the organization, said Tuesday.

"There hasn't been any drop in the traditional work carried on by the IODE in education but chapters seem to be adjusting to special work involving individual needs," she said in an interview during the organization's annual meeting here.

"Paying transportation and buying additional text books—perhaps for a student who is partially-helped by the government—are examples of this.

"And right across Canada, wherever workshops for retarded adults have been set up, members are devoting working hours, sometimes to teach cooking or sewing, for instance.

"Night school and adult classes have been sponsored in a wide range of subjects including millinery and flower arranging."

EMPHASIS ON ARTS

Mrs. Turner said the emphasis on special education included the arts. IODE members were doing more and more in the area. Symphony tickets were bought for children, art and hobby fairs were sponsored, museums were visited, and children's theatres were organized.

And assistance to vocational and technical schools had increased. Tutoring fees were often met. A drop-out clinic was helped by one chapter.

Mrs. Turner reported a record amount of $286,293 spent on educational services in 1965.

Of this total, $167,157 was given to 2,108 college students in scholarships, bursaries, grants and loans. Another $11,643 was spent on prizes and awards.

The grand total spent by the order on education during the year was $358,454. This included the First and Second World War memorial expenditures of $63,208 and the $5,764 spent by the Commonwealth relations service.

Mrs. Donald M. Brown, war memorial secretary, reported eight postgraduate scholarships were presented last year.

Church Groups

ST. MARK'S W.A.

The May meeting of St. Mark's Anglican Church Women's Association, Bonarlaw, was held in the Sunday School rooms of the Church, with Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Cracknell as hostesses.

Mrs. Barlow opened the meeting with the devotional exercises as arranged in the Living Message. Mrs. Cracknell read the Scripture.

The Dorcas secretary reported that a bale for Wabuden, Manitoba, in the Diocese of Brandon, is to be packed in Trenton on June 1st. Mrs. Warwick, diocese Dorcas secretary has asked for 36 layettes. These are to be sent in the bale which is made up of good used clothing and new materials and also Christmas presents.

The usual sum of money will be sent to Mrs. Godden for the hospital fund. The covering for the church kitchen floor is to be the responsibility of Mrs. Burkitt and Mrs. Jones. A tea is to be held in June. Mrs. R. McKenzie donated a baby's sweater set to be sent in the bale.

The reports of the Diocesan Annual meeting were read by Mrs. A. V. Brown and Mrs. W. J. Barlow.

Ordained Women in UC To Have Place in Merger

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The United Church will stand on its insistence that ordained women be assured of a place in any merger between the United and Anglican churches, Rt. Rev. E. M. Howse, moderator of the United Church of Canada, said Tuesday.

In an interview, Dr. Howse said the United Church will not consider any union that would eliminate women in the ordained ministry.

"We are not going to enter into any union which will leave any section of its ministers outside," he said.

He said that although the question of ordained women may not have been discussed in union talks with the Anglicans it is "understood" that union will include them.

Dr. Howse is attending a five-day meeting of the London conference of the United Church.

COME BACK FOR MORE

The world's record bridesmaid, James Williams of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, with 16 marriages, married one wife — four times.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Rev. Anne Graham says she believes a "wave of enthusiasm" for women in the United Church of Canada carried her to the presidency of the London conference Tuesday.

But she inferred she does not intend to take advantage of her sex now that she is in office.

"I'm a minister first and a woman second. Ordained women never have been set apart from ordained men in the United Church and this is the highest compliment that can be paid to the ministry to women."

Miss Graham was ordained in the Montreal-Ottawa conference before coming to the London conference 17 years ago. She taught biology in Montreal and is a graduate of McGill University in zoology.

Women's Institutes

REDNERSVILLE W. I.

The May meeting of Rednersville Women's Institute was held at Centre Church hall with the president Mrs. Hubert Townsend in charge. She opened the meeting in the usual manner and welcomed everyone present.

During the business a letter from the centennial sports committee of Ameliasburg was read and it was decided to donate $5 to this group. A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. D. Hall who recently returned from hospital.

Mrs. Charles Weese was convener for a fine program which was opened by comments from Linda Pulver and Patricia Trounce representing Centre - Victoria Club. A piano duet was rendered by Mrs. Alfred Cairns and daughter Cindy followed by comments from Mrs. Bernice Rodgers of Albury Juniorettes who spoke on "Accent with Accessories". Patricia Trounce favored with a guitar selection. Tena Vesterveld for Centre - Victoria Girls' Club dealt with "Variety in Supper Menus" and all the girls of the Albury Juniorettes took part in "Food Guide for Health" with Miss Debra Weese and Mrs. Margery Bedford giving the comments.

The Institute presented each girl with a spoon and gave each of the leaders a gift.

Susanna's Family Fare

HONEYMOON OBSERVATION

Hello Su: While my wife was unpacking our luggage on our honeymoon, I noticed her skirts on each inserted in a nylon stocking.

Being a novice on honeymoons, I tried to associate these "skirt-stockings" with what I imagined feminine attire consisted of on such occasions.

To my great relief, my wife, seeing the puzzled look I had, told me to calm down, and gave me this explanation: she always packs pleated skirts in nylons so that they keep their pleats and remain crease-free!

Since I'm trying to be a dutiful husband, I'll get back to what I told her I'd write about in the first place — would you please send her a copy of your pamphlet on other uses for discarded nylons? — Phil Rosenblatt.

For being such an amazing new husband and fascinating correspondent, how could I refuse? — SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: For the gardeners who concentrate on window boxes, take fine lawn clippings and spread them over the earth.

This saves those dirty spatters on the sill that are thrown up when it rains.—Mrs. L. Hine

Home and School News

GLEN MILLER FUN FAIR

The third annual outdoor Fun Fair of the Glen Miller Home and School Association was held Friday evening. The theme for this year was Fete Internationale.

The teachers Mr. E. Rousseau, principal, Mrs. M. Sine, Mrs. K. King of the Glen Miller School and Mrs. L. Carter, principal Miss S. Grey of Johnstown school combined the talents of both schools and under the fine direction of the Sidney township music teacher Mrs. M. Margreiter and many hours of practice for the students from grades 1-8 put on the most entertaining concert of singing and square dancing to date.

There was a good turnout of parents to see and hear the children perform which was gratifying as the weather was threatening throughout the show.

After the concert there was a rush for the outdoor barbecue stand catered to by Mrs. Aldie Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Bowman, Mrs. Lucille Blakely. Mrs. Barbra Wickens served coffee with Mrs. Leona Johnston and Mrs. Pat Woodward were busy with cokes and milk.

The teachers Mrs. M. Sine, Mrs. L. Carter, Mrs. K. King, Miss S. Grey, Mr. E. Rousseau and Mr. Lee McLean ran the games with an international flavor: William Tell, Italian bowling, Mexican hat, St. George and the dragon, Monte-carlo these kept many of the children busy until dark.

Inside was the bingo room run by Mr. John Bigney, and Mr. Wayne Adams. The bazaar room was busy with Mrs. Ruth Calloway selling tickets on the maple syrup and salad bowl, at draw time Miss Brenda Wickens was the lucky winner of the maple syrup and Miss Sandra Pearson, the salad bowl.

At the bake table were Mrs. Ann McLean, Mrs. Yvonne Anderson. Mrs. Mary Morey had the touch and take table. White elephant helpers were Mrs. Mary Eagan, Mrs. Peggy McFadyen and Miss Linda Carr.

The sewing and crafts were in charge of Mrs. Shirley Casement and Mrs. Muriel Wilson. The grade eight students also had a table to raise money for a possible trip. Bill Huffman, Tim and Tom Hoit, Terry Patrick were the helpers.

The next general meeting of the association will be held soon at the Glen Miller School. The financial report will be given and a discussion of Field Day to be held the latter part of June.

Willing to Be Responsible For Debts

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—Gilbert J. Johnson took space in the newspaper to announce: "After 25 years of happy married life I shall cheerfully be responsible for any debts contracted in my name by my wife."

Asked to explain his declaration of trust, Johnson said: "Well, I have seen so many mefs advertise the opposite — that they don't trust their wives and will not pay their debts—that I thought I would demonstrate that at least one man does feel confidence in his wife.

"Mind you, from one or two things she has been saying since the advertisement appeared, I am beginning to think that I should have added 'up to £10' as a safeguard."

Said Mrs. Johnson: "It's typical of his antics. Still, I think it was a very nice gesture."

And did she intend running up a few debts on the strength of the advertisement?

"Good heavens no," she declared. "You don't think he would have put that in if he didn't know I was very, very frugal!"

IODE Is Making Efforts To Get Junior Members

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. Hugh G. Robertson, national organizational secretary of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, said Tuesday the order is making extensive efforts to recruit junior members.

Mrs. Robertson was speaking during the annual meeting of the IODE here.

She said there had been a few junior chapters when the order was first founded in 1900, interest had waned over the years, "but now it is really building up again."

"Six new chapters were formed during the past year, and another 200 members were added, bringing the total to some 700," she said.

Members are between 13 and 18 years of age, and this year they have undertaken their first national project—sending books to the Caribbean island of Dominica in answer to a request after books for the bookmobile there were burned.

Mrs. Robertson said a junior chapter seminar, held for the first time last year through the Ontario provincial chapter and the federal government, had done a great deal to encourage new members.

Sixty-three junior members—two from each club—met in Hamilton and were billeted in IODE members' houses. They also visited Ottawa and Stratford.

This year one member from each club will be sent to Alberta for a similar tour and seminar.

First Tweedsmuir Tea Held at River Valley

STIRLING — In preparation for Canada's centennial celebration next year the first Tweedsmuir tea was held at Meadowbush Farm River Valley recently.

Mrs. Roy Bush curator of the River Valley Tweedsmuir history book planned the event and 12 members of River Valley Institute assisted with various duties.

Over 100 guests signed the guest book and were from Shrewsville, Rosemore and Belleville along with representatives from Tyendinaga East in Hastings East; Wellmans in Hastings North and five from Hastings West, Uniondale, Wallbridge, Chatterton and River Valley. The proceeds of the day amounted to $46. and this will be used to further the history book of the valley.

The guests were welcomed at the door by Mrs. Roy Bush and her daughter - in - law Mrs. Glenn Bush who is president of River Valley W.I. Four rooms were used to display the various articles and all enjoyed an old fashioned lunch in the tea room. Several 4-H girls girls Judy Bush, Trudy Bush, Joyce Carr, Susan Bush and Connie Tucker assisted.

The first room was decorated in the Institute colors of blue and gold with blue lettered settee-ettes and miniature tea pots. Mrs. Jack Bush convened the tea and her assistants were Mrs. Philip Cooley and Mrs. Vernon Harry.

The Tweedsmuir history book was divided into sections and displayed on three tables. Here the guests could browse through the various pages. The book contains a wealth of material pertaining to the River Valley community.

In the first room Mrs. Roy Tucker and Mrs. Roy Irvin were in charge where two wall cabinets were filled with treasured china dishes and bric-a-brac. The buffet was laden with several pieces of ancient glassware. A large display of ironware used at the turn of the century featured iron kettles, cooking utensils, apple peeler and many of grandmother's gadgets. On a desk was a large collection of deeds and photostats of valuable material which was a treasure house of history.

Room two was convened by Mrs. Ernest Carr and Mrs. Malcolm McMullen and contained a large display of old and modern quilts, bedspreads crocheted and knitted, needlework of all kinds. Here also was a display of clothing now outdated. A large array of pictures and clippings was on view and one clipping had been taken from an old Intelligencer newspaper and articles needed for historical research contained an atlas and various directories.

The main room was convened by Mrs. Charles Wilson and Mrs. Gerald Brooks. One corner table contained a large display of children's clothes all hand made. There were several designs of clocks and lamps; a cook book published in the 19th century; wax models and many other miscellaneous articles.

Room four was convened by Mrs. Percy MacMullen and Mrs. Norman Rosebush. One corner depicted pictures of of former teachers and pupils of River Valley School. Also displayed were several old school books, an ink well, old school bell, chairs used many years ago; a large collection of butter making equipment, crocks of all shapes and sizes; a doll of 1900 and a variety of antique dishes, and articles used in the War of 1812.

From here the guests entered the tea room to enjoy a social half hour. The visitors started arriving about 2 p.m. the first day and many times the rooms were filled to capacity with the last visitors leaving at midnight. Several visitors also viewed the display on the second and third days and this first venture which proved most successful is a forerunner of what River Valley Institute hopes to accomplish in the centenial year. As one moves into the future it is well to remember the past and pay tribute to those who left their heritage.

Ann Landers

No Right to Borrow From Firm's Cashbox

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am past 30, so please don't call me "Toots" or "Lamb Chop" or any other cute names.

For the past three years I have been employed as a bookkeeper by a very good firm. I am in charge of the cash box, out of which I pay C.O.D.'s and other incidentals. The box contains $250 at all times — or vouchers which account for that missing money. I am responsible for that amount.

Almost every Friday I take $35 or $50 from the cash box to play bingo or bet on a golf game or a golf match or some other sporting event. I'm not only an educated bettor, but a lucky ANN LANDERS one. I usually win. When I lose I repay the cash box from my savings account.

Yesterday the boss called in and told me he had heard I borrowed money from the cash box to place bets. At that very moment the cash box balanced perfectly because just that morning I had repaid the $50 I had borrowed on Friday.

I'm furious that he would criticize me since I am responsible for the cash box and if I want to borrow from it, it's my business. Isn't it? Yes or no? — LOUISVILLE.

DEAR L.: You have no right to borrow money from that box for a weekend, a day or even a minute. Why in the world don't you have a checking account, woman?

Almost every embezzler started out by "borrowing" from the company. Just as you have been doing. Anyone who used company money for his own purposes is inviting disaster and disaster invariably accepts the invitation.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last Friday night we had a couple here for dinner. It had never met either the man or his wife before. He was transferred here and works for the same firm that employs my husband.

They arrived about 7:00 p.m. and we had cocktails. They were congenial and I liked them both. After dinner my husband took out his guitar. I played the piano and we all sang. Around 11:00 my husband suggested that we show the movies of our trip to Hawaii. They were thrilled at the idea.

When the movies were finished it was midnight. My husband suggested that they sleep at our house rather than drive to the suburbs — about 45 minutes away. When they accepted I almost fainted.

I had to change the sheets and iron a pair of pajamas for the man to sleep in — at this late hour. Then I had breakfast after they left the next noon that he had a nerve asking guests to stay overnight without first checking with me. He says I have the spirit of adventure and that the unexpected things in life are the most fun.

Am I a dead-head as he insists? — VERONICA.

DEAR V.: I can think of things that are a lot more fun than changing sheets at midnight and ironing pajamas for people you met just that evening.

Your husband should not have asked them to stay and they should not have accepted. You say nothing of a hurricane, earthquake, blizzard, illness or too much liquor. You described them as "easy to know." If you ask me they are too easy to know. Cool it.

Confidential to TURNING TO YOU TO BE SAVED: You give me credit for more than I deserve. I cannot offer you a magic solution for the problems you've piled up for yourself in the last 20 years. You need counselling — and immediately. The YMCA has an excellent program.

Stop feeling sorry for yourself. Stop self-pity and quit sitting around feeling sorry for yourself.

Engagement Notice

Miss Penny Wingate — Mr. Gordon Smith

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence George Wingate 24 London Ave., Picton Heights, Ont., announce the engagement of their elder daughter Penelope Kathleen, to Mr. Gordon Aubrey Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth P. Smith, Belleville. The wedding will take place in Picton United Church on Saturday, June 25th, 1966, at 3 p.m.

Blind Girl Completes First Year of Study at College

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — The pretty blind co-ed had what looked like a bundle of white sticks on top of her pile of psychology notes.

"Is that some new kind of baton?" asked the boy sitting next to her.

"I'm a blind student," said Claudette Tougas, "and that's my collapsible white cane."

Like a lot of people he didn't believe her at first. And that's the way Claudette likes it.

She has completed her first year of a social science course at St. Patrick's College and hopes eventually to be a marriage counsellor. Though she's from Sudbury, Ont., she picked an Ottawa university "because I thought my mother was beginning to pamper me a bit too much at home."

Claudette has congenital cataracts, a condition which showed up when she was nine and resulted in total blindness about two years ago when she was 18.

"I was in chemistry class when it started to go, around 10:30. I stayed till the end of the class and then went down to the office. It took about an hour."

PREPARED FOR IT

She had had several temporary attacks of blindness lasting several months at a time and had been told she would eventually become permanently blind.

"So it didn't bother me when it happened. Oh, for the first two weeks or so I thought 'Is this for real or isn't it' but then I decided I'd just have to live with it."

She's taken some courses at the Canadian Institute for the Blind in Toronto. They included braille — "the learning shorthand" — basketry, leatherwork and "travel training" — using the white cane.

"But I hardly ever use the cane, and I don't want a seeing-eye dog either. It's too much trouble. You have to take a six-weeks course and then feed it and look after it."

So she travels around the college on her own "although there's always someone there wanting to help me." The residence where she lives is about two blocks from the school, and she admits she does need help crossing a busy intersection.

She picks out her own wardrobe, with assistance describing the style and color to her. She bowls at a college league, in the 70s. "I guess that's good for me now, but it's pretty good for someone who used to bowl around 170."

LIKES DANCING

Her social life is "OK—not. I hardly went out at all last year, but I think college students must be more mature or something. They accept me."

On dates she likes to go to dances. "I don't do the frug or the jerk, but that's not because I can't. I just don't like them." She goes to movies, but didn't like "Thunderball" as much as the first two 007 thrillers. "It was too visual—all that underwater part."

In class she records lectures on a translator tape recorder, and uses tapes of her tests for studying. Her exams are oral, or sometimes printed in braille and answered by typewriter.

Her future plans include five more years of study, and marriage "definitely."

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

I suppose almost every mother worries about thumb-sucking at one time or another. But experts agree that if not overdone, it's perfectly normal, rarely harmful. Things that may cut down excessive thumb-sucking:

If a young baby sucks his thumb lustily, it could be that he needs more time between bottle.

Teethers who suck their thumbs to soothe tender gums will get biting satisfaction from Gerber Teething Biscuits.

Toddlers can often be distracted from thumbsucking with 2-way games or do-something toys.

of vitamins and minerals they supply. Just as important: colour-and-flavour appeal to baby's acceptance of vegetables.

Gerber Strained and Junior Vegetables are notable for these reasons: they're "nutrient-cooked" (cooking times and temperatures scientifically controlled) according to their own requirements to help preserve precious food values, naturally good colours and flavours.

Regulating idea. When your baby is ready to go on a 3-meals-a-day schedule, you'll find a change of scene or a bit of attention will help him wait one-half to one hour or so to meet his new schedule. Babies are adaptable and will usually settle for attention if the wait isn't too long.

Growing idea. Your baby gains more in height and weight the first year than the next two put together. That's why it's important to see that he gets plenty of protein foods — the great "helping hands" of growth. Gerber Strained and Junior Meats are high in protein. Made from carefully selected government-inspected cuts, they're processed by a special method which insures the wonderfully smooth, moist texture these quality meats are famous for. Gerber Meats come in handy glass jars for your convenience. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

BAYSIDE SCHOOL

Members of Bayside Home and School Club met recently in the Lower Bayside School with the president, Mrs. H. Hennessey, in the chair. Mrs. W. Cassidy reported that the recent Fun Fair was successful and a profit of $452. was realized.

Instead of the usual banquet for the grade 8 graduating class, it was agreed that the club would pay for a bus trip to Kingston where the students will visit several historical sites.

Next year, teachers must be present in order to win the room prize for most parents in attendance. A dollar in cash will be given to all pupils with perfect attendance during the 1965-66 year. Ten and five dollars will be presented to the top two grade 8 students.

Miss Blakely's class won the room prize.

Mrs. K. Rennie Is Appointed ORMTA Head

On Wednesday evening 17 members of the O.R.M.T.A. met at the home of Mrs. Rahka for the final meeting of the year in which the president, secretary and treasurer gave their annual reports. For the past two years the 33 members of the Registered Music Teachers (Belleville Branch) under the presidency of Miss Marjorie Woodard were given the opportunity through speakers and workshops of seeing and hearing new teaching aids, valuable and necessary to the music profession of today.

The following slate of officers were brought in: president — Mrs. K. Rennie; past president — Miss Marjorie Woodard; vice-president — Mrs. Dolores Wall; secretary — Mrs. Townsend; assistant secretary — Mrs. L. Boyce; treasurer — Mrs. Veley; assistant treasurer — Sister M. Avila; social convener — Miss Woodard and Mrs. Straiton.

The evening closed with a lunch served by Mrs. Rubba.

Lodges Hold Combined Celebration

Recently a combined birthday party to celebrate Belleville Canton No. 8 80th birthday and Belleville Auxiliary No. 8 44th birthday was held in the Odd Fellows Hall.

Capt. Randy Nelson was master of ceremonies for the evening. The distinguished visitors attending were Lady Noreen Howie, president of the Department Association of Ontario. LtA.P.M. Col. James Howie, Chief of Staff of the Dept. of Ontario, I.O.O.F. Lt. Col. George Lewis, Inspector. Other visitors introduced were, Brig. Gen. Ralph Hobbs, Brig. Gen. George McDonald, Col Larry Pollitt and Brig. Gen. Ken Sise. Members from Kingston and Peterborough and the surrounding district were welcomed.

Sister Dorothy Webber of Quinte's Rebekah Lodge rendered a solo, and Lady Noreen Howie spoke briefly bringing greetings from the Department Association of Ontario. A drill was performed by the combined Canton Belleville and Belleville Auxiliary drill team led by Major N. Jensen. Best wishes were extended on behalf of the 2nd Brigade from Brig. Gen. Ken Sise. Past history of Belleville Auxiliary was given by Lady Alice Storms Sr.

Several members of Canton Kingston and Kingston Auxiliary entertained with a short play entitled 'A Mock Wedding'.

Lady Margaret Nelson pres. of Belleville Auxiliary, introduced three generations of Auxiliary members Lady Etta Ward, Lady Dorothy Harwood and Lady Carolyn Harwood who is vice president of Belleville Auxiliary. Also introduced was Lady Florence Pollitt, Department Association Hospital Matron, and Lady Lillian Sommers, Dept. Association honor guard.

A grand march led by Col. James Howie and Lady Noreen Howie took place leading everyone finally to the upper hall where euchre was played. Prizes were won by several members. Lunch was served by Belleville Auxiliary No. 8 convened by Lady Dorothy Harwood, Lady Clara Ironside and Lady Carolyn Harwood bringing to a close a most enjoyable evening.

At a former meeting of Belleville Auxiliary No. 8, Lady Noreen Howie was entertained at a social evening. A potluck supper was also enjoyed by the members and visitors present.

BOWLING BANQUET

The Quinte Rebekah bowling league banquet was held recently in the I.O.O.F. Hall with the meal served by the members of the Belleville Auxiliary No. 8 I.O.O.F. with Dorothy Harwood, Grace Akey and Alice Storms in charge.

Following the dinner the year's president Marguerite Wessels presented trophies to the following: tie for high average (167) to Lillian Summers and Verna Gilroy; high triple (650) to Florence Pollitt; high single (297) to Maud Craig; low single, Jean Pilgibson and a prize for the most improved average to Nemo LaRoe.

Court whist was enjoyed and prizes went to Ida Sinfield, E. Elgie and Carolyn Harwood.

REPORT ON SMOKERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Smokers apparently are more liable to common colds and other respiratory infections than non-smokers, a study shows. The year - long study of student nurses at Vancouver General Hospital—half of them smokers —showed that each smoker averaged 2.3 more days of respiratory illness than the non-smoker.

Surplus of Heavy Water Will Find World Market Says Nuclear Association

By BOB MacKENZIE

WINNIPEG (CP)—Any surplus of heavy water produced in Canada will have a ready market in the rest of the world.

A report prepared by the Canadian Nuclear Association's economic planning committee says Canada could have a surplus for export as early as 1970 if construction of a second plant and expansion of the first go through as hoped.

World demand will be more than enough to absorb any surplus. In fact, the report to the association's annual meeting here said Monday, there would be an average world shortage of 3,400 tons a year between 1971 and 1985.

Canada's first heavy water plant, Deuterium of Canada's installation at Glace Bay, N.S., is scheduled to go into production this summer and produce 300 tons a year.

Canadian General Electric is negotiating with Atomic Energy of Canada Limited to build a plant that would start in 1969 and produce 400 tons a year. While a formal contract has not yet been signed it is expected to be done before June 15, the date CGE has set for announcing the site of the plant.

Deuterium of Canada has the same deadline to show proof of financial ability to double its production and obtain a new contract covering sale of 400 tons a year. Deuterium of Canada has indicated it could double production within 18 months.

TO MAKE 400 TONS

If both proposals go forward, Canada will produce 400 tons of heavy water a year by 1970—almost half the free world's supply unless the U.S. decides to increase its production.

With Ontario's Douglas Point and Pickering power plants coming into operation in the next four years, Canada will need a total of 1,856 tons for domestic and foreign sales already committed. Canada's total production by that time will be only 1,800 tons, leaving little margin for extra sales.

Future world demand for heavy water will be based in part of the performance of the Canadian reactor in competition with other models which do not require heavy water.

But Lorne Gray, president of AECL, said in an interview he thinks the heavy water reactor have a solid future, perhaps for as long as 50 years.

Biggest advantage of the heavy water plants if that natural uranium can be used as fuel. Other types require costly enriched uranium to make self-fission process possible without the assistance of heavy water.

HANDLING A FACTOR

Besides the cost factor, enriched uranium fuel also requires more careful handling.

The association's report says that while heavy - water - moderated reactors have a higher capital cost, low fuel costs and future commercial operating experience may enable them to "produce power at costs lower than any other commercially available nuclear power system. . . ."

But heavy water must be available in sufficient volume to make commercial sales of the reactor feasible on the world market.

General acceptance of heavy water reactors also will lower the capital costs, Mr. Gray added. If the plants could be assured of 30-year contracts for full production instead of the present 10-year terms offered by AECL, the cost of their product "could be cut sharply overnight."

This in turn would reduce the cost of the power they produce and help stimulate greater demand.

Both AECL and CGE are attacking the problem of cost from different angles, but both are sticking to the use of natural uranium fuel and a heavy water moderator.

USE PLAIN WATER

AECL has been using regular water for transferring heat from the reactor to the generators for some time. If present design work proves the idea feasible it will be used for an experimental - demonstration unit at Rolphton, Ont.

CGE has started a project to simplify the present type of power plants now being built by AECL for Ontario Hydro. They use heavy water both as a moderator—to control fission in the reactor—and for heat transfer.

J. L. Olsen, marketing manager for CGE's atomic power department, said in an interview his firm's approach was to try to simplify construction from a view to reducing capital cost and reducing construction time.

The concept of a reactor using ordinary water for heat transfer first was advanced in Canada by Dr. G. A. Fox of AECL who now is directing the design work. In a progress report Monday, Dr. Fox said the present schedule — calling for the station to be in operation by 1971—will require hiring a letter of intent by July 1 for ordering of the turbine generator.

Then AECL would seek authorization this summer to go ahead with the project and obtain the money necessary from the federal government.

SEE NO PROBLEMS

"If construction goes ahead—there have been no serious problems encountered in work so far—we'll build the plant at Becancourt and sell the power to Hydro-Quebec. As in the case of the Ontario plants, Hydro-Quebec eventually will purchase the installation.

The 1971 target date for production of power at the Becancourt site is regarded as optimistic by many experts.

They expect at least a couple delays even in a smooth operation and suggest a more realistic date would be in the summer of 1972.

One problem is that the Quebec plant will be the first of its type and therefore as a combination prototype and demonstration unit. If the cost of power produced can compete with other types of fuels in Ontario and Quebec, it likely will be followed by larger units of the same design.

But extension of the plants to other parts of Canada is unlikely in the next decade at least. Both Eastern and Western Canada have existing supplies of fossil fuels—coal and gas—that can provide cheaper power.

CHAIRMAN APPOINTED

OTTAWA (CP)—Maurice J. Dyson, chairman of the civil service commission, has been appointed a member of the United Nations international civil service advisory board, UN Secretary-General U Thant said Tuesday. The 11-member board advises the UN on recruitment and personnel administration within its own international civil service. Mr. Carson's term runs until the end of 1969.

quickly approved, gives the engineers more power in the decks of research and study related to resources and allows him to work with the provinces to co-ordinate plans.

Passage of the bill carried a commitment by Liberal Prime Minister Pepin, who would become energy minister, will make a broad policy statement later in the session.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg South Centre) said the right to strike is hedged in the civil service bill.

Under its terms, civil servants must choose in advance either compulsory arbitration, with the right to strike, or conciliation with the right.

IT'S 'UNREALISTIC'

"This requirement that they must decide in advance is unrealistic," Mr. Knowles said.

The bill stipulates there would be no strikes for employees in services considered essential to public safety and security. Members of the armed forces, the RCMP, employees of Parliament and forestmen engaged to work abroad aren't covered.

One of the main criticisms was that the bill is too detailed. Mr. Knowles said it is an attempt to provide for any eventuality.

It sets up two new bodies—the public service staff relations board and the public service arbitration tribunal. Other sections spell out conciliation and grievance procedures and certification.

All this detail will mean difficulties in a practical operation, David Lewis (NDP—York South) said.

He and Mr. Knowles said excessive detail indicated government fear as to how things would work out.

said was lost in the crowd's uproar. Every time a prisoner tried to make a point in his favor the crowd hissed and booed.

The star prisoner was Evariste Kimba, a former prime minister.

He spoke hardly above a whisper. He stood before his accusers, ropes knotted around his forearms. He seemed to be in pain and fixed part of the ropes could be untied. The court allowed them to be loosened.

The prisoners were bruised and barefooted. Their hands and arms were swollen and their clothes torn and dirty.

Each man — Kimba, Jeremy Anany, Alexandre Mahamba and Senator Emmanuel Bamba —in turn spoke in his own defence.

COULDN'T FINISH

Anany was the last man to speak—but he did not finish.

His low voice was drowned out by commotion and fighting among spectators and the chief judge, Col. Pierre Ingila, said: "This is a council of war. We have no time for much discussion. We shall deliberate now."

Mayor Host At Dinner For NHL Star

PICTON (STAFF) — Picton's Mayor scores again, it's beginning to sound as though he may rival Bobby Hull, himself. Friday night Mayor H. J. McFarland of Picton will be host at a testimonial dinner to Prince Edward County's famous farmer - Bobby Hull - in the Roof Gardens of the Royal York Hotel in Toronto. Not only is His Worship hosting the banquet but he is providing transportation for a large number of Picton and district residents. The Mayor has arranged for a special railway coach to leave Belleville at 1.20 p.m.

A lively and impressive list of dignitaries and supporters of the NHL star will be attending the dinner in Toronto. The Mayor said he has chosen Toronto as a place to hold the banquet as he is very central to the many officials who will be attending the dinner. Commercial air service will also be readily available to those wishing to use this method.

He is also making arrangements to have Prince Edward County Hall of Fame presentation on the dinner menu for the banquet.

Mayor H. J. McFarland is also accompanying Bobby to Madoc for the Kiwanis sponsored testimonial dinner being held there tonight.

Antique Arms Will Be Put On Display

PICTON (Staff) — On Sunday, June 5th, the Trent Valley Antique Arms Association, whose membership takes in an area from Kingston to Toronto, will meet at the Picton Fair Grounds. Members will display antique arms ranging from Indian arrowheads, ancient flintlock muskets, edged weapons, medals, armoribe, etc.

This exhibition will be open to the public free of charge from 1 to 3 p.m. This is a fine opportunity for local residents to view relics of past eras which are usually only to be found in museums.

Kinsmen Club Wins Award At Convention

PICTON (Staff)—The Picton Kinsmen Club won the District Service Shield Award at the district convention in Montreal over the weekend.

It is the first in the club's history to take such an award and it was the first time the club has ever made a bid for the award. The trophy, a large shield, goes to the club which successfully completes what the judges consider to be the most efficient and worthwhile service project during any one year.

The local club won the award for their project of a senior citizens' club. Making the presentation, on behalf of the Picton club was Sterling Johnston, chairman of the senior citizens project last year and vice-president elect for the forthcoming year. Mr. Johnston was in competition with several other clubs for the award.

The convention was held at the Skyline Hotel in Montreal and was attended by about 500 Kinsmen and their wives, from Campbellford to Montreal. Others in the Picton delegation included President Roe Hotston, Gordon Way, Laverne McCoubrey and Jack Evans.

Mr. Evans represented the club in another district competition, that of public speaking, but this was won by a speaker from the Montreal area.

Kiwanians Readying for Horse Show

PICTON (Staff) — The County Riders of the Fair Grounds will be a hive of activity Monday night as Kiwanians and others reddied the building for the Annual Spring Horse show. The show, which is gaining a reputation throughout eastern Ontario is scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Saturday night. Several inches of earth have been placed on the floor of the centre by loaders and other equipment and members of the club were busy with rake and paint brush.

Friday night's show will be especially for children and there are no reserved seats. The show will start at 7:30 and admission is a gift $1.00 children 50c. Saturday seats are all reserved for the evening performance and will be the same price. Afternoon show features a colorful western show, novelty races, jumpers and barrel racing. These events are to be held out of doors as there is fear of horses slipping in the dirt inside the arena. The event draws a huge crowd annually and fascinates old and young alike with the ponies, high stepping hackneys, saddle horses with elaborate trappings. For the first time the show will feature Arabian costume classes with entries from Toronto.

The Rural Scene

PICTON — The 6th annual Swine Conference will be held in the Physical Education Building at the University of Guelph on Thursday, June 2nd, beginning with registration at 9 a.m. The topics o be discussed on the program will include "New R.O.P. Standards"; "Processor and Consumer views regarding pork as a meat and what the consumer wants."

Farm girls between the ages of 17 and 26 are reminded that entries for the Prince Edward County Dairy Princess Competition should be in by June 6th. Plans have been made to hold the 1966 Dairy Princess Competition for Prince Edward County at Belleville on the evening of Wednesday, June 22nd, at 7:30 p.m. The Prince Edward County competition will be held at the same time as the Hastings County competition.

Bonarlaw

BONARLAW — On Friday evening of last week from this community attended a shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mumford (formerly Delia Emery) at Edgewater pavilion, Campbellford. The evening was spent in card games and dancing. The newly married couple were called to the platform and presented with a purse of money from their relatives and friends. They will reside in Campbellford.

Miss Linda Wellman and Mrs. Ralph Wellman were hostesses with Geraldine McFaul for a shower at their home in honor of Mrs. Tom White (formerly Doreen Broadworth,) of Thamesburg, on Saturday evening. Several former school mates and friends were in attendance.

Mrs. Clayton Burkitt, Mrs. Spry and Mrs. M. Cassidy were among those who attended the W.I. convention at Queensboro on Friday.

Mrs. Ward Meloney and pupils of S. S. No. 14 and Mrs. Leonard and pupils of Bonarlaw Sunday (formerly Dello Emmons) and a tour of Kingston on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rod McKenzie of Knowlton spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. W. Neal.

On Friday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Andrews was filled with friends and relatives in honor of their son Donald and his bride. Following a program of music, addresses was read and the couple were presented with a purse of money.

Child Care Centres Are Discussed

OTTAWA (CP) — Nursery school can be just as good for parents as for children, the director of the Ottawa day nursery said Monday.

Speaking at a panel discussion sponsored by the Ottawa welfare council, Mrs. Carl Birchard said parents bringing up children alone got to know each other through her school's group counselling sessions.

"It's amazing how many of them are really alone." Besides making new friends, working mothers could share the solutions to common problems.

Another panelist said child care centres should have training programs for volunteers. Mrs. Katie Dunper, director of an after-school centre for children of working parents, said untrained volunteers wanted to help the children but often didn't know how.

"It can be a devastating experience when they can't cope."

The director of a nursery school in which parents assisted professional staff said the experience of working with trained personnel helped parents deal with the children at home.

Mrs. Lawrence Hyde said it was also "very comforting to mothers to see that other people's children have some of the unpleasantable tendencies as their own."

Hundred Years Ago Fenians Hit Canada In Force

One hundred years ago, in 1866, members of the American branch of the Irish independence movement mounted an attack on Canada as a way of getting at their real enemy—England. The Fenian Raids are described in this story by Fraser MacDougall, Ottawa bureau chief of The Canadian Press, whose grandfather, George James, was a member of the British 7th Fusiliers who helped repulse the attackers in Quebec.

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"Sir, I have the honor to inform you that a body of 600 Fenians entered this province, this morning." Viscount Monck, governor - general of the Province of Canada, cabled Rt. Hon. Edward Cardwell of the British government at London June 1, 1866.

"They crossed the Niagara River at Black Rock, near Buffalo, in the state of New York, and established themselves on the village of Fort Erie, in Canada. I am encouraged in taking measures for meeting the emergency."

Viscount Monck was reporting on the first of two main attacks launched by the Fraternal Brotherhood of the United States to invade Canada. The second threat came in 1870, three years after the Province of Canada — the present - day provinces of Ontario and Quebec—joined New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to form the Dominion of Canada.

In retrospect, the Fenian Raids seem but a minor incident in the history of Canada and her relations with the United States. By modern standards of warfare, the slaughter, it wasn't much of a shooting war.

CANADIANS FEARFUL

But to the Canadians of that day it was a real thing. They feared for the future in the face of attack launched from, although not with the help of, a nation of about 35,000,000 people against 3,000,000 in the Canadian provinces.

Many of the attacking forces were seasoned veterans of the U.S. Civil War which in itself had exacerbated Canada—U.S. relations.

The threat the raids posed for the disunited Canadian provinces lent spur Confederation in 1867. Some authorities say they were a decisive factor in swinging New Brunswick into the Confederation camp although their physical impact was minor in that province.

Another theory is that the raids led to distrust of the United States, which many felt could have limited the rate activity more quickly, and also of British, which some felt didn't provide adequate military help.

Whatever its impact, on Canadian history, the 1866 raid marked the only time the prized Victoria Cross was awarded for an act of valor on Canadian soil and the only time it was given for heroism away from the field of battle.

BATTLE WAS DRAW

The main battle of 1866 was fought on Saturday, June 2, in the Niagara Peninsula at a spot called Limestone or Lime Ridge about five miles west of Fort Erie and three miles or so inland from Lake Erie.

About 850 Fenians were engaged by about 840 Canadian volunteers on the hot early-summer day. By and large, the result was a draw, the Canadians retired and the Fenians withdrew. By modern standards the invaders were back across the Niagara River at Buffalo where about 700 were arrested by the U.S. authorities.

Toronto's Queen's Own Rifles lost nine men in the brief engagement and Hamilton's 13th Battalion lost one for a total of 10 fatalities. About 30 Canadians were wounded.

Estimates are that the Fenians lost four times that number. One of Viscount Monck's dispatches said 75 were taken prisoner.

There was skirmishing, without fatal casualties, in Missisquoi County in Quebec's Eastern Townships where a Fenian force estimated variously at 900 to 1,800 crossed from St. Albans, Vermont, and camped at a place called Pigeon Hill. They plundered Frelighsburg, and St. Armand, retreating in a few days. Viscount Monck reported this exploit as a minor incursion, saying the defenders took 16 Fenians prisoner and drove the rest. British or Canadian casualties.

FOUGHT FIRE ALONE

The Victoria Cross was won by Timothy O'Hea, born in 1846 at Bantry in County Cork, Ireland, for an act of heroism at Danville, Que., far from the scenes of the raids.

A private in the British Rifle Brigade, O'Hea was one of a four-man guard assigned to a train carrying munitions, including 85 barrels of gunpowder, from Quebec City to the Niagara area.

At Danville, O'Hea discovered a fire in one of the munitions cars. He fought it all alone, for nearly an hour, and put it out.

The Fenian Brotherhood was a U.S. organization formed at New York in 1858 to assist the Irish independence movement. In effect it was the U.S. branch of the Irish Revolutionary Brotherhood organized at Dublin in 1858 with the aim of driving the English from Ireland.

In 1865, the Fenians split on strategy. One wing wanted to get at England by invading Canada; the other, in Ireland. The anti-Canada line was that a Canadian invasion wouldn't do much to further an Irish revolution.

But the advocates of the Canadian invasion went ahead.

Uneasiness began to grip Canada, particularly Ontario and Quebec, in early 1866 as invasion signs appeared.

ALERTS PROCLAIMED

Francis Wayland Campbell of montreal, long active in the Royal Regiment of Canadian Infantry, called out a local alarm in a lecture on the Fenian invasion of Canada 1866-1870, later published in book form:

—On Feb. 1, rumors reached Hamilton of Fenian activity on the U.S. frontier.

—On Feb. 2, there were rumors of a projected attack on St. Johns, Que., about 20 miles south east of Montreal.

—On Feb. 13, a mass Fenian rally in New York attended 10,000 persons who discussed plans to invade Canada.

Canada reacted by calling out its volunteer militia. On Feb. 3, two companies were mobilized at Brockville on the St. Lawrence River.

When a rumor spread that the Fenians were going on March 17, St. Patrick's Day, Sir John A. Macdonald issued orders March 6 for immediate mobilization of a 10,000-man volunteer force. More than 14,000 answered the call.

Macdonald, later to be the first prime minister of the Dominion of Canada, then was attorney - general and minister of militia in the province of Canada. His order was delivered to the adjutant-general of the Canadian forces, Col. Patrick Leonard MacDougall, while the latter was en route to Ottawa from Montreal by train.

INVASION THWARTED

The weeks rolled by without any threat to the central provinces and many of the men were sent home. But there was some minor activity in New Brunswick.

In April, a small Fenian force prepared to invade Campobello Island in Passamaquoddy Bay. This fell flat due to the presence of British warships in the area and intervention by the U.S.

In the central provinces, the volunteers were hastily summoned back to the colors when word came on May 31 that the Fenians were on the move in many areas along the American border.

One - third of the contingent from Oil Springs, then in the grip of Canada's first oil boom, were American-born. They had been attracted to the area near Sarnia by the lure of oil wealth. Canadians living in Chicago headed home by the earliest train to join uniforms.

Viscount Monck's official reports said the Fenian centre of concentration was at Malone, N.Y. That force was aimed at Cornwall and Prescott—and then the fledgling capital, Ottawa. He placed the right wing at St. Albans, for the Quebec thrust; and the left at Buffalo, for the move to Fort Erie, really aimed at the Welland Canal linking lakes Erie and Ontario.

SAW BROAD FRONT

In his 1866 "Narrative of the Fenian Invasion of Canada," Alexander Somerville pictured a much more grandiose invasion plan:

He reported that the Fenians mustered on at 1,500 - mile front. He agreed with Viscount Monck on the centre at Malone and right wing at St. Albans but placed the left wing at Chicago, saying its aim was to invade the Lake Huron port of Goderich.

Somerville said a Michigan Fenian army was assigned to capture Windsor and Sarnia and a column at Cleveland had the task of assisting either the Michigan force or the column that made the Fort Erie thrust. Fenians at Cape Vincent and Ogdensburg were to threaten and pin down—but not invade—Kingston.

British regulars backed up the volunteers in the Niagara area the British force consisted of 200 men from the 16th regiment, based at Toronto. Their colonel, George Pearocke, commanded the joint force that moved into the Niagara area.

From garrison duty in Quebec City, the second battalion of the 7th Royal Fusiliers went into the Eastern Townships with the Canadian volunteers.

When it was all over, the regulars were offered their honorable discharge if they wished to stay in Canada. Many accepted. The official British army records show them as "discharged by purchase."

MEDALS CAME LATE

Canada was proud of its volunteers, although it was years before the country got around to striking a medal for their service.

General service medals with clasps for service in the two Fenian Raids and in the Red River expedition of 1870 were authorized in 1899. Land grants in the Timmins area were also authorized for volunteers — not for regulars — but it's not recorded whether any took them up seriously. The idea was to foster agriculture in the area. That was before anyone knew of the Timmins treasurehouse of gold.

Viscount Monck was proud of the volunteers too. He wrote to London about their "admirable spirit" and said "their conduct as regards discipline and order has entitled them to as much commendation as does their spirit of patriotism and self-reliance."

Controversy swirled at the time over the Fort Erie battle.

Somerville wrote scathing criticisms of Lt.-Col. Alfred Booker, thrust unexpectedly into command at Fort Erie that engaged the Fenians. Among other things he said Booker ordered the Canadians to retire because "he seemed to have decided, so far as in a condition of imbecility and nervous prostration, he could decide anything, to retreat from the field of battle."

Later, a court martial cleared Booker.

MADE LATE START

The force led by Booker spent the night of June 1 at Port Colborne, 15 miles west of Fort Erie. Col. Pearocke spent the night at Chippawa, on the outskirts of Niagara Falls, about 14 miles north of Fort Erie. The plan was that on Saturday, June 2, the two forces would meet at a place called Stevensville where they could cut off the Fenian attempt to reach the Welland Canal.

Pearocke sent word to Booker he'd start at 3 a.m. But he didn't get away until later because most of his troops didn't have any messala to prepare breakfast. Some didn't have any food.

Booker's force didn't do well for breakfast at Port Colborne either. They ate salt herring, the only thing they could find.

Somerville reported that Booker himself enjoyed beefsteak. Booker was leading the Queen's Own, the 13th Regiment of Hamilton and the York and Caledonia Rifel companies. He was also to have had the Welland battery but that unit didn't have any cannons.

From Port Colborne, Booker's force moved by train to Ridgeway on Lake Erie, about five miles from Fort Erie. They disembarked and headed across country for Stevensville. En route they encountered the Fenians.

MEN WERE THIRSTY

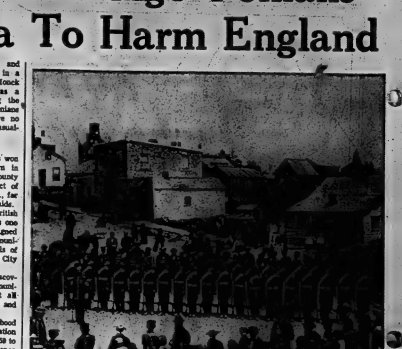
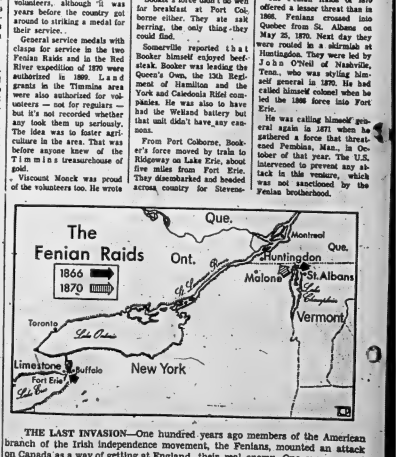
Both forces lacked water canteens. Booker's men suffered from thirst after their salt herring breakfast. Pearocke's men suffered from the march in the heat.

Pearocke didn't have a good map of the area and he picked Booker's worst road to his Stevensville rendezvous, passing up a shorter and better one. Booker didn't have a map either. Somerville says also that Booker didn't even have paper on which to write messages.



So that no one will think all the muddling was by the defenders, some writers of the time say that the Fenians would have been a much greater threat if they had moved over the rail lines as they went.

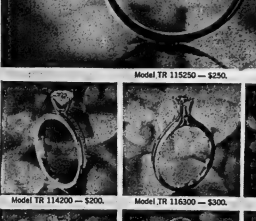
At Port Colborne, they could have damaged the Lake Erie end of the Welland Canal and then moved inland to occupy it at a set of locks. The advocate of this theory, as officer in the Canadian volunteers, says the Fenians could easily have skipped past Booker to achieve those objectives.



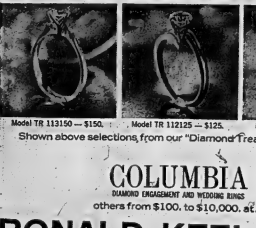
Canada paid damage claims totalling $2,646.56 to Fort Erie area residents for Fenian plundering. The payments ranged in size from $6.50 to Tobe Teal to $601.46 for John Douglas. One man took the payment, $200.64 in his case, but refused to sign for it "on account of horse not being allowed for."

The Fenian Raids of 1870 offered a lesser threat than in 1866. Fenians crossed into Quebec from St. Albans on May 25, 1870. Next day they were routed in a skirmish at Huntingdon. They were led by John O'Neil of Nashville, Tenn., who was styling himself general in 1870. He had called himself colonel when he led the 1866 force into Fort Erie.

He was calling himself general again in 1871 when he gathered a force that threatened Pembina, Man., in October of that year. The U.S. intervened to prevent any attack in this venture, which was not sanctioned by the Fenian brotherhood.



READY FOR THE DEFENCE — Canada's volunteer militiamen turned out en masse when the country was threatened by the Fenians in 1866 and again in 1870. This is the Elora Volunteer Rifle Company. The photo was taken by Mrs. Thomas Connon, whose husband was in the unit, at its first parade in 1862. The original glass negative is now in the Ontario Archives. (CP Photo)



THE LAST INVASION—One hundred years ago members of the American branch of the Irish independence movement, the Fenians, mounted an attack on Canada as a way of getting at England, their real enemy. One group moved across the Niagara River, then withdrew after a battle at Limestone, near Fort Erie. Another group invaded the Eastern Townships of Quebec from St. Albans, Vt., retreating in a few days. In 1870 the Fenians raided once more, crossing into Quebec, but were routed at Huntingdon. Pontiac Parisienne Custom Sport Convertible with Sports Option

The only thing that says "low price" about Pontiac is its price tag... and that's removable.

It would be easy for a guy like you to get excited about a new Parisienne convertible, wouldn't it? Breezy, full-sized styling. Rich interiors. The car has success written all over it. Sure, you'd like to own a Pontiac. But if you're like a lot of people we know, you maybe figure that Pontiac is just too good to be true. You figure it costs a lot of money. Of course we can tell you all kinds of nice things about Pontiac; how well it's built, how much you deserve one, but the nicer we make the car sound, the more expensive you think it is. The only way we can get around this is to invite you in to have a look at the price tag. It's maybe not quite as colorful as the car, but it's liable to turn you on just the same. People forget (and who can blame them), but Pontiac is not an expensive car! And that's not just talk. We can offer you the kind of a deal that could put you behind the wheel of your own new Pontiac this week. A guy like you could really go places in a Pontiac. If there's any better way to get there, we can't think of it. And an easier way, we're sure there isn't. So drop in and get acquainted with all our price tags. You'll know us right away. Just look for one of the names listed below. Be seeing you.

Govt. Firmly Rejects Demands to Withdraw Troops From Europe

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is firmly rejecting growing demands by New Democratic Party and some Conservatives for the withdrawal of all or some of the 11,200 Canadian troops in Europe.

But government spokesmen concede that such withdrawal would be difficult to resist if the United States began cutting its troop strength in Europe.

A Washington press report this week said nearly half the U.S. Senate would support a phasing out of the six American army divisions in West Germany.

Defence Minister Hellyer told the Commons defence committee May 12 that "I have no doubt that what one country (Canada or the U.S.) decided to do might have some influence on what the other would eventually do or be under pressure to do."

External Affairs Minister Sharp told the committee he has no intention of reducing the effectiveness of the 6,000-man infantry brigade or Canadian RCAF Air Division in Europe.

Mr. Hellyer has said there enough CF-5M-5 bombers with the air division to keep it going for at least five years.

WILL MAINTAIN FORCE

He told the defence committee: "We will have to continue to maintain an effective force there (in Europe) as our contribution for some period to come."

Other defence officials have suggested that the real but unstated reason for the continued presence of NATO forces in Germany is to prevent Germany from gaining national command of its military formations—they now are NATO command—and eventually from acquiring nuclear weapons of its own.

The New Democrats have long sought Canada's military withdrawal from Europe. They have been joined lately by some Conservatives, but not including Douglas Harkness, former defence minister.

Heber Smith, a Conservative from the Ontario riding of Simcoe North and an articulate and knowledgeable member of the defence committee, is considered the leading spokesman for this group of Conservatives.

He suggested the other day that Canada could maintain a "presence" in Europe while bringing most of the troops home.

When Mr. Hellyer rejected the suggestion, Mr. Smith remarked: "It's a shady area" seems to have their own NATO policy, why could not Canada?

Project Still up in Air Judy LaMarsh Tells House

OTTAWA (CP)—State Secretary Judy LaMarsh said Tuesday she's getting a lot of mail about Canada buying a $6,000,000 painting. Hair favor the idea and half are opposed.

However, she told the Commons, the whole project is still up in the air. At the same time she delivered an eloquent argument in favor of the project.

Miss LaMarsh prompted the "surprisingly heavy" flood of letters by suggesting earlier that the National Gallery might purchase the painting. It was done by Leonardo da Vinci who painted the famous Mona Lisa.

In the House Tuesday, Reid Scott (PC—Pembroke) again asked how the project is getting on.

Miss LaMarsh said she had made it clear earlier that she mentioned it in the first place for the public reaction.

The goal, she said, is to "erect a symbol of excellence" with the Rembrandt's Night Watch that attracts tourists to the Amsterdam Museum where it hangs.

The National Gallery, which has never spent more than $100,000 on a painting, "might benefit in every way from what is being able to be the setting for such a very fine jewel in the world of painting."

She did not know whether the owners of the da Vinci would sell to Canada or whether the $6,000,000 price would be accepted by him.

"I do not believe that most Canadians feel this kind of investment is a bad one.

"After all, billions of dollars are spent each year in this country for many different purposes and I cannot believe that because an investment is made on one hand, all investments on the other hand or for any other purpose should be withheld."

She hoped to talk over with the gallery director and board which painting or a similar project.

"I cannot think of any better way to teach people that Canada has an appreciation for the very finest objects of art that I can possibly find for a work of art such as this."

Man does not live by bread alone, she said, and "we need a goal in our cultural life which perhaps does not exist at the moment."

"Canadians often think they do not deserve the best, that they are second-rate and the best that is in the world cannot be ours.

"I know that nothing means of this moment is not very common for this or any other country."

But such a purchase would be a "terrific drawing card" if displayed at the Montreal world's fair next year and "would be the diamond sceptre of the National Gallery's existence." She said it might even pay for itself.

She hoped Canadians would in the future leave their treasures to the country to become "national treasures." People had been leaving collections to the provinces.

Islanders Asking Question Who Won Recent Election

CHARLOTTETOWN CP) — "Who won?"

That's what Islanders were asking each other Tuesday following the confused results of Monday's Prince Edward Island election.

The question of who won was also being asked by the Conservative and Liberal parties.

"Everything is in a state of confusion," Conservative Premier Walter Shaw said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "The result was a great surprise. I don't know what party is going to form the government."

The Conservatives, a party since 1959, won 11 seats to 10 taken by the Liberals under leader Alex B. Campbell, 33.

Mr. Campbell said in an interview that as a result of the election "the Liberals are prepared to form a government when called on to do so."

"However, there are at least two possible recounts, and a deferred election in two other seats will be held July 11 in Kings 1st.

WILL REMAIN PREMIER

Mr. Shaw, Canada's oldest premier at 78, said the results of recounts and the deferred election are over, he will hold on to office. Until these results are known, nothing is certain, he said.

Mr. Campbell, however, said the Liberals should gain if recounts are favorable and he added the Liberals have a good chance of taking the Kings 1st seats, "as previously by his party.

The Conservatives held a 17-13 edge in the last House before dissolution. Redistribution added two more seats this election.

Mr. Campbell, who will become Canada's youngest premier if he forms the next government, said his party had been expecting more of a swing in either direction.

"It may have been one of the quietest campaigns the Island has seen," Mr. Campbell added, "but a great deal of interest has been shown by voters, as we pointed up by the large turnout at the polls."

About 81 per cent of the 54,450 eligible voters went to the polls.

For the first time, all voters could cast their ballots for both councillors and assemblymen. Previous to this election, only specially franchised voters — property owners, clergymen, veterans and their wives—could vote for councillors.

However, once elected, there is no distinction between councillors and assemblymen.

The Liberal leader said that neither the new election procedure nor the redistribution appeared to have influenced the electorate greatly.

He attributed the Liberal gains to good candidates and the fact that all candidates—of both parties—were out campaigning door-to-door for the first time in a long time."

Premier Shaw, however, was more definite about the losses his party suffered.

He said he feels Liberal promises of free school books, increases in minimum wages, veterans' pay and medical care insurance plans "caught the public eye."

"We didn't go quite that far," Mr. Shaw said of his Conservative party. "We stood on the record of the government."

Resignations Of 900 Teachers Are Accepted

QUEBEC (CP) — Representatives of Quebec City area school boards said mass resignations Tuesday of some 900 teachers have been accepted.

Nineteen of the 20 boards represented voted on the resignations. The secretary of the other board was absent. The 18 local boards voted to accept the resignations but do not include Quebec City.

The teachers decided Monday to resign in protest over the refusal of Quebec Catholic school boards to re-hire Victor Doucet, president of the Quebec County Teachers Association, for the next school year. Some 900 attended the meeting.

Spokesmen for the teachers said the board's refusal to rehire Mr. Doucet's contract results from his union activities, adding that the board had sent him a letter two weeks earlier congratulating him on his teaching work.

TUESDAY, May 31, 1966

The cabinet called a night session after violence was reported to have erupted along the Montreal waterfront during a strike by longshoremen.

No announcement was made after the meeting.

Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons earlier during the question period that every effort was being made to end the strike, arising over terms for a new contract.

The government reported it is going to expand its language-training programs for civil servants.

Opposition leader Diefenbaker asked about a Canadian Javelin Ltd. press release which he said contradicted the statement that Ottawa had announced intention to build a $35,000,000 highway in Labrador.

The government had decided any such announcement but Mr. Diefenbaker said produce John C. Doyle of Jasper, a Liberal party supporter and his company "wouldn't be putting out things that aren't true."

The Commons gave third reading to the bill, sending it to the Senate.

It then gave second reading to the mammoth bill to give collective bargaining rights to civil service and sent it to a Commons - Senate committee for further study.

Opposition MPs agreed with the principle of the bill, but many found it to be too complex.

WEDNESDAY, June 1

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to continue study of a bill to revamp the Civil Service Commission. The Senate meets at 3 p.m.

Cuban Airlift Brings 25,000 Exiles to U.S.

MIAMI (AP) — The airlift from Cuba, six months old today, has brought nearly 25,000 refugees exiles to the United States and cost American taxpayers nearly $10,000,000.

Planes arrive at the rate of 1,000 weekly. Nearly two-thirds of them fly on to other U.S. cities to start life anew.

The others join the Miami expatriot colony of more than 100,000.

There has been no U.S.-Cuba commercial airline traffic since the 1962 missile crisis.

Flights into Cuba out of the exiles are 18 to 45 years old, the Cuban refugee centre reports.

With jobs plentiful in the United States, Cubans generally have little trouble finding employment.

Yorkville Habitues and Police Work Together to Stop Strife

TORONTO (CP)—Yorkville's teen-agers will team up with police and the Canadian Civil Liberties Association in a concerted effort to bring peace to the downtown village where disturbances broke out last weekend, a Toronto lawyer said Tuesday.

Sidney B. Linder, member of the Civil Liberties Association, said the Association will organize meetings at a church in the Yorkville area. Police, Crown attorneys and lawyers will address village teen-agers at the meetings, he said.

Deputy Police Chief Harold Adamson said in an interview police will co-operate fully in the program.

Arrests during weekend disturbances nearly sparked a riot early Sunday when about 2,000 teen-agers gathered around police constables and forced them to the top of a car before police reinforcements arrived.

Earlier Tuesday, Mr. Linden and several Yorkville teen-agers went to Queen's Park where they put up $300 bail to obtain release or four youths charged with a public disturbance while picketing a police station Sunday evening.

Ambulance Services To Be Aided

TORONTO (CP)—A bill was presented in the legislature Tuesday that provides for government subsidies as well as licensing and minimum standards for ambulance services and personnel in Ontario.

In a statement after his bill received first reading, Health Minister Matthew Dymond announced intention to build a "trask force" to study and "report as soon as possible" on what arrangements should be made in the province for ambulance services.

"The ultimate objective of the bill," Dr. Dymond said, "is to provide Ontario with adequate services of high quality, organized in a way that will ensure speedy and quick service with techniques to provide accurate financing."

PROMISES HELP

He said the government would set up interim financial relief for ambulance services in the present fiscal year that will be "helpful" until the long-range program can be implemented.

The subsidy, he said, will be up to 50 per cent of the amount spent on ambulance services by municipality, local board of health, public hospital or non-profit organization.

Under the new bill, the municipality would continue to provide ambulance services is transferred from the Municipal Act.

Economic Nationalism Called False Goal by Robarts at C of C Meet

NORTH BAY (CP)—Premier John Robarts of Ontario hit out at the idea of economic nationalism Tuesday night, calling it a false goal and one that "would harm no one more than ourselves."

He told the closing session of the annual meeting of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce that Canada cannot afford to discourage direct foreign investment, and argued that Canada must devote its efforts to using the opportunities provided by foreign investment to achieve growth and national objectives.

He made no reference in his speech to the policies published recently by Walter Gordon, former Liberal finance minister, which propose steps to control foreign investment in Canadian resources. But many of the 300 delegates saw it as a sharp attack on Mr. Gordon's proposals.

The true objective is the maximum increase in jobs and real income," Mr. Robarts said. "This can be achieved only through gains in productivity which improve our ability to compete with other countries."

He noted there had been criticisms recently of foreign control of segments of Canadian industry and mining.

MARKET ASSURED

"Even the strongest critics of foreign investment acknowledge, however, the validity of direct investment in mining. It makes since it almost invariably provides for the development of Canadian resources, depends on the basis of a guaranteed market assured.

"As for manufacturing, most of the foreign ownership is in this area. It is difficult to see how it has been detrimental to this province.

"In fact, the growing proportion of foreign ownership in manufacturing results from the competitive attractions of our factories and their custom of plowing back savings to increase capacity.

"Consequently these firms provide expanding job opportunities at rising wages and substantially above average. Such jobs are unacceptable. These firms are the transmission effective instruments for the introduction of new efficiency and productivity of the modern economy."

Mr. Robarts said it has been suggested—as Mr. Gordon did in his book A Choice For Canada—that Canada adopt discriminatory policies against foreign investment or at least apply such restrictions for Canadian investment.

"... It is clear that the adoption of discriminatory policies would harm no one more than ourselves."

FLOW DECLINES

He added that the actual flow of direct investment to Canada has declined substantially recently.

In 1960 it had amounted to $1,000,000 but in 1965 this had declined by 40 per cent to $300,000,000.

In policy sessions, the chamber urged that the job of tackling the problem of high unemployment.

The delegates voted to undertake a year's study of the problem of unemployment as an appealing situation—after the chamber's executive said it would take the study on itself if the Ontario government as soon as possible.

They were acting on a presentation from the Kitchener chamber which said efforts to provide more highway safety have been a weak and confused.

"It might be said with truth that we are in a crisis situation but with no co-ordinated plan being taken to meet it," the Kitchener chamber said.

It also said recent attacks on car safety have "an air of scapegoating about them."

DRIVER IS CULPRIT

"Certainly good safety standards are desirable and should be energetically sought, but the real culprit is the driver. . . . It seems obvious that at best safety features can only minimize the results of accidents."

The Kitchener statement said only the government can control.

Made Financing Error Commission Is Told

TORONTO CP) — Gerald Groship, 51, of Toronto, told a royal commission Tuesday he made a financing error because he was "overly" a Dr. Pownall Morgan, former president of Atlantic Acceptance Corp.

Mr. Groship told the commission, investigating the collapse last year of Atlantic, that he signed personal guarantees totelling $2,025,000 as security for loans of $3,176,829 from Commodore Sales Acceptance Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Atlantic.

He said he got the impression the securities were bonfine and would be "safe." He added that he would never be called upon to make good.

"I was reluctant to sign the guarantees but Mr. Morgan said that in cases of large loans it was necessary to do this."

Mr. Groship said he would not have signed the guarantees had he been asked to do so by anybody other than Mr. Morgan.

"I was awed by his position. Most certainly I was. I was not good for this kind of money."

Mr. Groship said he controlled stores known as the Little Scot group and three concessions in 13 discount stores operated by Towers Marts and Properties. Loans from Atlantic companies were for the Little Scot stores.

He said the Little Scot stores were started as a rescue operation when the Towers concessions ran into serious financial difficulties.

Mr. Groship blamed what he called "reluctant financings" by Commodore Sales for the failure of his business to prosper. He said Commodore exercised such close supervision over operations that "I couldn't even issue a cheque."

In 1964, the Little Scot stores had been given enough time and permitted to continue, he said, they would have succeeded.

The Little Scot enterprise and the concessions, which operated in the Towers Marts, said Consman Ltd., had operating losses of $600,000 a year for three years, Mr. Groship said.

Mr. Groship said about a month before Atlantic's collapse last June, Mr. Morgan told him he was going to arrange to put $100,000 into the Little Scot group and three concessions in a corporation failed before this could be done.

Dominican Republic's Turbulent Politics Take Another Step

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Dominican Republic's turbulent politics took another step today with national elections that may be as important to the United States as, to the 3,500,000 Dominicans.

It is a miracle of sorts that elections for president are being held at all, 18 months after the U.S. interrupted a civil war with 20,000 troops on grounds of forestalling a Communist coup.

About 7,000 of those troops still are there—the Johnson administration's way of saying that the five-nation peace force subsequently established.

For the U.S., the pre-election move designed to register its neutrality in the campaign, proposed Sunday that the forces be moved out promptly after the election.

The fact that they do have will be some indication of the Dominican stability.

N. Viet Nam Hammered for Second Day

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. planes hammered North Viet Nam hard for a second successive day Tuesday and the air force said its biggest strike since the start of the war. The U.S. command said three planes were shot down and the crews of two lost.

Air force and navy planes flew a total of 81 missions against targets in the Hanoi complex, 80 miles northwest of Hanoi and other targets.

The command said the planes eluded four Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles during attacks on missile sites near Haiphong.

The three planes lost brought to 251 the total number of U.S. planes reported lost over North Viet Nam. Peking radio broadcast a claim from Hanoi that the North Vietnamese shot down seven American planes Tuesday.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

There'll be no many horses at the Quinte Driving and Riding Club's inaugural meet Saturday night that I wouldn't be surprised to see some of them at the post-mistake betting on how many cash customers are in the pews.

At this writing some 44 sidewheelers and trotters representing the best harness flesh of the district and farwest pastures are entered. And club president Gerald Vance opines there'll be more.

For the first time in the club's history the horses will go to the post in ten heats. There will be a free-for-all, two single dashes and four double dashes. Post time is eight o'clock.

The track has a new 1966 look. A lighting system which encircles the raceway is said to be the best of any small track in Ontario. The light clusters are ten feet closer together than the Kingston and Peterborough tracks.

"So help me" said an enthusiastic spokesman, "you can almost see the color of the horses' eyes from the grandstand. I know for a fact you can read a newspaper under them."

A new fence also encircles the track which, it is stated, will be in fine condition for the opening meet.

As has been noted before, the number of seasonal meets this year allotted the city club has been restricted to five. This includes the Black Diamond Cheese Stakes scheduled for Saturday, August 13th.

The drastic cut in the number of meets resulted from a somewhat wacky distribution of charters by the Ontario government. Practically all of the province's smaller harness racing clubs with the exception of Peterborough were caught with their charters not down.

Protest was made by a hurriedly organized committee representing five small racing centres but this got the brushoff by the Ontario provincial secretary and its treasurer.

"Too late" they chorused "all the charters have been placed." Peterborough is the only centre that will race a full quota of meets this summer.

Later protests were lodged by Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings East, and members of the committee headed by Quinte Club president Vance.

"We have received a letter of apology from the government ministers" he said. "All of now there is a strong possibility that our quota of meets will be extended by at least four. Mr. Rollins has done a lot of work for us."

"Furthermore" he added, "we expect to obtain our own charters next year. This will mean two which will give us 28 nights of racing a season."

As of now the four meets scheduled for this season will be held on the four Saturdays of June.

Frruldeal Vance predicts the Black Diamond Cheese Stakes will be the best stace fie inaugurathon two years ago. Last year the Stakes was won by Early Lake John in track record time. Incidentally racing fale was united to Early Lake John's owner. He was offered $25,000 for the horse by a well-known Canadian racing driver immediately following the Stakes — and turned it down. Later the horse went lame. It is not racing this season.

"As of now" said the president "we have 43 entries for the Stakes which have paid their second instalments. This could mean a starting gate of 36 horses — and a purse well in excess of $2,000. Last year the purse was $1,600."

The Stakes Race shouldn't need too much garnishing with other heats. If the entry is 36 horses this means four heats of eight entries each. The climactic Stakes heat will see the winners and second-place horses vie for the trophy and top cash award.

President Vance anticipates a large crowd at Saturday's opening meet. "From inquiries we have received at general interest" he said, "we should get a bumper crowd. The pari-mutuels will be in operation as will the photo-finish cameras."

Off-Form Marichal Retains Magic

By JIM RACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Juan Marichal was tired. His slow curve was hurting. His control was off, and he gave up the astounding total of three walks. His slider and screwball weren't working. But he won.

The high-kicking right-hander, despite the fatigue and pain in his arm and off-form pitching, ran his perfect record to 10-0 Tuesday night in San Francisco Giants' 5-3 victory over Cincinnati Reds.

Marichal managed to double home the Giants' first two runs, stolen out to, blank the Reds through six innings, and recorded his ninth complete game in 11 starts. But he was tagged for two homers by Joe Cardenas in the seventh and ninth, and his earned run average zoomed to 0.80 from 0.59.

Jim Hart made it 4-0 with a homer in the seventh, giving Marichal the edge he needed to survive Cardenas' late - game slugging.

MAINTAIN LEAD

By winning the Giants kept their National League lead at 2½ games over Los Angeles Dodgers, who made it seven victories in their last eight games with a 6-2 decision over Atlanta Braves.

Elsewhere St. Louis Cardinals won their fourth straight, beating Houston Astros 3-0 behind the five-hit pitching of Ray Washburn and Hal Woodeshick. Bill White led Philadelphia Phillies over New York Mets 6-4 while Chicago Cubs nipped Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1.

Hart hit his 13th homer in the seventh, but Cardenas had matched Marichal's scoreless string at 30 innings with the homer in the seventh, and connected again in the ninth after Tommy Harper's double.

The loss was Cincinnati's fifth in a row and the seventh in nine decision this year for Ellis, a 22-game winner last season.

Lou Johnson's triple and Al Ferrara's two - run double against Phil Ellis Dodgers to a 3-0 first - inning lead over the Braves. Pitcher Claude Osteen homered in the fourth, but the Los Angeles southpaw left in the seventh with a blister on his pitching hand and Phil Regan finished.

WASHBURN TIRED

Washburn allowed the Astros three hits before tiring and coming out in the sixth inning. Woodeshick gave up two more. The Cards got their three runs in the fifth after two outs. White broke a 4-4 tie between the Phils and Mets with a fifth-inning homer, then drove in another Philadelphia run in the ninth with a single—his third RBI of the game. Dick Stuart and Johnny Lewis hit Met homers.

Pirates Cubs netted both their runs off Pirate Lefty Bob Veale in the fifth. Chicago pitcher Ernie Broglio started the rally with a double, then took third on a wild pitch. Adolfo Phillips was hit by a pitch. Joe Amalfitano's fly cashed in Broglio, Phillips stole second and Ron Santo stroked a run-scoring single.

Giants' Ace

Looks Like '30' Winner

CINCINNATI (AP) — Juan Marichal is still undefeated, and has an excellent chance of becoming baseball's first 30-game winner since Dizzy Dean in 1934. He's a third of the way there now.

The San Francisco Giants' star right-hander recorded his 10th victory Tuesday night, a 5-3 decision over Cincinnati Reds, who suffered their fourth straight defeat.

Marichal admitted his 10th victory didn't come easy.

"I'm glad I had a good fast ball," he said. "I had bad control. My elbow also was hurting.

"I threw more fast balls than anytime this season because my slider and screwball were bad."

The Reds snapped Marichal's string of 30 scoreless innings when Leo Cardenas homered in the seventh inning. Cardenas also slammed a two-run homer in the ninth inning.

WALKED THREE

Marichal, who had walked only eight batters in 99 innings before Tuesday's game, issued three passes, two of them back-to-back in the fourth inning.

"I tried various pitches, but couldn't get the plate in the fourth inning," he said.

"I don't think rookie pitchers do as bad as I did sometime," he added with a grin.

The high - kicking Marichal said he still was tired from the 14 - inning 9-0 game he won against Philadelphia Phillies last week, but he didn't show it.

He was able to work out of a jam in the fourth when he struck out John Edwards. He struck out Art Shamsky with two on base in the eighth inning. And after Cardenas homered in the ninth, Marichal got Pete Rose to force Tommy Helms for the final out.

Marichal put the Giants ahead with a two - run double and scored a run in San Francisco's three-run fifth inning.

Softball Games Washed Out

Rain, just before and right at game time, forced the postponement of last night's Belleville and District Softball League match between the Bobcats and Trudeau Motors.

The game has been rescheduled for this Friday night at Alemite Park. Game time is 8:30.

Tonight, Trudeau visit Bloomfield, in Picton, at 8:00 and tomorrow Ellis Juniors and Bobcats play at the Alemite, at 6:30. There will be a league executive meeting to deal with a couple of problems prior to Thursday's game, at 8:00 p.m. The City Hotel - Black Diamond Commercial League game was also postponed by rain last night. -

Bowman, Poile Get NHL Berths

MONTREAL (CP) — William (Scotty) Bowman, 32, has been appointed assistant general manager and coach of the newly-formed St. Louis Blues entry of the National Hockey League.

Bowman said Tuesday he has been appointed for an indefinite term, beginning June 1 this year, although the team is not scheduled to enter league competition before the 1967-68 season. Lynn Patrick, former general manager of Boston Bruins, recently took over in the same capacity with the St. Louis club.

At 32, Bowman is the youngest coach to be appointed in the NHL and despite his youth has 13 years of hockey experience as a player and a coach behind him.

All of Bowmen's experience came in the Montreal Canadiens organization.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Norman (Bud) Poile, 47, retired as free organizer in hockey circles where he spent much of his life, was named head of player personnel Tuesday for the Philadelphia franchise in the National Hockey League.

Poile, a former player, coach and general manager, will be in complete charge of the hockey phase of the Philadelphia team. As a vice-president, his job will be to find and sign players, set up a scouting system and establish a farm setup.

Poile comes to Philadelphia from the San Francisco Seals of the Western Hockey League. He was both coach and general manager of the Seals for the last four years.

During his NHL career, Poile played for Toronto Maple Leafs, Chicago Black Hawks, Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings.

Boxers Ask Fight To Finish

GROSSINGER, N.Y. (AP)— Heavyweights George Chuvalo and Oscar Bigpo Bonavena will ask the New York State Athletic Commission today to let them fight until one or the other wins June 23 when they meet in Madison Square Garden.

The match is a scheduled 10-rounder.

If the commission suspends the law prohibiting such fights, it would be the first in 36 years that no limit has been set on the number of rounds.

The idea originated with Bonavena, the South American heavyweight champion.

Bonavena said: "Everybody expects a knockout in our fight so let's make sure they see one. Why spoil it for them by limiting the fight to 10 rounds? This is not a boxing match. This is a fight."

"If the fight goes the way it should," Canadian champion Chuvalo said, "we should be just about warmed up by that time."

There's a law against fights to the finish in every state, but the two fighters will request New York to suspend the law for this one bot.

The Handguns

Don Parks had the high score, 259, at the Quinte Marksmens' regular outdoor shoot last night.

Louis Kulcsar was second with 256, followed by Frank Allis, 254, Bert Waters, 252, and, Dick Charlton, with 240. Ray Beard 233, Harry Hodgisnon, 226, and Charley Thorne, 181, were the other shooters.

Indians Win 17-Inning Marathon

Batter Fans 6 Times

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Cleveland Indians outlasted California Angels through 17 innings Tuesday night for a 7-6 decision in the longest American League game of the season so far and handed California outfielder Rick Reichardt posted an unenviable record during the marathon.

The big hit was a bases-loaded single in the top of the 17th off loser Dean Chance by Pedro Gonzalez after one-out singles by Vic Davalillo and Chuck Hinton and an intentional walk to Leon Wagner.

Chance had come on in the 15th inning, the ninth California pitcher, after Lee had held the Indians to two hits from the eighth through the 14th innings.

Steve Hargan, who replaced Cleveland starter Sonny Siebert in the seventh, blanked the Angels until the 17th and picked up his first victory of the year. The Angels scored a run after two were out in the 13th but Luis Tiant came in to get the last out.

Reichardt tied a major league strikeout record for an extra-inning game by fanning six times. The mark was set by Carl Weilman of the St. Louis Browns in 1913, and matched by Don Hoak of Philadelphia in 1956.

HOMER TIED IT

The Angels tied the score 4-4 in the seventh on Jose Cardenal's two-run homer. Chico Salmon capped a three-run homer in the Indians, four-run third inning.

In other games Baltimore Orioles trampled Minnesota Twins 14-6, Kansas City Athletics smashed Detroit Tigers 7-1, Boston Red Sox nipped Chicago White Sox 1-0 and Washington Senators smote New York Yankees 5-4.

Rookie Paul Casanova crossed up Ralph Houk and the Yankees with a three-run double to pace the Senators.

The 6-foot-4 catcher proved a perfect mate for left - hander Pete Richert, who beat the Yankees for the first time with a four-hitter and extended his current winning string to five.

The loss was the third for the punchless Yankees in their last four games.

GET 19 HITS

The Orioles rocked loser Camilo Pascual and three successors for 19 hits, including a three-run triple by Dave Johnson. Andy Etchebarren also drive in three runs with a homer and double.

Brooks Robinson doubled in two runs for the Orioles, boosting his league-leading RBI total to 42, while Luis Aparicio hit a two-run homer.

Kansas City's Fred Talbot, given ninth-inning help by reliever Lew Krausse, checked the Tigers while Danny Cater, with three hits, and Mike Hershberger, with two, paced the Athletics' attack. Cater and Hershberger each drove in two runs and Larry Stahl cracked a homer off loser Bill Monbouquette.

The Red Sox snapped Chicago's shutout string at 30 innings when Tony Conigliaro homered off Joel Horlen in the second, then held off the White Sox behind southpaw Dick Stigman, who scattered seven hits.

Mud Hens Nip Braves, Chiefs Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was cold!

Toronto Maple Leafs couldn't stand it, but Buffalo Bisons liked it and with they hadn't.

Although the unseasonably cold temperatures forced postponement of an International League game between Toronto and Rochester Red Wings, the Bisons went out against Syracuse Chiefs and lost 6-2 Tuesday night.

Toledo Mud Hens defeated Richmond Braves 7-4 in the only other scheduled game.

Only 212 fans braved the frigid temperatures as the Chiefs crushed six hits and the wildness of Buffalo pitching to gain the victory.

Larry Clayton led the Syracuse attack with a towering homer that capped a four-run uprising in the fifth inning.

Hegan's homer, his fifth of the season, came in the fifth inning with one man on base. Bobby Murcer hit a two-run triple for the Hens.

Mosport "200"

Favor American Drivers

By JOHN TRACY

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP)—American drivers racing British-built cars powered by United States engines are expected to dominate the Player's 200 race for sports cars here Saturday.

Among the 41 drivers seeking to share the $53,000 and the Player's Cup will be 27 Americans including Daytona and Sebring winner Ken Miles from California, Charlie Hayes of Rockville, Md., winner at Laguna Seca, Calif., and Chuck Parsons of Carmel, Calif., current leader on the U.S. road-racing championship circuit.

All three commonwealth entries are threats. New Zealanders Bruce McLaren and Chris Amon are racing Olde-powered Elva McLarens. McLaren won the 200 in 1964 in another car of his own design. Jackie Stewart of Dumbarton, Scotland, who looked a winner until the late stages of the Indianapolis 500 Monday, will drive a Ford-powered Lola T70.

Canada's hopes lie in German - born Ludwig Heimrath who finished last year's 200 third behind winner John Surtees of London, 1964 world champion, and Texan Jim Hall, winner of the 1965 Canadian Grand Prix. Heimrath, who runs a garage in Toronto, will drive a Ford-powered McLaren with the number 39, a hangover from his Porsche racing days. The race over the twisting 2.5-mile road circuit at Mosport, 45 miles northeast of Toronto, will be run in two 100-mile heats.

Abandon World Hockey

EDMONTON (CP) — Senator Hartland Dem. Molson, chairman of the board of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, says he favors abandonment of Canada's national hockey team project and withdrawal from world competition until that competition becomes honest.

European players are really professionals because they work only at hockey, he said. They cannot be classed as amateurs in the same sense as the students on the Canadian team.

Senator Molson said Monday the only solution is to have Canada's best professionals play Europe's best professionals "and we have no intention of playing them unless they play our rules."

The nationals have been in existence for three years and have never placed better than third in world competition.

TAKE LESS CUT WHEN SAND IS WET

The texture of the sand makes a great difference in the action that the clubhead and ball will take on trap shots.

When the sand is wet, you should make a shallower cut under the ball. You should play the shot so that the club contacts the sand closer to the ball than normal and then just shaves a thin slice of sand.

Wet sand will resist your clubhead more than will dry sand. Whenever your club might cut readily through dry sand, it will slow down considerably in wet sand—unless you make a shallow cut.

On shots from wet sand, imagine that you are making your first cut when peeling an orange. Don't cut too deeply or it will squirt all over your hands.

Be counted for Canada

A census taker from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics will visit your home soon to ask you these five simple questions as part of the 1966 Census of Canada. The census starts June 1st.

Your answers, when related to the answers from millions of other Canadians, will provide basic facts on Canada's growth and development as a nation. These facts are essential to business and industry and to governments at all levels.

Reliable facts about Canada's people are needed for the planning of future schools, highways, hospitals and other public services, and for marketing and research.

The information you give the census taker is completely confidential. This is assured by federal law — the Statistics Act. And if you've any doubts that he is an official census taker don't hesitate to ask for his credentials. Be counted for Canada...

Census '66
JUST 5 SIMPLE QUESTIONS
1. Name of person?
2. Relationship to head of household?
3. Male or female?
4. Age at last birthday?
5. Single, married, widowed or divorced?

Householders will also be asked whether the home is owned or rented. Farmers are asked additional questions, which for their convenience, will be mailed to them in advance.

Anthony Eden Suggests Way to Peace in Viet Nam

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—CBS' public affairs program Tuesday night consisted of a simple, forthright interview with Anthony Eden, now the Earl of Avon, on his suggestions for achieving a peace in Viet Nam.

Lord Avon, who is retired, recently wrote a book on the subject. He is familiar with the conflict since he was chairman of the Geneva conference which 12 years ago worked on the problem.

In response to some good questions during the half-hour program by correspondent Charles Collingwood, Lord Avon proposed that Laos, Cambodia, North and South Viet Nam—formerly called Indochina—be declared a "neutral belt" under an international treaty made within the framework of the Geneva conference.

He said that while neither China nor the United States is prepared to see the other in control of Viet Nam, both might be able to agree to a neutralized Indochina.

The former British prime minister also noted, almost in passing, that the massive bombing of Britain during the Second World War had the effect of strengthening, rather than weakening the people's resistance.

Jean Arthur, once an important film star and a fine light comedienne, will be the star of a CBS comedy series next season. She will play a lady lawyer.

Since it is impossible for one or even a team of writers to turn out enough scripts for a season, the script writing assignments will be parcelled out among a number of professionals.

Jay Richard Kennedy, whose title is executive producer of the series, has whipped up a 16-page manual to give each writer an adequate fill-in on the characters.

Patricia Marshal — Miss Arthur, she is a 5-ft-4 widow with a son who also is a lawyer.

"The husband she once had must have been a wonderful guy," Kennedy wrote in his handbook. "And somewhere along the line she must have come to terms with losing him. The memory of the love must linger on, for the quality of a girl is still present in her; the face of innocence seems to be there; the breathless, somewhat tomboyish quality is still very much alive."

Kennedy already has scripts about her spending an evening at a closed zoo, waking up the animals, and another in which she entertains in the street without a licence.

Jewish Actor Feels Strange Making Film in Germany

By BOB THOMAS

BERLIN (AP) — When an actor named Segal makes a movie about neo-nazism in Berlin, how does he feel?

"Very strange," says George Segal. "Very strange indeed."

The fast-rising young actor is the sole American in the international cast (Alec Guinness, Senta Berger, Max von Sydow) of The Quiller Memorandum. The story depicts the rise of Nazi feeling in today's Germany. The film subject is reported to have stirred some concern among the Germans, ever conscious of their image to the world.

Since he is Jewish, Segal remarked, "I never expected to be in Berlin; I never expected to be in this country."

But the lure of a good script overcame his feelings, and he is here now playing a secret agent who investigates an outbreak of violence caused by laster-day Nazis.

"Of course this is a mythical movement, according to all the Germans you meet," the actor said of his role. "They all claim that they are Jewish grandmothers; at least I have heard that several times. It's impossible to find a Nazi or ex-Nazi."

CRITICIZE THEME

Actually, local criticism of the film's theme is not so much over the existence of new Nazi elements in Germany as those have been reported in the German press. But Berliners claim to have a vast evidence of Nazism in their city, which is much too concerned with other matters.

Segal commented: "It would be surprising if there weren't a resurgence of feeling for the Nazi days. Look at the immense amount of nostalgia for the Second World War in the United States. There must be the same kind of inclination in Germany."

The Quiller Memorandum is the latest advance of the remarkable climb to stardom of George Segal. Three years ago he was slogging his way through the jungle of television series. Now he is in the splendid position of being a hot property.

The warmup started with Ship of Fools, though he found his own work in it wanting. King Rat was better for him; he played the sole American in a British cast.

Then came The Conjurors, now tiled Lost Command. Said he: "I played an Arab in that one. They couldn't get Omar Sharif so they settled for me. The picture's got Anthony Quinn and a lot of battles, so it ought to sell. If it doesn't, what the hell. In dark makeup no one will recognize me."

Minor Baseball Results

Farrell Motors shaded Mel Barriages 7-6 in a BMBA bantam game last night.

A peewee contest between Bad Boys and Sine Shell was washed out by rain.

Sarriages and Farrell's played an even game, with nine hits per team. Steve Hoore pitched the victory and Moe Thompson and Paul Hall the loss.

The winners scored single runs in the first, fourth and fifth and two in each of the third and sixth innings. The losers netted singletons in the first, second, third and seventh and got two in the fifth.

Ron Jury sparked Farrell's at bat with two triples and a double. Terry Pape hit three singles, Tim Cochrane two and Stephen Buckles one.

Glen Carleton had three Barriage singles, Moe Thompson two, Wayne Farrell a double and single, Paul Hall and Brian Coughlin a hit each.

Yesterday's Stars

Pitching—Dick Stigman, Red Sox, scattered seven hits and struck out eight as Boston edged Chicago White Sox 1-0.

Batting—Bill White, Phillies, homered for the decisive run and drove across an insurance run with his third hit of the game in Philadelphia's 6-4 victory over New York Mets.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Fleet Age, a two-year-old colt owned by Glenn Brydson of Toronto, won the $2,500-purse in the mile Greenwood Racetrack Tuesday before 7,532 fans.

Ridden by George Gordon, Fleet Age completed the 4½-furlong distance in :53 2-5 and returned $6.10, $3.60 and $2.50.

The daily double of Kingusio and Paris Clipper paid $36.70 and the quarter of Jaded Mike and Fabison returned $70.

The handle was $472,613.

AT THE PARK — Crouching in terror are Jane Fonda, James Fox, and Robert Redford, three of the stars appearing with Marlon Brando in Sam Spiegel's production "The Chase" in Panavision and Technicolor opening Thursday for its first Belleville showings and staying for a weeks engagement. Redford plays Jane's husband, an escaped convict, and Fox plays her lover. The Columbia pictures release based on the novel and play by Horton Foote, was directed by Arthur Penn from a screenplay by Lillian Hellman. Complete shows are at 7.00 and 9.35 p.m.

Ward Quits Racing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Rodger Ward, one of the greatest drivers in United States auto racing history, quit the sport Tuesday night.

The two-time winner of the Indianapolis 500 - mile race, twice national champion, told the speedway victory dinner:

"I promised myself years ago that whenever auto racing stopped being fun for me, I would quit. Yesterday (Monday), it wasn't fun."

The 45 - year - old veteran choked up, waived his hand at the crowd and said, "I'll see you all . . ." and stumbled back to his seat at the head table.

Ward won the Indianapolis classic in 1959 and 1962. He picked up $11,857 Tuesday night for his 13th-place finish Monday. Last year, Ward failed to qualify for the 500 for the first time in 15 years.

Chuvalo Rated Eighth

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay was named Fighter - of - the-Month for May in Ring magazine's monthly ratings released Tuesday.

Clay stopped Britain's Henry Cooper in the sixth round of their title bout May 21.

The ratings included:

Heavyweights — Champion, Cassius Clay, Louisville, Ky. 1. Ernie Terrell, Chicago. 2. Doug Jones, New York. 3. Williams, Houston.

Light heavyweights — Champion, Jose Torres, New York. 1. Chic Calderwood, Scotland. 2. Eddie Cotton, Seattle, Wash. 3. Pierre Del Papa, Italy.

Middleweights — Champion, Emile Griffith, New York. 1. Nino Benvenuti, Italy. 2. Dick Tiger, Nigeria. 3. Sandro Mazzinghi, Italy.

Welterweights — Champion, Emile Griffith, New York. 1. Jean Josselin, France. 2. Luis Rodriguez, Miami Beach, Fla. 3. Ted Whitfield, Amherst, Mass.

Sanders Leads Way To Bank

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—Doug Sanders continued to pace professional golfers with a banknote of $74,349 through last week's Oklahoma City Open.

Sanders won three of the 17 tournaments in which he played and was among the first five finishers four times. He had $54,551 in official winnings and $19,808 in unofficial money, the Professional Golfers' Association said Tuesday.

Frank Beard was in second place with $53,027, including $49,220 in official winnings and $1,797 unofficial. He won $29,200 official money but him just ahead of Gay Brewer, who won $48,720 in official PGA tourney. Brewer banked $3,908 in other events for a total of $52,628.

T. and S. Softball

Halloway topped Glen Ross 9-4 and Foxboro whipped Wallbridge 13-1 in a pair of Thurlow and Sidney Softball League games last night.

The win was Halloway's first and Glen Ross' first defeat. Ron Denyes hurled six-hit ball for the victors while Keith Grills and Hoff allowed 11 hits in defeat. Gary Ray sparked the Halloway hitters with a homer and single and Ron Denyes got two safeties. Solmes and Fraser each had two losers' hits.

No More Joint Holdout

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I do not foresee Don and I being an entry again."

That's what Dodgers pitcher Sandy Koufax said when questioned about next year's salary negotiations. Prior to this baseball season he and pitching teammate Don Drysdale staged a joint holdout, settling after 32 days for a reported $125,000 and $110,000, respectively.

Koufax is quoted by Bob Hunter of the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner as saying in Atlanta:

"We accomplished what we set out to accomplish, and that is the right of a baseball player to bargain.

"Don and I had three 'final' offers from the Dodgers before we finally agreed on a figure.

"Our fight was to establish ourselves at a certain plateau salarywise. That's the battle of every ball player. . . .

"I'm not going to fight for another big boost. I've reached the level where I want to be."

Groom Soccer Player

TORONTO (CP)—A Germany-born soccer player is being groomed by Toronto Argonauts to handle the Eastern Football Conference club's kicking assignments if veteran Dave Mann decides to retire.

Rolf Herman, 25, is already a first-rate placement kicker, says Curly Morrison, former National Football League punter. Morrison is helping Herman perfect his punting style.

Morrison says Herman uses the side-swinging method of soccer kicking. "That's one bad habit we're trying to break," said Morrison.

Herman, a six-foot, 200-pounder, has been punting the ball 50 and 60 yards consistently in practice. He played the last two seasons with Oakville Black Knights of the Ontario Rugby Football Union Senior League.

Graham Hill Collected $156,297

The total was somewhat less than Jimmy Clark of Scotland, last year's winner and this year's runner-up, collected in 1965. Last year's top prize for Clark was $166,521 from a total purse of $628,380.23.

Clark collected $78,020 for his second-place finish and Jim McElreath of Arlington, Tex., was awarded $34,586 for third.

Billy Foster of Victoria, only Canadian in the race, collected $9,334 for his part of the event that only lasted a few seconds. He was involved in a shunt immediately after the start that set off a chain-reaction of crashes and eliminated 11 of 33 starters.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Longshot Sabrina Lee, owned by George F. Elliot of Clinton, Ont., paid $29.40 to win the first race at Garden City Raceway Tuesday and combined with Miss Capetown in the second for a $343.10 daily double.

HAMBURG, N.Y. (CP) — Mountain Logan, moved to the head at the quarter and was never challenged in winning the $1,400 feature pace Tuesday night at Buffalo Raceway.

Del Manges drove the winner to a two-length victory, his second out of five attempts this year for Justinian Farms of Rochester, N.Y.

Joe Hodgins, 31, a native of Lucan, Ont., scored his first double victory of the meeting when he urged Hi Barnie home in the third and then won in the sixth with Dixie's Alex.

NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville proposes at its meeting on the 20th day of June, 1960, to pass a by-law and other by-laws for the purpose of opening the Front Concession lying between the westerly limit of the Township of Sidney and the western limit of the Township of Thurlow as a King's Highway No. 2 for connecting direction to the Bay of Quinte, and western limit of Thurlow, and more particularly described as follows:

Premising that the meridian line of Farley Avenue has an astronomic bearing of north 11 degrees 26 minutes west and relating all bearings hereon thereto.

Beginning at a point in the westerly limit of Farley Avenue aforesaid, 33 feet, more or less, in a northerly direction from the intersection of the said westerly limit of Farley Avenue and the southern limit of Concession B, No. 2.

Thence south 79 degrees 34 minutes and 30 feet, one or less, to a found survey post and relating all bearings hereon thereto.

Thence south 18 degrees 43 minutes and 30 feet, more or less, to the high water mark of the Bay of Quinte.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that the said Council proposes at the same time by the aforesaid by-law to authorize the issuing of debentures for the cost of the said by-law in the amount of $ 2,500.00 payable in 20 annual instalments of principal and interest, the first of which will be payable in the year 1961, and the last in the year 1980.

The proposed by-law and the plan aforesaid may be seen and inspected may be examined at the office of the Clerk of the City of Belleville at the City Hall.

DATED at Belleville, Ontario, this 18th day of May, 1960.

H. GUNN, Q.C., B.A., Ll.B.,
Barrister, etc.,
311 Victoria Street,
Belleville,
City Solicitor.

mony at home. When you achieve this — you also advance professionally.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTH-DAY . . . you are restless, possess much creative energy. You must find constructive outlet for your abilities. Success indicated in performing arts . . . perhaps in behind-the-scenes work.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Cycle high for Sagittarian, Capricorn. Special word to Cancer: One you admire may not have all the answers. Be self-reliant where basic tasks are concerned.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 2

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Appreciate assets — both material and personal. Avoid needless suvy. Tread lightly. Associates may be tense, on edge. Best not to force issues.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Money affairs require attention. Talk with one who is directly concerned could lead to intelligent plan. Follow through. Income opportunity is present. Recognize it!

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Slow pace. Impatience now proves costly. Improve public appearance. Don't permit impulse to rule logic. Show others you can weigh evidence. Take it easy!

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): You can learn secrets . . . if you make constructive use of knowledge. Be perceptive, look behind the scenes. Reject glitter, concentrate on quality. Improve relations with co-workers.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Promises made to friends now spotlighted. Day when others demand action. Make clear your intentions. Applies especially in dealings with members of opposite sex.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): No time to tell those in authority what to do. Go slowly. Feel your way. Realize security may be at stake. Check income applications. Be safe rather than sorry.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Stress on originality, independence. Ideas may appear plentiful . . . but trick is to choose the best. Confusion exists if you attempt doing too much at once. Settle down.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Harmonize efforts. Pull together for greatest financial gain. This means gain cooperation of mate, partner. Check values, possessions. Result later pays off. Follow through!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22 — Dec. 21): Aggressive action could create erroneous impression. Take care with public response to ideas. Be sure you are within legal rights. Otherwise you may have to retrace steps.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Some restrictions may be for your own good. Realize this and work with material at hand. Avoid carelessness in statements to associates. Some may get jarring impression.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Friendship is two - way street. You could have this issue driven home. Make concessions, changes. Don't provoke tiresome controversy. Stick to principles in diplomatic way.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Ii family matters interfere with work plan . . . strive for greater understanding. Key is harmony at home. When you achieve this — you also advance professionally.

Conservative In Dominican Election Leads

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — Conservative Joaquin Balaguer rolled up a surprisingly strong lead over Juan Bosch in early returns today from a Dominican presidential election.

In voting hailed by foreign observers as astonishingly calm, orderly and fair for a country recently emerged from civil war, Balaguer drew expected strength from conservative rural areas. He also was running strongly in cities where Bosch—deposed nine months after he was elected in 1962—had his greatest support.

Incomplete returns from 15 urban and provincial areas gave Balaguer 130,018 votes to 103,583 for Bosch. Rafael F. Bonelly, the third candidate who has never given a chance, was far behind.

Pre - election forecasts had generally favored Bosch, although newspapermen predicted a tight race.

Bosch had been the country's first democratically elected president and had won by a landslide in 1962. Balaguer, vice - president under dictator Rafael Trujillo, was the candidate of the Reform Party. He also had a period as president after Trujillo's assassination.

For the Dominicans, the central issue in the election seemed to be the restoration of democratic rule in a country which had only seven months of it in the last 36 years.

Agreement Heads Off QPP Strike

QUEBEC (CP) — Agreement was reached early today, heading off a strike of Quebec Provincial Police scheduled for noon today, a Quebec Provincial Police Association spokesman reported.

He said the demands of the association had been met. Government negotiators agreed to recognize the group as bargaining agent for QPP members and to implement a checkoff of union dues.

Terms of the agreement say that with the association's recognition as being truly representative of the 2,300-member police force, it will be allowed to conduct negotiations through an intermediary body with the government.

Robert Burns, chief association negotiator, said a memorandum of agreement has been prepared but it is known through a preliminary count that the association represents between 1,800 and 2900 members of the force.

The agreement provides for the establishment of a committee, made up of equal numbers of persons appointed by the association and the government, which will deal with matters such as length of the work week, salaries and vacations.

Recommendations of this committee will be made to the Lieutenant - governor - in - council or the justice minister.

There was one point on which the negotiators did not come to agreement. Government negotiator asked that non-commissioned officers, who now belong to the association, be required to join a separate body. The lawyers representing the association were unaware this proposal.

At the end of the negotiations, which began Tuesday night, the negotiators said this matter will be studied by them at the beginning of next week.

The government agreed that the association, to be financed by payment of dues only, will be allowed to have these dues deducted under a voluntary check-off system. That is, de-

Space Officials Confident Gemini 9 Will Fly on Friday

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Successful with the unmanned Surveyor moonship but seemingly jinxed in getting men off the ground, space officials feel confident today that Gemini 9's two astronauts finally will get rocket skyward Friday.

They get another chance Friday at 9:39 a.m. EDT to set out on their 70-hour flight, including a satellite rendezvous and 2½-hour space walk.

Engineers pinned the blame for the scrubbed Gemini 9 flight Wednesday on a faulty signal relay system. It kept a guidance command from reaching a black box for electronic translation to the spacecraft.

Faulty parts were replaced and preliminary tests indicated the problem had been solved.

However, flight officials still aren't certain a protective shroud around the docking apparatus on the bottle-shaped line - up target separated as planned once in orbit.

The target, known as an augmented target docking adapter (ATDA), blasted off less than two hours before trouble struck Gemini 9—it continued to circle the earth, performing normally, but will not be in proper position for rendezvous again until Friday.

If still connected, the shroud —which formed the pointed nose of the rocket to prevent damage as the craft rammed through the atmosphere—would dash any hopes Gemini 9 could drive into the link-up collar.

Such link-up practice is vital to U.S. attempts to return men to earth from the moon.

Exile Raids on Cuba Keep Castro on Toes

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The periodic and haphazard raids on Cuba by small exile groups merely keep Premier Fidel Castro's government on its toes and add new tensions to United States-Cuban relations.

The latest such incident involved six men who tried to infiltrate the Caribbean country, only to be intercepted off the Cuban coast. Their launch was sunk and all the raiders either were killed or captured.

The Cuban government immediately charged that the six intruders intended to assassinate Castro and blamed the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency which it said was connected with the plot.

The accusations touched off a Washington inquiry in view of the existing U.S. moratorium on such attacks. U.S. state department officials replied that the U.S. long has sought to discourage raids on Cuba by exiles and emphasized that a number of such expeditions have been halted by the U.S. in waters off Florida.

HEIGHTENS TENSION

The six-man weekend raid, said by Havana to have originated at Marabou Key, Fla., increased the tension created a little earlier by an incident along the line separating the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay from Cuba.

A Cuban soldier was shot by a U.S. reality guarding the base. The U.S. said the Cuban had been enraged in scouting duties inside the base, but Havana argued that the soldier had been on Cuban territory outside Guantanamo Bay.

Castro, as a result of the shooting and perhaps fearing renewed raids by exiles, ordered an "armed alert." The order was followed by a U.S. threat of "grave and regrettable consequences." If more Cuban soldiers intruded into base territory, And Moscow warned that Cuba has "true and reliable friends."

Castro's government no doubt lives in constant fear of a possible American - backed move against Cuba and the shooting incident could only have raised greater fear.

But Havana, Washington and Moscow treated the shooting as a minor incident and the situation now appears to have returned to normal.

Ky's Forces Seize Control Of Buddhist Stronghold, Hue

SAIGON (AP)—Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's South Vietnamese troops took over the Buddhist stronghold of Hue today without any resistance from Buddhist-led elements or anti-government troops that have held the northern city in open rebellion since mid-March.

The junta's forces seized Hue's radio station and, other strongpoints in the city 400 miles northeast of Saigon a day after the ruling generals came to a political agreement with their Buddhist opponents in Saigon.

Hue was the last territorial stronghold of the anti-government forces. Its recapture was a major victory for Ky, who has managed to stay in power with the support of his fellow generals and the United States despite the massive campaign mounted against him by the Buddhists.

After weeks of street disturbances by Buddhist youths Saigon appeared unnaturally calm today. However, some Buddhist elements protested the Buddhist - government compromise agreement to add 10 civilians to the ruling directorate of 10 generals.

Following up ks seizure May 23 of Da Nang, the other Buddhist stronghold, the junta's troops swept into Hue without a shot after the departure of units of the dissident-ridded 1st Vietnamese Division.

Wednesday's more than 1,000 students sacked and burned the U.S. consulate and an adjoining consulate residence in Hue.

A major factor in the government's reassertion of authority in Hue was a pledge of loyalty to the Saigon regime by Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi, the rival to Ky whose ouster March 10 as commander of the northernmost 1st Corps gave the Buddhists an opportunity for their anti-government campaign.

Ky and Thi came to a truce last week at a meeting arranged by the United States.

Buddhist crowds reacted angrily to the announcement of the compromise formula Wednesday. A mob of youths burned an effigy of President Johnson.

The agreement came after two meetings of the ruling junta and representatives of the Buddhist institute. The chief provision was that 10 civilians would be named by "mass organizations, religious and political parties" to the ruling directorate by Sunday.

It also called for election of a new junta chairman next Monday. The present chairman is Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, a Roman Catholic chief of state who with Ky has been a chief target of Buddhist protests.

The enlarged junta—or directorate—is also to name a "people's and armed forces council" before June 19 to help the present war cabinet until a civilian government takes over.

The junta has pledged election of a constituent assembly Sept. 11 to draft a constitution and clear the way for a civilian regime.

Striking Photos Lunar Landscape Being Sent Back

By RALPH DIGHTON

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Surveyor I, defying longshot odds against a first-try success, televised striking photos of the lunar landscape today after a seemingly perfect landing on the moon.

The pictures indicated to scientific viewers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory that the Sea of Storms target area has a relatively smooth, hard surface apparently suitable as a possible descent point for future astronauts.

The successful gentle touchdown, executed precisely as scheduled, was viewed as a long stride forward for the United States' Apollo lunar exploration program. Surveyor's rocket braking system is similar to that on the craft astronauts will use for a landing later in the decade.

A picture series beginning at 5:45 a.m. EDT, using a different TV screen system than that of two earlier batches, showed a broad plain devoid of major features, peppered with either pebbles or pits caused by meteorites. There were several small promi nences, and some gouging, as if the surface had been struck by objects from space at an angle.

The pictures showed no damage to the spidery, instrument-jammed, craft, 10 feet high and 6½ feet in diameter. And they showed its foot-resting stop the crust — important evidence in view of opinions of some scientists that the surface might be deep dust or spongy lava that could swallow a landing vehicle.

LAUNCHED MONDAY

The 620 - pound Surveyor planted its three legs firmly on the lunar crust at 2:17:37 a.m. EDT, 63 hours and 250,000 miles after its launch Monday from Cape Kennedy.

A laboratory spokesman said after viewing the first 144 pic-

Rhodesia Talks Resumed

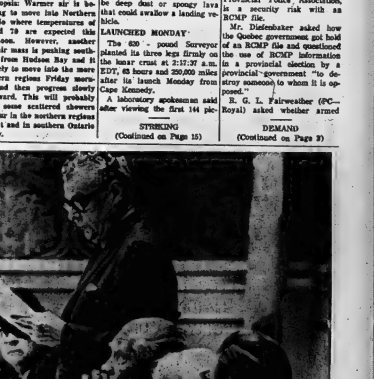
SALISBURY (Reuters) — The second round of informal talks between British and Rhodesian officials was due to open today behind closed doors, as did initial discussions in London last month.

The two teams — seeking a basis for a negotiated settlement of the six-month Rhodesian independence crisis — were unchanged, except for the addition of an extra man on each side.



The teams had 10 days to think over the initial discussions and prepare for the current round.

Government officials here stressed that the secrecy the British government requested for the talks will be maintained.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Warmer air is beginning to move into Northern Ontario where temperatures of around 70 are expected this afternoon. However, another cold air mass is pushing southward from Hudson Bay and it is likely to move into the more northern regions Friday morning and then progress slowly eastward. This will probably cause some scattered showers to occur in the northern regions tonight and in southern Ontario Friday.

Hang Four Politicians In Public

By ARNOLD AMBER

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)— More than 80,000 silent spectators watched as four former prominent cabinet ministers were hanged in one of Leopoldville's main squares today for plotting to overthrow the government.

Former prime minister Evariste Kimba, 40, appears the first to go to the gallows. He held himself erect, with a black towel over his face and his hands tied behind his back.

The others — Alexandre Mambu, 45, a former minister of lands; Senator Emmanuel Bamba, 46, a former finance minister and Jerome Anany, a former defence minister—were executed at 20-minute intervals. The four condemned men all

Demand Strike Details

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—The opposition demanded more information about the issues in the Quebec longshoremen's strike Wednesday as the New Democratic Party charged that Labor Minister Nicholson has only given the management side.

Meanwhile, NDP Leader Douglas said the cost of living and automation are responsible for the growing number of labor disputes and will be for more.

He and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said they want a full account from Mr. Nicholson. They did not get it as the labor minister declined to make an opening statement and time ran out.

Mr. Diefenbaker indicated he will move today that the Commons adjourn regular business to debate an issue that has come up in the Quebec provincial election campaign—the firing of Arthur Vachon from the Quebec Provincial Police and his record.

Premier Lesage has said Mr. Vachon, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association, is a security risk with an RCMP file.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked how the Quebec government got hold of an RCMP file and questioned the use of RCMP information in a provincial election by a provincial government "to destroy someone to whom it is opposed."

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Royal) asked whether armed

Belleville Man Possessor Of Fenian Raid Sword

A Belleville man has what has been described as a rare souvenir of a local unit that saw action during the Fenian Raids of 100 years ago. Fred Smith, 378 Sidney St., has an officer's sword and scabbard dating back to that era. Engraving on the sword reads: "Rifle Volunteers Grand Trunk Railway Regiment."

According to Leslie Whitford of Scarborough, Mr. Smith's sword is one of the very few relics in existence from the days of the Grand Trunk Railway Regiment, which was formed in April, 1866, renamed the Grand Trunk Railway Brigade in February, 1878 and was disbanded in June, 1881. Mr. Whitford has endeavored to locate such things as swords, rifles, uniforms, cap badges, belts and buttons from the days of the regiment, without success.

Mr. Smith, former drum major of the Quinte Highland Pipe Band, purchased the sword in 1959 in order to complete his Highland uniform. He paid $3 for the sword and about the same amount to have it refurbished. It was not until 1962 that he became aware of the significance of his find. On November, 1962, a letter from Mr. Whitford appeared in The Intelligencer. In the letter, the Scarborough resident appealed for information on the Grand Trunk Railway Regiment. Since then, he and Mr. Smith have been working in a common cause. But there have been no further reports on the finding of similar items relating to the regiment.

Mr. Whitford's explanation of the scarcity of relics pertaining to the regiment, is that they may have been destroyed during the scrap metal drives of World War I.

The Belleville unit in the regiment was Company 7 of the 3rd Rifle Battalion. A Captain Nunn was in command. There were companies in Port Hope and Kingston.

Bowling League Holds Banquet

The Alouette Club five-pin bowling league honored its team and individual champions at a banquet held in St. Joseph's Parish Hall recently.

Presentation of the league championship trophy was made by Msgr. J. A. Carley to James Hultquist, captain of the winning "Alouettes" team. Other members of the team were: Mrs. Cecile Poirier, Mrs. Liss Duchesne, Claude Hoard, Adrien Gelinas and Gerard Poirier. Each of the bowlers on the team received an individual trophy. The same team was in the roll-off championship.

Individual winners received trophies and these went to Gloria Barnett and James Hultquist for high averages, to Rejeanne Morin and Al Sullivan for high triples and to Lisa Duchesne and Francois. Duclos for high singles.

Special prizes were awarded to Solange Chesnut and Agnatius Verney of ... for given to secretary-treasurer J. A. C. Berube, as a token of appreciation from the league. Mr. Berube is president of the Alouette Club.

The banquet dinner was prepared by the ladies of St. Joseph's Catholic Women's League. Dancing and entertainment completed the evening.

SCHOOL CHOSEN AS EXHIBIT BY LOCAL FIRM — Photos of the new High School of Commerce in Ottawa, a current project of Wilson Concrete of Belleville, have been chosen by the local firm to be sent as an exhibit to the 1966 International Prestressing Federation Congress in Paris.

Wilson Concrete Will Exhibit Ottawa Job Photos in Paris

One of Wilson Concrete's largest current projects, the new High School of Commerce in Ottawa, has been chosen by the Belleville firm as its exhibit for the 1966 International Prestressing Federation Congress.

The Congress, to be held later this month in Paris, will attract some 1,300 representatives from 37 countries. As a member of the Canadian Prestressed Concrete Institute, Wilson's of Belleville was eligible to submit an exhibit.

Mr. C. I. Wilson, company president, and Wilson Concrete's secretary-treasurer, J. L. Acton, both Belleville residents, will be attending the week - long event.

Mr. J. L. F. Clarke of Wilson Concrete said that the Ottawa high school structure was chosen because it utilizes an imaginative variety of precast concrete structural and architectural shapes.

Wilson's half - million - dollar contract included the placing of some 125,000 square feet of prestressed structural members, and the use of prestressed concrete to clad the school auditorium with insulated white quartz panels.

The campus surrounding the school is paved with 4-foot-square precast slabs with the "finishing touches" provided by means of sand-blasted precast tree planters and benches.

Wilson Concrete of Belleville had the contract for supplying all precast concrete for the school project. The materials were hauled the 180-mile distance from Wilson's Belleville plant to the construction site, there to be erected by two of Wilson's 100-ton-capacity mobile road cranes.

At the construction site of the new addition to Belleville General Hospital, Clerk of the Works M. MacLennan reports that approximately one-third of the third floor level of Block A "A" of the new wing has been poured to date. Steel has been placed, forms erected, and concrete has been poured for 34 columns from the second to the third floor level of this section of the building.

The waterproofing of all walls erected thus far in the basement and first floor levels has been completed in both Blocks "A" and "B".

The sheet metal sub-contractor has now commenced installing ductwork in the basement and first floor areas, and some interior concrete block work is underway at the first floor level.

With the completion of the pouring of the concrete for the floor of the new loading dock at the east side of the existing hospital, the erection of forms and the placing of reinforcing steel is underway for the loading dock roof.

Hugh Murray Construction of Belleville was recently awarded a $236,000 contract for the construction of an addition to Kent Public School in Campbellford.

The one-storey addition, expected to be ready for the opening of school in the fall, will house 4 classrooms, an general purpose room, a library and other facilities.

A number of Belleville firms were awarded sub-contracts on this project: the roofing and sheet metal will be supplied by Quinte Roofing Ltd., lathing, plastering and acoustic tile by Pennacost Services Ltd., resilient flooring by Stradwick's Ltd., and terrazzo, ceramic tile, and blazed coatings by Pidasto Fabbri Ltd. The painting will be done by Jan Tery Haar.

Price and Not Safety Seen Big Factor for Car Buyers

Despite the criticism raised by American Ralph Nader with respect to safety features on automobiles, Mr. Average Motorist is more concerned about price than he is about safety features.

This is the concensus of local automobile dealers who say that price is the big factor in car sales.

In fact the sales manager for at least one local new car agency says that since seat belts and padded dashes became standard, he had never been asked about a car's safety features.

And all dealers contacted had the same idea about motorists' re-action to seat belts.

They say that only a very small percentage of motorists use them. One dealer said "not even in a blue moon" used seat belts.

They arrive at the conclusion from the condition of seat belts on trade-in cars.

Mel Merrick, sales manager for Belleville Ford Sales, says that when car appraisers find seat belts tucked away under the seats and padded dashes scarred and padded dashes became standard, he had never been asked about a car's safety features.

"This proves that safety is not in the minds of people — until they have an accident," Mr. Merrick said.

"Few people ever ask for seat belts," Mr. Merrick said. "No matter what safety features a car has, price is always the big factor."

Mr. Hugh Kennedy of Kennedy - Chrysler agreed that there was considerable apathy on the part of the public as far as auto safety features were concerned.

He says that in the used car market the potential purchaser never asks regarding safety features.

PRICE DECIDES

"They shop all the car lots and price is the deciding factor," he said.

John Trudeau, new car sales manager for Trudeau Motors, puts the percentage of motorists using seat belts at "not one in one hundred."

He said that rarely is he asked regarding safety features of a car.

Mr. Kennedy noted that safety features had been available on Chrysler products for many years "but the public never went overboard asking about them."

It's price, not safety features that they're interested in, he said.

Growing Season Said 3 Weeks Behind Normal

Temperatures and precipitation during May remained generally well below season normals with occasional normal or near normal temperatures, the Tweed Climatological Station reported today. As a result of these conditions the growing season remains approximately three weeks behind normal. The first bluish of growth at Tweed was on May 12 and blossoms appeared on the 20th.

Precipitation for the month was 1.77", well below the normal level of 2.83" while the mean temperature was 51.51 degrees as compared with the normal 57.12 degrees.

forces will be sent into Quebec during the provincial vote Sunday by the QPP go on strike.

Prime Minister Pearson said such action is taken only on the request of a province and no request had been made.

Mr. Douglas moved adjournment for a special debate on the longshoremen's strike and view of waterfront violence at Montreal Tuesday and the unrulied shocking reports of the strike, now in its 25th day.

He withdrew the motion after the government promised to bring up the labor spending estimates for 1966-67, providing another avenue for immediate debate.

Mr. Douglas said a recommendation of the Freedman report on railway automation should be applied in the longshoremen's contract dispute to settle what he called a main issue—the proposed layoff of 15 per cent of the workers.

The recommendation, dealing with automation, is that when technological change means reduction of a labor force, some benefits of the change should be passed on to older workers in the form of retirement benefits.

Mr. Douglas said Labor Minister Nicholson misled the Commons by saying the 15 per cent to be laid off by the Shipping Federation of Canada are casual workers—cooks or taxi-drivers—rather than longshoremen.

The NDP leader said Gerard Tremblay, an official of the International Longshoremen's Association in Atlantic region, says the men are mostly older longshoremen who can only work part time.

He also questioned Mr. Nicholson's assertion that "fantastic" wage increases were being offered the longshoremen.

Had the wage offer Mr. Nicholson referred to been made by the shipping federation or by the labor minister as a basis of negotiation?

Mr. Douglas said the only information the Commons has had on the strike has come from Mr. Nicholson "and his statement of Monday last sounded like a press release from the shipping federation."

"If the minister wants to pose as the spokesman for the employers then let him get into (another) department and not stay in the labor department when he is supposed to be unbiased and impartial.

"The minister has not given the House the facts."

Mr. Diefenbaker raised the same questions.

Bryce Mackasey, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Nicholson, said Mr. Douglas discreetly assessed things by saying a new phase of management-labor relations has arrived.

"Underlying this strike is the concept of the moral obligation that management has to longshoremen who suffer from arthritis, heart attacks, fractured limbs, cold, exposure and up to 20 years of loading and unloading ships under the cruelest of circumstances."

Management had to accept this obligation.

"On the other hand . . . labor must realize that if this country is to maintain its competitive position, it cannot resist technological changes. . . .

"This fundamentally is the issue."

Around the Kitty

Despite the cool weather in the district the lawn bowlers have opened what appears to be a successful season. Most of the greens are a little slow in coming around to perfection but the bowlers take each green in their stride with the idea it is a fine one as the other. District tourneys have opened with the Trenton, Picton and Wellington clubs in second place while a rink from Bellefonte of Bill Van Tassel and Percy Graham landed in third spot. The two-game winner was Ken Hepburn of Ben Brown of Brighton, while Morley Galt and Doug McDougall of Kingston won the one-game high score. The women's section of the local club served light refreshments and they did a rushing business all day.

On Wednesday afternoon the Campbellcroft Bowling Club held a mixed doubles tournament and 32 rinks were on hand from Peterborough, Cobourg, Brighton, Belleville, Kingston, Colborne, Madoc and Campbellcroft. Mrs. Kitty Owens and Morley Galt of Kingston, winners of the Canada Packers trophy last year were repeat winners on the cup with a score of 45 plus 10. Other three game winners were Mr. and Mrs. Morley Smith of Cobourg and Mrs. Mary Lowe and Dick Edney of Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Buck of Kingston won the two - game high score and Mrs. Lottie McAdoo and Ernie Dennison also of Kingston won the one-game high count. It was a fine day for bowling and the greens were just perfect. The competition was exceptionally keen.

Operation of Rural Area By PUC Will Be Taken Over by Ontario Hydro

Ontario Hydro will take over operation of the Belleville rural area from the Belleville Public Utilities, which for the past 36 years has operated a 315-square mile rural area surrounding the city.

Hydro intentions were made known to the Belleville Utilities Commission in a letter from Mr. Diefenbaker, manager of Hydro's Eastern Region at Kingston.

In his letter Mr. Pederson cited as reasons for the change, the introduction of centralized data processing, faster and more sophisticated work equipment and more rural arteries, plus a substantial savings in operation costs.

The Belleville rural area which at the end of December, 1965, was serving a total of 1,178 customers, will be absorbed into Hydro's Frankford Area without any increase in planned facilities at Frankford and with but a small increase in staff.

PART OF PROGRAM

The merger of the Belleville and Frankford area is part of a province-wide program of consolidation of Hydro's areas that will provide savings of over $1,000,000 annually.

Hydro's savings in the Belleville-Frankford merger are estimated at $33,900.

In the past servicing of the Belleville rural area along with customer billing has been done by the Belleville Utilities. With the merger of the Belleville and Frankford area, servicing will be done by hydro crews and billing will be done, by computer operation from Toronto.

Exact dates for the changeover have not been established, but will be worked out in future meetings, between Hydro and the PUC.

At a special meeting of the PUC this morning, Mayor J. R. Ellis, chairman of the commission, indicated that the merger might take a year to complete but there was a possibility this might be accomplished by the end of 1966.

He said that no public utilities worker would become unemployed as a result of the merger.

Commissioner Ben Safe, noting that Ontario Hydro would save money as a result of the merger asked how much the local utilities would lose.

He said the Utilities revenue would be decreased and it would be up to management to "cut its expense cloth to fit."

While announcement of the merger of the two local rural systems did not catch the Belleville Utilities entirely by surprise, when the utilities built its new service centre at the corner of College and Sidney street, provision was made for a certain amount of rural hydro equipment and materials storage

It is not expected the merger will have any effect on either rural or city hydro rates.

Two Former Board Members Are Honored

Two former members of the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors — Dr. J. R. Bickard and Herb W. Pointer — have been recognized by the hospital board with the presentation of plaques.

Both former members served on the board for two years, Dr. Birchard as representative from the medical staff. The presentations were made following the May meeting of the board of governors.

docted directly from the pay cheque.

The matter of no appeal board for disciplinary matters also received approval from the government. The association is to inform the government of about what steps it feels are necessary to protect the "fundamental rights of members of the QPP" who are disciplined by their superiors.

The association voted early last Saturday to go on strike unless its demands were accepted.

Some months ago the government recognized the establishment of a QPP association but did not give it powers of negotiation and declined to meet with its representatives.

TRENTON — T. W. (Tom) Hetherington, who recently retired as manager of the Trenton branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, has been named manager of the Trenton Golf and Country Club.

A past president of the Trenton Rotary Club, Mr. Hetherington is also a member of the Trenton Legion Hall and treasurer of the United Service Clubs' swimming pool project and has served as treasurer for many fund raising campaigns for local service groups.

25 Indian Farm Workers Brought In

TRENTON — Mr. J. K. White, manager at the Trenton employment office said today that recently 25 Indian farm workers were brought into this area from Soo Lookout to cut asparagus on York Road farms. This was arranged by the N.E.S. through the Dept. of Indian Affairs.

Mr. White said employment at the end of May was good for the time of year with 238 unplaced females and 388 unplaced males registered for employment. At the end of April there were 393 males and 277 females and at the end of May, 1965 there were 319 males and 341 females.

Male university undergrads had found no difficulty in getting jobs this year Mr. White said but there is still a number of women undergrads unplaced.

Mr. General Electric needs more single women production workers, and there is still a need for waitresses and domestics.

Economical Centennial Is Trenton Group's Aim

TRENTON—Other Canadian centres may earn the distinction of having the most colorful, the largest, or the most interesting Centennial celebration next year, but Trenton will have the "most economical" if the Centennial Planning Committee has its way.

Committee chairman Robert Carleton said yesterday his committee was urging groups to hold teas, special installation ceremonies and other gatherings, events, using a Centennial theme, but keeping down the cost.

"After all," said Mr. Carleton, "nobody wants to remember 1967 as the year I went broke."

Mr. Carleton said his committee was having trouble getting various organizations to assist themselves as to centennial plans. He said he thought this was owing to fear of expense.

The Trenton Progressive Conservative Women's Auxiliary has set the date of May 27, 1967, for a costume ball. The Trenton Senior Citizens' Club has started work on a Centennial quilt. The Trenton Board of Education will present Centennial medallions to all school children by June 1, 1967.

Other events being planned include a Scotlia on the bay; a dinner sponsored by various ethnic groups with food typical of each country and folk dancing; a special antique display associated with local history. It is hoped that a history of Trenton will have been compiled by 1967 and a colored film will be taken of all events locally.

LEAVE UP LIGHTS

Residents will be asked to leave up their 1966 Christmas lights for part of 1967 and one event will be the mass burning of Christmas trees. Merchants will be asked to feature new Centennial window displays each month during 1967.

School children will be asked to write special essays and there may be a short story contest for adults, using a Centennial theme.

Another suggestion that has come in to the committee is that a service club or other group donate a special shelter Canadian books to the local library, with emphasis on such area authors as Sir Gilbert Parker, Angus Mowat, Farley Mowat, Alfred Purdy and others.

Mr. Carleton has been asked to arrange for descendants of Trenton's old-time families to take part in local aggremoles. One such is Dougall Bleeker, Jr. of Toronto, a direct descendant of Trenton's first white resident, John Bleeker.

The Centennial Park, south of the community gardens, should be ready by May or June of next year, according to ex-mayor Kenneth Coach, who is in charge of this project. Last week, 20 Scouts from Sixth Trenton spent an evening raking at the parkside and Mr. Coach said later he was appreciate any volunteer help from groups willing to donate free labor.

$4,133 COLLECTED

Red Shield totals to date stand at $4,133.10, according to a progress report from Cpt. James Johnson.

Still to come in on the 1966 quota of $5,000 are partial results from business and industry.

Need More Taggers

TRENTON — More volunteer taggers are needed for Saturday morning's Victorian Order of Nurses tag day, Mrs. Lorne Richards, chairman, said today.

Mrs. Richards said she had 40 taggers for Friday evening but only 10 so far for Saturday. Hours are 9 a.m. to noon.

Volunteers may call Mrs. Richards at 392-4453 or go to the Tag Grading Station Saturday morning and pick up their kits.

$1,500 DAMAGE

Fire of undetermined origin early Monday destroyed a garage and a small frame shed at 262 Dufferin Ave. owned by George Cook. Damage was set at $1,500.

The flash fire scorched the siding on the rear of a neighboring house and the efforts of the firemen were concentrated on saving these buildings.

Blood Clinic Will Be Held

TRENTON — Next Wednesday, June 8 the Trenton Hospital Women's Auxiliary will hold a blood donor clinic in the Legion Hall, between the hours of 2.30 p.m. and 8 p.m. and in the evening, from 6.30 p.m. to 8.30 p.m.

Free transportation has been arranged by Lange and Fetter Motors and, as Legionaires will be driving, volunteer donors may phone the Legion number, 392-3740.

The quota this time is 250 pints of blood but the auxiliary hopes to increase this by 25.

Mrs. G. R. Williamson is convener.

Donor Service Seminar Will Be Conducted

A special seminar dealing with all aspects of The Blood Donor Service will be held in Belleville at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday, June 7, at 7:15 p.m., by The Ontario Division of The Canadian Red Cross Society. The seminar is being co-ordinated by the staff in Toronto and Belleville volunteers, Mr. A. S. Lewis, Blood Donor Chairman and Mrs. Henriette Miller, Blood Donor Convener. Delegates have been invited from 15 Red Cross Branches and will be coming from as far away as Ottawa. Speakers for the evening include Mr. J. B. H. Goodfellow, Director Area "A", Blood Transfusion Service. Mrs. Bette Stanley, Public Relations Co-Ordinator, Blood Donor Service and a volunteer, Mrs. Barbara Levey, President Elect of Etobicoke Branch.

With the implementation of the new treatment for hospital patients, the demands by the hospitals for additional blood has become great. The purpose of this seminar is to make all volunteers working in this service more knowledgeable about the total operation of the Service, including the technical side of it, which will be presented in layman's language. All citizens of the area interested in attending this seminar are cordially invited to do so.

Shrinking Dollar

We were discussing living costs the other day, and it is clear this is a problem of growing seriousness which cannot just be explained away by Labor Minister Nicholson's talk of prosperity.

Prosperity for whom? Certainly not for those on fixed incomes, including pensioners and those who must feed and clothe and house young families on modest wages. That many are finding the task almost impossible is not surprising.

Prince Edward-Lennox member Douglas Alkenbrack put it succinctly during a recent interim supply debate in the Commons. "Prices," he said, "are skyrocketed all among the line in food, rent, clothing, fuel, transportation, medical bills, insurance, taxes and capital cost of housing both new and used . . ."

In what he termed "this rapid and cruel escalation of costs," he accused the government of being a steady partner. "It is becoming apparent that its policies support the super corporations which profit from and control our buyers' and consumers' economy."

Mr. Alkenbrack's address won considerable support from members, and his remarks cannot but strike a chord in the thoughts of the buying public.

Mr. Alkenbrack cited among other costly government strictures the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials and production machinery. He claimed the 11 per cent tax on lumber at the manufacturer's value becomes a markup of more than 20 percent in the retail value in the end use of the lumber, "because of the fundamental fact that all business must calculate its markup on total investment."

For example he said that spruce lumber at $60 per thousand at a British Columbia mill, which is a low price, would yield a tax to the government of $6.60 per thousand. "The markup plus the tax on the lumber sold here in the east then puts the spread to about 20 per cent before the retailer even makes any profit on his investment, plant and other operations."

Even freight rates are unrealistic, Mr. Alkenbrack charged. He said it had cost a Napanee firm $1,068 to have a carload of spruce lumber shipped from British Columbia.

For everyone the cost of living in Canada today is very high, and for many people — the pensioners and not a few with young families — there is hardship. Such measures as the 11 percent sales tax on building materials and production machinery penalize the consumer indirectly by increasing the cost of home ownership. Yet, it is only one of many taxes which are making his dollar worth less and less today.

P.E.I. Election

A swing toward the Liberals — evident in the results of last year's by-elections — and to their youthful leader, Alex Campbell, 33, is the continuing trend in Prince Edward Island. However, while the Liberals hold 16 of the 18 seats polled in the provincial election thus far, the final outcome will remain in doubt until the July 11 balloting in two deferred seats.

The July 11 results, as well as probable recounts in two other seats, will decide the issue, and while the Liberals may put the seal on their lead there is also a possibility of a tie.

This has led to talk of a coalition, following Conservative leader Walter Shaw's suggestion that he and Mr. Campbell join the forces of young and old in the legislature to promote a better island. However, such an idea must be considered premature pending the July 11 balloting and the recounts.

Mr. Shaw was re-elected in Queen's 1st, the seat he has held since his party swept the Liberals from office in 1959. The Conservatives were re-elected in 1962, winning 19 seats to the Liberals 11. Last year the Liberals won seats in by-elections ,indicating a swing back that is further reflected in this latest vote in the birthplace of Confederation.

The Bump

The bump which a local hotdog and hamburger establishment has installed to curb speeders in its lot is a good indication of the driving habits of the younger set who frequent such places.

We do not know how long the bump has been there, but it is certainly an inspired way of ensuring that drivers control their gas-eating instincts while on the property. A sign warns drivers that the bump is there and it naturally commands respect.

Once they turn the corner on the other side, however, the sound of overheated mufflers picks up. Whether parking or pulling out toward the highway, teenage drivers and those in their early twenties usually do so with unnecessary flourish.

The reason for their dash, of course, is one of the very fundamentals of psychology. They are simply trying to impress everyone else — particularly the girls — with their driving prowess. The trouble is, when they carry this zest for exhibitionism onto the highway and beyond the city limits it can lead, to accidents. And too often it does.

"MAN! — How do you pronounce a name like Henry Cabot Lodge . . . ?".

The March Of Progress

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

"But times do change and more continually," wrote the 18th century poet, Edmund Spenser.

It is a fact of which few are more aware than is the city dweller, who, after years of absence, returns to the rural scenes of his boyhood.

He can remember when his homecoming would have been by train. When he would have been met at the station and borne along a winding road from which little puffs of dust flew from the hooves of the horse.

Today, his coming home would be by automobile over a hard-surfaced road. No longer do trees grow at the wayside to cast a welcome shade over travellers grown weary of the rays of the sun. And the road no longer twists and turns as once it did when it followed, or so the old people said, the first cow paths.

Modern highway construction and utility poles have transformed the appearance of the way where, once, flowers bloomed in the gutters and squirrels dodged swiftly along the fences.

The farm has changed, too, caught up in the treadmill of industrial combustion engines and electricity. An odor of oil and grease mingles with the warm smell of the barn.

No portrayer of burning wood pervades the quiet air of early morning, nor is the sound of its crackling heard in the kitchen.

When the night freight threads its way through the cutting at the foot of the meadow, it is to an accompaniment of ugly diesel sounds rather than the melody of steam exhaust and clanking siderods.

Small Flaws Hurt Marriage

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at large:

We are actively disappointed when justice does not arise out of law, but it was never supposed to be that way — laws are meant to arise out of justice, and if the community does not provide the proper soil, then the laws that shoot up will merely reflect the rankness of the soil.

Marriages are more apt to founder because of little flaws than because of any major disorderliness, for the same reason that it is easier to bear a pain as an itch.

No growth or development in nature is sudden or violent; by the same token, since human society is an organic part of nature, no sudden or violent change can accomplish more good than harm in the long run.

The ancient and honorable Latin phrase, per se, is wrongly pronounced by nearly everyone — it is not per say, but per see.

What highly verbal people often forget is that what can be expressed is never quite true, and that what even the greatest creative artists puts into words is not exactly what he meant, for the deepest feelings are incommunicable by words—which is no doubt why music was invented.

The greedly ambitious, who are able to satisfy their hearts's content — learn the truth of Gracian's injunction: "Leave something to wish for," so as not to be miserable from premature attainment.

Some men turn to the classics to escape from contemporary problems; others to better understand them; and it is the first kind, by far the most numerous, who have given the classics a bad name in modern society.

Simple and open egotism is a harmless enough foible; it becomes dangerous only when it disguises itself as philanthropy.

To live successfully means a fusion of opposites, of which few of us are capable — that is, to engage in large activities though we were going to live forever, and to take care of small matters as though we were going to die tomorrow.

All mental desires turn poisonous in time; they must either be acted upon or drained off by reflection, else they will suppurate.

How can we ever have much more than an ignorant love for instance, in England about the most contemptuous thing you can call a man is "clever," while in France it is considered a high compliment?

The worst tactical command a parent can make it to issue a command he or she is not sure will be obeyed.

To Your Good Health

Preventive Medicine Just Few Basic Rules

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Periodically somebody says, "Why don't you write more about preventive medicine?"

Whoa! I am in sufficiently argumentative mood, I sometimes reply, "What do you think I'm trying to write about practically all the time?"

There are a few well-known and basic rules of health: Some eating, fresh air, exercise, sufficient rest, keeping vaccinations up to date, avoiding things known to be toxic or harmful. That's about it — plus one more: Getting treatment when something begins to go wrong instead of waiting until the problem has become worse.

Therefore today's answer is very much a part of preventive medicine.

Dear Dr. Molner: Several years ago I suffered from hemorrhoids but someone recommended a salve. After I used it a few times, the swelling stopped and I had no trouble. About a year later I started to bleed. There is soreness after my bowels move, and sometimes my stomach pains, and sometimes nothing passes but blood. Could there cancer? — L. L. L.

I suppose you could have cancer. Anyone might. But it's certainly more likely that you are just experiencing the usual result when hemmorrhoids are allowed to get worse and worse.

Hemmorrhoids, like varicose veins, hernias, bad teeth and many other things, never get better by themselves. They can only get worse until they are treated effectively.

Salves give temporary relief but do not cure, as you know.

Hemmorrhoids (or "piles") are varicose veins, but going under an alias because of their location at the rectum. At first the veins are swollen. Then they may itch or be painful. Ultimately they become irritated enough so they bleed. Yet some people put up with the condition for years. They become constipated, develop anemia, and are utterly miserable. Quite often they worry about cancer, and still don't do the one thing that is logical. They should go to the doctor and get the condition corrected.

Yes, there will be a few painful days after an operation, and there will be discomfort for a time afterward when the patient — if he is wise — has several dilutions to prevent future trouble.

Still, it's a small price to pay to put an end to years of annoyance, misery and fear.

Taking care of problems like this sooner instead of later is very much a part of preventive medicine. Anyone wanting to know more details about care of hemorrhoids as well as the related problems of fissures and fistulas ought to read my booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids." To obtain a copy, enclose 20 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times, Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 63, and have diabetes but after two years of medication and diet I got it pretty much under control. I can now cheat a little and have no sugar show on the test-tape. However, when I hold the tape with my fingers, that part turns sugar. Can you tell me why? — Mrs. M. G.

Yes, because there's a trace of sugar in the moisture on your fingers. The tapes are quite sensitive.

Don't brag about your ability to cheat on your diet. You are still cutting down on the margin of safety you have built up, and the only one you cheat is yourself.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

June 2, 1965

Canadian militia units panicked and lost the battle of Ridgeway 100 years ago today — in 1866 — after 700 Fenians had sidestepped to invade the Niagara peninsula. The Fenians were Irish nationalists living in the United States who attacked Canada to publicize Ireland's claim to independence. In the battle of Ridgeway, the Fenians were on the point of breaking when a young staff officer, one of the Canadian ranks, and some of the troops began an uncontrollable retreat. The Fenians returned to the United States, where they were disarmed. Fewer than 30 lives were lost on both sides.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1916—the battle of Mount Sorrel began as German troops pierced 3,000 yards of British and Canadian lines near Ypres; Germans near Verdun approached Fort Vaux.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 2nd, 1945

Belleville's "Big Betsy", four-faced dowager of city time-pieces, sits benchalmishly aloft in her loowered eyrie in the City Hall, keeping a watchful eye on the four corners of the city she has guarded for the past 73 years. After nearly four decades of conducted conversation, Central, when overtime sinks into short-line, when car quotas shrink, when the city limits Industrial Index slips in the Financial Capital those 687 miles away, as it did the second week of May by 28 points.

Unnecessarily, perhaps, as the bottom-lown crowd around the tickers will tell you.

But it is a fact of industrial life that when the executive brain of North American industrial life is in Lower Manhattan, the heart is at Bay and Bloor, the ear pumps the life-blood of the economy.

Put it another way: the industry used 18 million tons of steel to make them. That's 18 per cent of the U.S. production, 13 percent of aluminum, 8 per cent of nickel and 60 percent of rubber.

Or still another way: Detroit is the biggest buyer and seller with the "customer" father, Patrick Hayes, Catherine St.

John Sangster of this city has the England where he will visit friends.

The former holders of the Cup, the Queen Mary School Corps, won it two years ago and despite the efforts of the High School Cadets, have held it until the present time. Henry Ford II, head of the Ford Motor Company, has said just that — that the auto industry has hurt sales and so, of necessity, put production.

The question has been asked in Parliament.

It would be interesting to have Mr. Gradley "hopes" he wasn't a factor, but is sincerely concerned enough to won'der and worry — for he can't be sure.

Detroit's Nervous Tremors Felt Strongly in New York

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It is a fascinating thought. Just by saying one thing, did Quebec Conservative MP Howard Gradley of Brome-Missisquoi, have to do with those jitters on Wall Street and the resulting shakes on the Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges?

Silly question, you say?

Well, just that very question has been asked in the Commons . . . and even Mr. Gradley, Parliament's automotive safety crusader concedes he can't be certain beyond any shadow of doubt that the answer's "nothing."

The question, as asked by H. W. Herridge, New Democratic MP from Kootenay West of Industries Minister C. M. "Bud" Drury:

"In view of the fluctuations of the New York Stock Exchange owing to several announcements by General Motors with respect to the operations of their various plants, does the Industry Minister consider this a form of retaliation for the success [sic] campaign carried on for safer cars by the Honorable Member for Brome-Missisquoi?"

The question wasn't answered. Mr. Speaker Lamoureux ruling it out of order.

As Mr. Herridge is a maverick socialist but still an NDP, his reference to "retaliation" by GM can be ignored as anti-business nonsense.

AS DETROIT GOES

But there does remain the more serious implication that production chief, Mr. Gratfley, with his safety campaign, may have been an indirect influence in upsetting Wall Street's nerves.

For as any broker will tell you, if you want to know what's happening and why on the Big Board in New York you have to look to the Board Rooms in Detroit.

When things slow along the production lines in Detroit, Capital, when overtime sinks into short-line, when car quotas shrink, when the city limits Industrial Index slips in the Financial Capital those 687 miles away, as it did the second week of May by 28 points.

The Times, London

Crees Get The Message

Brantford Expositor

Bilingualism Ontario - style has crept into the weekly news letter of the department of lands and forests. Minister Dunlop, the minister in charge, is now using some articles translated into Cree syllabics.

There will obviously be a very limited readership for news in the Cree tongue since Canada's total Cree and Ojibway population now numbers about 20,000 people. However, Mr. Roberts is bent on publishing the activities of his department in as many languages possible. The article, about Cape Henrietta Maria in the extreme north of eastern tip of Ontario, describes what is being done by preserve a wilderness, area from human exploitation. We hope the department shows as much energy in maintaining unspoil-ed landscapes in areas closer to large centres of population.

Youth Pleads Guilty, Given Seven Days

Magistrate T. Y. Wills this morning told a 20-year-old youth that driving while one's licence is under suspension is tantamount to contempt of court.

James Clyde Boughen of London, Ont., and formerly of Stirling, was sentenced to seven days in the county jail after being stopped May 29th by Stirling Police Chief C. E. Hicks and subsequently charged with driving while his licence was suspended. Boughen pleaded guilty to the charge.

When stopped in the village of Stirling by police, Boughen had in his possession the driving permit of the owner and other occupant of the 1964 model car he was driving. His own licence had been suspended for three months on February 15th as a result of an offence committed in London last November.

Cheese Exchange

The volume of cheese being offered on the Belleville Cheese Exchange is increasing weekly as cows get out to grass pastures.

This week there were 9,019 boxes of large regular cheese offered, along with 4,435 specials and 7,133 square cheese.

The average price was 43.5 cents for white and 42.8 cents for colored with heat treated cheese bringing three tenths of a cent less per pound.

Voirdire in Robbery Trial Continues This Morning

The trial of four Montreal men charged with the $18,000 armed robbery of the Bank of Montreal March 30 in Frankford continued into its third day this morning.

Crown witness Cpl. J. Claude Courville, Cobourg O.P.P., whose evidence given Tuesday in a voirdire necessitated an adjournment until today, was on the stand for three hours, being cross-examined by defence counsel Robert Temple, as the voirdire continued.

The four accused, Maurice Langis, 31, Armand Sisson, 29, Victor Tessier, 42, and Gilles Gaudette, 27, were charged with armed robbery April 1, two days after the bank robbery. They have pleaded not guilty.

Tuesday, Judge J. C. Anderson adjourned the trial until today in order to give the defence counsel time to prepare an adequate defence against the voirdire evidence, the admissibility of which has not yet been decided.

The trial continues.

Ontario Govt. Assistance Not for Local Ambulances

The Ontario government's announced financial assistance for ambulances is a step in the right direction, but at the moment will not assist Belleville operator in any way.

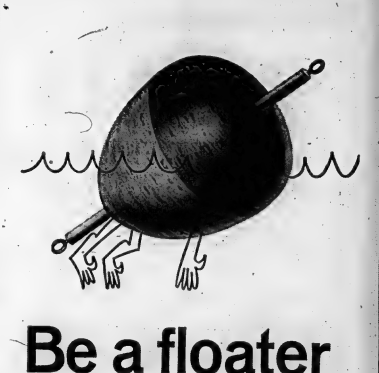
This was stated today by Stu Mosier, operator of the LaSalle Ambulance service in Belleville, who said that although local ambulances will not benefit, he felt that eventually "something would be worked out."

This week Ontario Health Minister Hon. Matthew Dymond introduced a bill authorizing payment of up to 50 percent of ambulance subsidies paid by municipalities, hospitals, local boards of health or non-profit organizations.

The trouble is that in Belleville ambulances receive no subsidies from any source so 50 per cent of nothing is still nothing.

However, Mr. Mosier said he was hopeful that something would be worked out, noting it was unreasonable to expect that the government would assist some ambulance operators and not others.

There are two ambulance services in Belleville — LaSalle Ambulance and City Ambulance. Both have three ambulances vehicles.



One of the main expenses items for ambulance operators is standby pay for drivers.

The LaSalle Ambulance has four "standby" drivers who receive a nominal weekly wage, whether or not they go out on calls. In addition to standby pay the drivers receive extra pay while out on calls.

80-year-old Makes Visit To Hospital

TORONTO (CP)—An 80-year-old, guitar-playing great-grandmother last year visited 700 elderly patients at the Toronto Western Hospital.

"I make one trip a week every Wednesday afternoon," says Mrs. Thomas Cartmell. "My visits vary between eight and 15 patients and I never go empty-handed."

Mrs. Cartmell loads her straw basket with almost 10 pounds of homemade cookies and candies and stuffs her purse with miniature cologne bottles.

"I take the cookies for everyone, the cologne for the ladies and sometimes bananas for the men. I'm constantly baking—cookies are everyone's favorite."

As she goes along the ward occupied by patients from old people's homes in the city, she promises to bring her guitar to serenade everyone. "I'm the only visitor some of them have," she says.

Mrs. Cartmell has been visiting the hospital since 1961. "The doctors and nurses have been wonderful."

She bakes the cookies in an old-fashioned kitchen with a wood stove in the six-room house she has occupied for 56 years.

MONEY WORTH LESS

LONDON (CP)—Member of Parliament Marcus Lipton has asked the Labor government to get rid of Britain's smallest coin, the halfpenny. He says it now is "practically worthless." The farthing, worth a quarter of a penny was withdrawn a few years ago.

FRUIT AND NUT JELLY RING

Yesterday I mentioned a Red Fruit and Nut Jelly Ring and promised to give you the details today.

These colorful jellied "salads" are popular because of their eye-appeal and sweetness. This one is moulded in a four-cup ring mould and the centre is filled with cottage cheese on cupped lettuce. It was created to serve with yesterday's Party Sandwich Loaf but you can use it for other purposes.

One 6-oz. package raspberry jello
2 cups boiling water
one 20-oz. can pineapple chunks
6 oz. broken pecans
cupped lettuce
1 lb. cottage cheese

In a medium-sized bowl dissolve the jello powder in the boiling water thoroughly. Drain all of the juice from the can and pineapple chunks. I had 1 cup. If you do not have a cup, ful make it up with cold water.

Stir pineapple juice into jelly liquid. Arrange half of the drained pineapple chunks in bottom of a four-cup ring mould. Neatly cover with half of the pecans. Carefully pour in 1½ cups of the red liquid jelly. Chill until nearly set. Arrange remaining pineapple chunks and pecans over top and carefully add remaining jelly liquid. Chill until firm.

Dinner Menus by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Glazed Picnic Ham; Baked Potatoes with Sour Cream; Asparagus; Relish Tray; Dill Spears, Spiced Crabapples; Raisin Rice Pudding; 10% Pouring Cream; Coffee.

SUNDAY
(Guests)

Fried Chicken Legs and Wings; Crumbed Potato Logs; Creamed Asparagus; Red Fruit and Nut Jelly Ring (See Thurs.); Chocolate Mint Parfait; Tea.

At serving time loosen sides with pointed knife, then clip moulds into hot water and count steadily up to ten. Invert mould on large round serving dish. Put inner cupped lettuce leaves in centre and fill with one pound cottage cheese.

Serve with yesterday's Party Sandwich Loaf to ten people.

Note: Be sure not to use fresh pineapple in any gelatin mixture because it contains an enzyme which prevents jelling.

CURES ANYTHING

A cure for spring fever in 1801 was two ounces of sulphur in two ounces of molasses.

Hastings North W. I.'s Hold 58th Annual Meet

Over 90 delegates and visitors from the 14 branches of the Hastings North District of the Women's Institute met at Queensboro United Church on Friday for the 58th district annual meeting. Thirteen of the 14 branches were represented.

Those were registered by Mrs. Leslie Holmes and Mrs. Roy Rollins and welcomed by Mrs. R. A. Sager and Mrs. J. Alexander.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. B. Haggerty of West Huntingdon.

An informative address and report of the officers conference was given by Mrs. Rex Rollins of Cooper, the representative of the federation board.

After a short sing-song, the standing committees gave encouraging reports of work done and money spent in helpful projects in the community and the district. The ratification of the district directors was conducted by Mrs. Rex Rollins.

Dinner was served by the Queensboro women.

Following the dinner a successful sale of articles donated by the W. I. branches was held. Proceeds were given to the district funds.

The memorial service in honor of the deceased members was conducted by Ivanhoe W.I.

Miss J. Monroe, the home economist, introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Thompson of Guelph, who discussed program training.

Miss Monroe reported and explained the work of the achievements and rewards.

The district curator, Mrs. Clayton Burkitt, gave her report and said that next year the Institues bring Tweedsmuir books to the annual meeting.

A humorous skit revealed the originality and skills learned in the course — Hair For You, by Madoc W.I. members.

Mrs. Rollins conducted the election of officers. They are: past president, Mrs. Ed Holmes of Madoc; president, Mrs. Barton Haggerty of West Huntingdon; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Warren Hill of Madoc; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Kenneth Tomkins of Harold, R. R. 3; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Ronald Sills of West Huntingdon; assistant, treasurer, Mrs Ted Pollock of Ivanhoe; federated representative, Mrs. Rex Rollins of Madoc, R. R. 3; alternate, Mrs. S. R. Beatty; auditors, Mrs. W. J. Barlow of Boonarlaw and Miss Grace Warren of Marmora; district delegate, Mrs. Maurice Reynolds of Madoc, R. R. 3; alternate, Mrs. G. Graham of Madoc, R. R. 3; public relations officer, Mrs. H. DeClair of Queensboro; district curator, Mrs. C. Burkitt of Shrigley; resolutions, Mrs. Albert Bailey of Madoc.

Conveners are: agriculture and Canadian industries, Mrs. Jowe Husack of McArthur Mills; citizenship and current events, Mrs. L. Wannemaker of Deloro; home economics and health, Mrs. Harold Naylor of Marmora; educational research and current events, Mrs. C. Blackburn of Eldorado.

The courtesy committee report war given by McArthur Mills Branch.

Engagement Notice

Mr. Steven Murray Simmons

Miss Jamie Lynne Gill, B.A.

Mr. and Mrs. James Gill of Belleville announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jamie Lynne Gill, B.A., to Mr. Steven Murray Simmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Simmons of Trenton. The marriage will take place in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, on Saturday, July 2, 1966, at 2:00 p.m.

Israeli Paintings Will Be Shown at Library

The Belleville Chapter of Hadassah-Wizo in cooperation with the Corby Public Library, will sponsor an exhibition of contemporary Israeli paintings in Bellevile.

These paintings are by the residents of the famous Art Colony in Safed, Israel. This colony boasts such artists as Stefan Alexander, whose paintings are on display in museums in Prague, Vienna, Jerusalem and Paris.

Mordechai Arvel, who represented Israel at the International Art Seminar at the Fairleigh Dickenson University U.S.A., is an artist whose works are included in collections in most of Europe and U.S.A., including the Carnegie Institute of Fine Arts in Pittsburg, Pa., Robert Bizer, who has participated in many one-man and collective shows in Europe, Great Britain, South America and South Africa. His paintings are on exhibition in Canada among other countries.

Lodwig Haman, born in Moravia in 1901, has been a citizen of Jerusalem for over 30 years. He has captured with discernment and accuracy, the infinite charms of the Holy City. Mr. Haman has exhibited in leading cities of Europe and his paintings are on display in several American State Capitals and cities.

STREET SCENES

Tzvi Raphaely is one of Israel's prolific painters. His quick brush and keen eye have established him as a kind of Utrillo of Israeli street scenes.

Ann Rosen, American born and presently residing in Israel, has exhibited in Paris and at the Galerie Moderne in New York.

The exhibition, as well as a sampling of Israeli handicrafts, will take place at the Corby Public Library on June 7, 9, 10, 11 inclusive, from 2 until 9 p.m. daily, and the public is cordially invited to attend. At the conclusion of the exhibition, a door prize will be drawn from the names of those in attendance during the entire exhibition.

The members of this affair are proud and happy to be able to present this exhibition under the auspices of the Zionist Organization of Canada, and it is their hope that the citizens of Belleville and vicinity will avail themselves of this opportunity.

Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH W.A.

The last business meeting until the autumn season of the Evening Branch Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church was held on Monday evening in the Parish Hall.

Mrs. A. Bongard conducted the prayer service assisted by Mrs. V. Eagle, Mrs. H. Stevens and Mrs. L. Williams. Reports were given by the numerous secretaries.

Mrs. A. V. Smith reported 265 children on the roll for the Family Service school group and her contact by telephone with the families.

Mention was made of the congregational picnic and the Parish Guild tea. It was agreed by the group to provide the tea to send a girl to Camp Hyanto.

Mrs. L. Markle gave an interesting account of the Diocesan Annual meeting in Brockville.

Mrs. L. Goodfellow had on display the articles required for the bale including baby jackets and bedding supplies.

At the conclusion of the meeting, various items were auctioned by Mrs. L. MacInnis and Mrs. A. Gilroy.

Tea hostesses were Mrs. G. Cherry and Miss L. Morton.

Children Perform Well In Closing Exercises For School of Ballet

By EUGENE LANG

Over one hundred doting parents and relatives were present Tuesday evening at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street to witness the closing exercises of the Judith Jones School of the Ballet. Approximately thirty-five students were on hand to demonstrate their various abilities in their different grades of proficiency.

The program consisted mainly of graded examination work with each grade showing what was required of them for their specific examination and how the work in each category progressed.

The program began with the miniature moppets of the pre ballet group, mostly made up of 2-3 and 3-5 year olds. Besides doing their little routines this young bevy of doll like ballerinas also let the beaming audience know how well they knew their nursery rhymes, the exhibited displays delighting all present. The tiny tots were Muriel Turnbull, Elaine Clayton, Lynne Anne Warkentin and Sharyn Aiken.

The junior group was made up of girls in the 7-35 year bracket and as the program continued many dancers of the different grades that these students were in were shown, with each young participant exhibiting her very best. Girls in this group were (Grade 1) Barbara Jean MacQuarrie, Lisa Hoss, Gail Ann Ellis, Mary Woonsam, Suzanne Couture, Laura Lee Fox, Anne Tennant, Donna Kelly, Susan Joss, Tammy Chartrand, Anne Wilson, Hollie Kennedy, Caitlerah Ford, Barbara Lynn Braiden, Meredith Mazer, Kim Scrutby and Nancy Joss. (Grade 2) Margaret Vanderwater, Lisa Bailey and Mary Twigg. (Grade 3) Leslie Morton and Angelina Book. (Grade 4) Linda Noakes and Kathy Fox.

TWO DANCES PRESENTED

Instructress Barbara Jones presented two dances besides acting as announcer for the evening. Before closing the program Miss Jones announces the names of the girls who would receive their graded Conservatory Examinations. In order to achieve these examinations, each girl must show before a qualified examiner sent from the National Ballet School in Toronto what she can do in her specific grade and from this point on it is in the hands of the examiner whether the entrant passes or fails.

Grade one passes were Barbara Braiden, Kim Scrutby, Nancy Joss, Suzanne Couture, Anne Wilson, (Credit), Lisa Hoss (credit) and Meredith Mazer (Commended). Grade two pass was Margaret Vanderwater and Grade three passes were Leslie Morton and Angelina Book.

To conclude this very successful evening were floral presentations to Miss Jones and her pianist Mrs. Miller. Mrs. Esther Hughes, the former teacher of Miss Jones presented roses to her young and talented successor. Laura Lee Fox presented floral tributes to Miss Jones and Mrs. Miller on behalf of the students and their parents.

Honor Nurse Following Graduation

A reception was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hull Sr., Point Anne, in honor of their daughter Judy, a recent graduate of the School of Nursing, Belleville General Hospital.

Some 70 guests were present from Kinsale, Oshawa, Picton St. Catharines, Milbrook and Point Anne to offer their congratulations and Judy was presented with a number of lovely gifts.

A social time was spent and during the evening tasty refreshments were served with Mrs. L. Horwood and Mrs. Clarence Weldon of Oshawa, aunt of the honored guest, pouring tea. Assisting with the serving were three of Judy's nieces, Bonnie, Debbie, and Nancy Branigan, and Barbara Jacobs.

Others who assisted with the arrangements for a most enjoyable social event were Joan Kellic, Lois Akey and Eileen McGaughey.

Engagement Notice

Miss Sharon Jeffrey

Mr. John D. Bateman

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cumon Jeffrey, Don Mills announce the engagement of their daughter Sharon Lynn, to Mr. John Douglas Bateman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edgar Bateman of Belleville. The marriage will take place Saturday, July 2, 1966, in the Church of Our Savior at Don Mills.

Social Event Concludes Hadassah Bridge Play

The Hadassah bridge tournament for 1965-66 was officially concluded on Wednesday evening with a bridge and social held at the Sons of Jacob Synagogue.

The president of the Local Chapter, Mrs. S. Schlein, received the guests with convener Mrs. S. Black and her assistant, Mrs. S. C. Rose.

A brunge game was enjoyed by the members of the tournament followed by a social hour after which the prizes for the tournament winners were awarded as follows: first prize, Mrs. L. Fell (absent) and Mrs. A. Borwinki; second prize, Mrs. H. Pugh and Mrs. V. Lewis; third prize, Mrs. S. Black and Mrs. S. Rose. Winners of the first section prize were Mrs. G. Black and Mrs. J. Smith, and the second section winners were Mrs. K. Kellar and Mrs. L. Yealland.

Before awarding the prizes convener Mrs. S. Black gave a brief explanation of the work to which Hadassah is dedicated. She explained that all funds raised in Canada by Canadian Hadassah remain in Canada. The funds are deposited in the Bank of Canada in Ottawa and are used for the purchase of lumber, food, medical supplies, farm machinery, wheat and other items Canada, thus promoting the export of Canadian products to Israel.

ISRAELI ART SHOW

Mrs. Black also invited everyone to attend an Israeli art show which is being sponsored by the local Hadassah Chapter in the Corby Public Library during Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week -- admission free.

The members and guests were thanked on behalf of the organization for their participation in the tournament and prizes for the evening's play were awarded as follows: first, Mrs. Mirel Pugh; second, Mrs. Phyllis Haynsby; consolation, Mrs. Betty Casey, and hidden score, Mrs. Grace Carruthers. Several of the guests expressed the sentiments of all who played in this tournament that it has always been a delightful experience...which is eagerly anticipated from year to year.

IODE Delegates Urged To Combat Unity Threat

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Delegates to the IODE's annual meeting were urged Wednesday to combat threats to Canadian unity by practising citizenship during the coming year.

"Right now, I don't know what will happen to our country otherwise," Mrs. R. Bruce Jennings of Toronto, immigration and citizenship secretary for the IODE, told members during the final day of business sessions.

Mrs. Jennings said she felt disturbed recently after watching school children, who did not appear to know the national anthem.

"Young people must again be made to feel Canada is something they belong to, something that is part of them," she said.

She defined ideal citizenship as "assisting in making Canada an example of a country where people of diverse origins have learned to live with one another on the basis of equality and mutual respect."

Mrs. Jennings reported that IODE work with the Indians has increased. The Canadian Indian, the country's fastest growing ethnic group, was perhaps worse off than all others.

This was "not because of exploitation or abuse or any of the other possible reasons, but because he is in the midst of the most severe identity crisis.

"He has lost his country and he is losing his whole way of life.

"But now the Indian is ready. He is starving and it won't be long, I hope, before the Indian holds some of the highest positions in this country."

Subscriptions amounting to $2,087 were given to the Canadian Save the Children Fund providing the ethnic press in Canada with "authentic information" about the country, she said.

Mrs. Harry J. Brock, world affairs secretary, said another concept towards unity was studied when chapters discussed the IODE brief to the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

She reported that one provincial world affairs secretary had written a widely-read article on China during the year.

Mrs. Donald M. Browe, war memorial secretary, reported 14 scholarship students had graduated. Overseas scholarships had been increased by $300 to meet rising costs.

In an earlier report, Mrs. Bruce Beiber, national public relations secretary, said a special committee formed in 1962 to plan for the future of the order had proved "an excellent move."

"The IODE doesn't want to be known entirely as an organization which clings to the past and it is felt that some streamlining could go a long way in increasing membership."

A letter from Indira Gandhi, prime minister of India, thanked the order for its recent $2,000 contribution to her famine relief fund.

Susanna's Family Fare

THE FRAGRANCE LINGERS

Dear Su: Today, I was applying some cologne from an ordinary bottle (not spray). There was only a drop or two left, but I rather hated to throw away the bottle and cap as they both still held a lovely fragrance.

Instead, I placed them in my lingerie drawer, in opposite corners, and now when I open the drawer a lovely waft of my favorite scent greets me. — Mrs. Geo. Wastie

Hi Susanna: If those safety pins just won't go through baby's diaper, in a pinch, you can run them conveniently through your hair — which, unlike other baby aids, is always there!

Think you'll find they will slide nicely. — Mrs. E. L. Ogden.

Cost of Feeding Household Of U.S. Meat Eaters Up Over 7 Per Cent in Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat and meat substitutes are the culprits in a steady advance of household food costs in the United States during the last year.

An Associated Press budget brigade of housewives who sampled prices in 13 major cities came up with the same finding as surveyors for the U.S. government cost-of-living index:

A family of strict vegetarians could have eaten as cheaply in mid-March, 1966, as in mid-March, 1965.

But the cost of feeding a meat-eating household rose during the same period by approximately seven per cent.

During the year, taking the government national average as a base, the price of six pounds of meat—a pound each of sirloin steak, hamburger, pork chops, whole ham, bacon and lamb chops—rose $1.5 per cent to $6.32 from $5.12.

At the same time, a range of meat substitutes including a dozen eggs and a pound each of frying chicken, turkey, haddock and American processed cheese went up 12.5 per cent to $2.62 from $2.32.

SOME PRICES DECLINE

By contrast, the total cost of 29 other items on a typical shopping list, including fruits, vegetables, coffee and canned goods, actually declined a few cents to $11.63 in mid-March this year from $11.70 in mid-March, 1965, while the over-all shopping bill rose to $20.64 from $19.15.

The AP housewives made their independent price surveys in three supermarkets in each of the 13 cities March 10—approximately the same time as the monthly government check in a wider range of stores, including independents. The government checks 26 other cities as well to arrive at its national averages.

The National Association of Food Chains, representing 250 major retail outlets, suggested recently that food costs could be cut by "smart shopping."

The Associated Press checker in Chicago, for instance, found that the total cost of the 40 items she priced was $30.43 in store one, $30.39 in store two and $18.88 in store three, an average of $18.87.

If she had then retraced her steps, buying each item at the store which quoted the lowest price for it, she could have filled her basket for $17.62.

But, having done so, this housewife would have had little time left for other home-making chores.

INDEX RISES

Food prices make up 22.5 per cent of the U.S. consumer price index, which is based on prices in 1957-59 equalling 100 and which each month measures a broad range of prices which eat up the budget of the typical American family. The March index was up 2.3 per cent from a year earlier, and up 7.2 per cent for food alone. In April the food index finally levelled off, with a one-month rise of only one-tenth of one per cent.

Both surveys found Cleveland stores averaged cheapest for the over-all food bill, the government figure being $19.67 and the AP's $18.77.

The surveyors differed on the costliest city, the government checkers nominating San Francisco with an average of $21.27 and the AP brigade naming Boston, with $21.06.

Cities in between the extremes were Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Washington.

Many Women Wearing Wigs In Egypt

By SAMIHA TAWFIK

CAIRO (Reuter)—More and more career women and even housewives in Egyptian cities are becoming convinced that wearing heads of hair are better than one.

They consider that money invested in a wig is worth while.

Those who favor wigs include actresses and television announcers who must look impeccable at all times.

A recent circular to women television announcers therefore came as a surprise. It forbade them to wear wigs when appearing before the cameras.

Since they were regarded by teen-age viewers as an example to follow, the circular explained, they should make a point of looking as simple and demure as possible when on duty.

For the same reason, they were asked to avoid excessive make - up, too much jewelry, plunging necklines and, above all, the new above - the knee hemline.

ALL MARRIED

Of the 32 women announcers who appear on the three channels of Egyptian television, about eight are known to own wigs and to rely heavily on them. All eight are married women, who have houses and families to look after.

For them, the wig was the perfect answer. Instead of having to spend hours at the hairdresser's, all they had to do was to slip on a wig—and no one could tell that they had had a busy day cleaning the house, cooking meals and bathing children before appearing on the screen.

The women announcers are content that they will succeed in having the ban revoked by convincing their superiors a woman wearing a wig can look much more demure and neat than one who has her own hair put in an extravagant fashion.

PUT FACTS IN OPEN

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson wants to reduce the 30-year waiting period before state papers are published to 20 years. The rule is designed to protect still-living politicians and civil servants, he said, but "if criticisms are to be made of me . . . I would rather be alive to answer them when they are made."

Successful Living

Illness Makes Mom Apologetic to Son

DEAR DORIS: I am heartbroken over my own lack of consideration and affection for me.

I am a victim of schizophrenia and when my son was nine years old my doctor recommended he be technically placed under jurisdiction of social welfare, since my frequent bouts of illness rendered me an unfit mother for him. In spite of this, all through the years he has lived with me holidays and weekends and altogether for two years after he finished grade twelve.

This past two years he has been attending a technology institute in a different city. All his life whenever he wanted something I gave it to him, even spending the last dime I had for a car for him when he was in high school.

DORIS CLARK

Now he has a girl friend from a well-to-do family and he ignores me on my birthday and on Mother's Day and even rarely writes.

What can I do to make him realize that I should merit a little thought and kindness from him after all the love I have shown him all his life? He will be 21 years old next month and I've even considered not sending him a birthday gift, which may cause him to realize how he has been treating me now he is no longer with me.

What is the best approach to try and make him care about me as he did in his high school years! — NEGLECTED.

DEAR NEGLECTED: Let's recap. For 21 years you have lavished total love; probably gone overboard in an effort to impress this boy that you are his mother, in spite of circumstances which gave someone else his care. Your illness made you apologetic.

Since your contact was just on visiting terms, you exacted little in the way of return. He has no habit of returning gift for gift. This is entirely aside from the fact that many young people only get thoughtful and grateful after they grow up and grow older.

Don't shut him out of your life; but organize your life so that you depend on him less. You cannot demand love you can only woo it.

DEAR DORIS: Recently in your column you said (about alcoholics) "There is help for both you and them if they'll seek it!" Might I add also "if they know of it."

I am sending along some Alateen literature. If you are interested in reading it, you will see that Alateen is doing much to help the teen-age children of alcoholics.

If at any time we can be of any help, we will gladly do so.— ALATEEN SECRETARY.

P.S.: If you wish to print part of this letter, please do so, but I would ask you to omit my name and telephone number because, as our tradition eleven says: "We need always maintain personal anonymity at the level of press, radio, films and TV."

DEAR SECRETARY: Thank you. A teen-age son of an alcoholic father started Alateens in desperation seven years ago. Now there are many branches across the country, helping teen-agers to keep their balance in the face of drinking problems in their homes.

It means a lot to know the why of alcoholism; it means even more to talk with others in the same boat. I'll gladly pass on the address of your group to anyone writing in.

New Lady-in-Waiting To Madame Vanier Is Youngest to Hold Post

OTTAWA (CP)—A tall, slim redhead with ash, unforgettable name and an uncanny knack for remembering the names of others is the new lady-in-waiting to Madame Vanier, wife of the Governor-General.

Sidney Shakespeare, 25, is one of the youngest women to hold the position in recent years, although households of early governors-general often included girls as young as 16—"rather like the daughter of the house," says a staff member at Rideau Hall.

A warm, friendly girl, Miss Shakespeare can put people at ease bilingually even though she modestly declares she is "still practising" her French.

Enthusiasm is the defining characteristic of her personality. She's interested in everything and her ability to remember names and faces will be a handy asset on the receiving line.

Born in Vancouver, Sidney spent her early childhood in Montreal and Ottawa, returning at 11 to Vancouver, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Shakespeare, still live.

Her major interest at the University of British Columbia, where she earned a BA, was international politics, a field she now can explore personally with visiting heads of state.

She spent a year at the London School of Economics, took a course at the Alliance Francaise in Paris and then, with sisters Mary, 27, and Jane, 23, travelled through Europe by motor scooter—"even over the Alps."

A year as a high school teacher in Vancouver convinced her she wasn't cut out for teaching, so she came to Ottawa, thinking perhaps of a job with external affairs. She did join the civil service as a junior executive officer three years ago, but in the travel bureau.

"She was marvellous and we're sorry to lose her," says her former boss.

Besides first-hand knowledge of Canada, acquired on travel bureau assignments and on her own, Miss Shakespeare has ancestral connections with the country's early history. Her great - grandfather was Col. James Farquharson MacLeod commissioner of the North West Mounted Police, who gave his name to Fort Macleod in southern Alberta.

Riding and tennis are two spare-time interests and now that she's living at Rideau Hall she has a tennis court on the grounds and prospective partners among the Governor-General's youthful aides.

Sidney also likes ballet and the classics and will accompany Mme. Vanier to symphony concerts that are part of a series she used to attend on her own.

Miss Shakespeare is five-foot-nine with brown eyes and freckles and is striking either in the full-length formals she likes to wear or the classic suits in clear colors she picks for every-day.

Three Thousand Attend First TOPS International Convention

About 3,000 members attended the first international TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) convention held recently at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto. Following the convention Recognition Day was celebrated by the Ontario members.

To become a member of this organization one must have a doctor's certificate to show she is under professional care. Members meet weekly and must weigh in at every meeting. When their goal is reached they must maintain this weight for three months and are graduated to KOPS (Keep Off Pounds Sensibly). During 1965 a membership of 130,000 lost a total of 677 tons of excess weight.

Since its founding in 1948 the organization has grown to 5,000 chapters with 310 of them in Canada. The group is concerned with both educational and scientific factors and a research fund was established in 1965 to study the causes of obesity and the problems of overweight.

COSTUME CONTEST

The theme for this year's convention was "Buttons and Bows" and costumes were judged with the winning prize going to Jean Platt of Niagara Falls, New York for her Texas style costume covered with buttons and bows. Miss Platt was Queen of her club for 1965 with a weight loss of 92 pounds. A parade of "before" and "after" of a number of members followed.

A number of well informed speakers gave addresses throughout the convention and these included Dr. Elizabeth C. Robertson, clinical consultant for the Hospital for Sick Children, and an expert in the field of nutrition who explained that dieters should not only choose foods in low calories but foods high in other food values with sufficient protein, minerals and vitamins.

Dr. Margaret E. Milton Ph.D, M.D. of St. John's Hospital, Willowdale spoke on "Obesity - A Blessing or Bane". Years ago it seemed that it was an asset to be plump, but today overweight is not a blessing but a bane.

At the coronation banquet Dr. Jane Davies, director of medical teaching explained obesity and further went on to say that it was not a disease, but mostly a result of habit and compulsive eating.

The concluding speaker was Dr. Barbara McLaren M.Sc Ph.D. the Dean of the faculty of Food Sciences, University of Toronto who spoke on "We are what we eat." She explained the hazards in one's health by being overweight and noted the extra work which the heart is required to do each day, due to this condition.

CORONATION DAY

The highlight of the convention was Coronation Day when the king, queen, prince and princess and division winners were chosen. Graduation day ceremonies were held at the Queen Elizabeth Building, Exhibition Park at which time Yola Cornacchia of Toronto gave the valedictory address and commented that to lose weight one must analyze oneself and form new eating habits. She concluded by saying, "Control your emotions - Not let your emotions control you."

Ontario celebrated its Provincial Recognition Day with a banquet in the Royal York Hotel at the conclusion of the convention at which time Carol MacDonald of Pembroke was crowned Queen having lost 82 pounds in one year, the most recorded for anyone in Ontario. A number of other awards were presented at this time.

Chairman of the International Convention was Mrs. Jean Platt of Calgary, Alta. Queries area captain for the Hastings and Prince Edward TOPS Club is Mrs. Stella Lyons of Wellington and anyone who wishes to lose weight but just cannot seem to do it and wants to join a club of this nature, may contact her by writing to Box 600, Wellington. The Quinte Isle TOPS Club meets every Wednesday evening at the Town Hall in Wellington at 8 p.m.

PROPOSES SYSTEM

TORONTO (CP)—A system of alerts to warn the public if air contaminants build to dangerous proportions in Metropolitan Toronto was proposed Wednesday by Works Commissioner Ross Clark. The proposal was made in conjunction with the submission of a new bylaw providing power to regulate discharge into the atmosphere of substances that could cause a nuisance or damage to the health of citizens.

Legion Auxiliary Holds Zone Rally at Coe Hill

TWEED — The annual Zone Rally of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Legion for Zone F 3 was held in Coe Hill on Friday.

The opening ceremonies got the afternoon off to a good start with Mrs. Jacki Donaldson of Marmora in charge of the color party and Mrs. Annabelle Hardwick of Belleville as pianist.

The presidents of the various branches were introduced and the representative from Ontario Provincial Command, Mrs. Joan Dumouchelle of Tecumseh, was welcomed by the Zone Commander, Mrs. Hope Begley of Belleville. There were 118 registered for the rally with members present from Bancroft, Belleville, Coe Hill, Deseronto, Madoc, Marmora, Picton and Tweed.

Reports were read from the ten branches in the Zone. A total of $10,260, was raised during 1965 by the Auxiliaries, with $270 of this amount being donated to the Legion Bursary Fund, $2401, to the men's branches and $940 used for other purposes. The Zone Commander stated that there are 391 members in the Zone.

Mrs. Dumouchelle brought greetings from Ontario Provincial Command. This was followed by a question box with the questions being answered by Mrs. Dumouchelle.

Mrs. Hope Begley of Belleville was re-elected for a two-year term as Zone Commander and Mrs. Phyllis Thurston of Tweed was re-elected for a one-year term as Zone Sports officer.

Mrs. Ida Horsepool of Bancroft branch reported on the foster child which Bancroft branch adopted last year.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Dumouchelle, Mrs. Begley and Mrs. Thurston were presented with gifts by Coe Hill Branch.

After the meeting the ladies, led by the Bancroft Highland band, paraded to the Cenotaph where a service was conducted by Rev. P. Tedd.

A turkey dinner was served at the Legion Hall by the members of the Coe Hill Auxiliary. Mrs. Conlin, president of Coe Hill Branch, was the chairman for the banquet program.

Reeve W. O'Brien welcomed the ladies to Coe Hill. Ivan Gunter introduced the guest speaker, Rev. Maloney of Bancroft. Mr. Maloney spoke on Canada's unity. Kitty Fraser of Deseronto accepted these on behalf of her team. The euchre trophy was presented to the Tweed team and was accepted by Mrs. Yvonne Wallace.

A dance and social evening at the Legion Hall brought a close to the rally. The rally in 1967 will be held in Belleville.

Ask Standard Pre-cooked Frozen Food

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Standards for the processing and handling of pre-cooked frozen foods exist but are without force, Mrs. A. F. W. Plumptre of Toronto, said Wednesday.

The retiring president of the Consumers' Association of Canada was speaking on a resolution adopted by delegates to the three-day CAC annual meeting.

It urges the federal government to establish a microbiological standard for pre-cooked frozen food.

Delegates were told control of the bacterial content of the finished product is the necessary first step in establishing eventual safety controls at every stage.

The resolution recommends the standards be based on a section of a code drawn up by a Canadian committee for the Food and Agriculture Organization, World Health Organization.

SEEK LABELS

Other resolutions called for:

—Labelling of household chemicals.

—Opposition to the distribution of unsolicited credit cards.

—Water pollution control, legislation and education.

—Legislation to prohibit manufacturers' suggested prices from being shown on products unless it is described as a maximum price.

Mrs. W. V. George of Montreal recommended a basic compulsory course be given to all pupils before they reach Grade 11 and that fundamentals of economics and money management be taught in elementary grades.

Dinner speaker Andrew Kershaw told delegates that as an advertising man he approved of their efforts to get laws protecting consumers against deceptive advertising. But he said laws governing advertising are uneven and cited examples.

"The government, acting properly, supervises the advertising of foods and drugs. But if they are so concerned about our health and welfare, why is cigarette advertising virtually unregulated?"

Glenora Pearce of Saskatoon was elected 1966-67 president.

DRIVER COMES FIRST

HALIFAX (CP)—Engl Kohler, president of Volvo (Canada) Ltd., said Wednesday the safety factor of North American automobiles "has been blown up out of all proportions." He said in an interview that the responsibility for accidents rests first with the driver, then with road conditions and finally with the car.

Ann Landers

Teen-ager Is Surprised Ann Is Not Fed Up

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a teen-ager who has the usual problems but nothing I can't handle. I'm writing to ask you a personal question about your work.

Doesn't it tear you up when people write letters about nutty stuff like a neighbor who empties the garbage wearing shorts or a mother-in-law whose false teeth click during church services? I should think you'd get so fed up on petty complaints that you'd like to chuck the whole business.

ANN LANDERS

How can people be upset by such trifles when there is so much real suffering in the world? Why don't you tell the whiners and the criers to jump into the lake? — BRICKTOP.

DEAR BRICK: No lake could handle 'em, dearie. Besides I don't mind when people write about penny ante problems because I know that many of them are letting off steam. Often they close by saying, "Thanks for listening. I feel a lot better already."

You'd be surprised if you knew how much real courage there is in the world. Many ordinary, every-day folks deserve a medal for just getting through the day. Yet they never think of themselves as heroic. They feel they are just doing what is expected of them.

One of the useful aspects of this column is that it makes people realize that their own problems aren't so rough after they read what goes on in the lives of others.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It was my first visit to Mrs. B's home. I was invited to play bridge. When I arrived a four-year-old boy opened the door. Mrs. B was seated in another room, visiting with two other guests. When she saw me she didn't even get up. She pointed to a closet and said, "Put your coat in there." I picked the wrong closet and was embarrassed when I was told not to put my coat in with the family's, but to use "the other one."

When I returned, Mrs. B was deep in conversation with the two women. After a few minutes she said, "Let's play bridge . . ." She never did actually say hello to me.

I was uncomfortable the whole evening and wonder if I made a mountain out of a molehill, as my husband suggested. — JANICE.

DEAR JANICE: Molehill, my eyes. The hostess was unspeakably rude. If you ever go to her home again you must be awfully hard up for a card game.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The reason I never married (I am 29 years old) is because I have never fallen love. Now I have met a woman I do want to marry — although I am not starry-eyed, no bells are ringing and my knees don't turn to water when I'm in her presence.

Zelda is 35 and is madly in love with me. We get along beautifully and I feel like a million dollars when I am with her. Why? Because I've never had a woman so crazy about me, so eager to please, and so doggoned considerate of my feelings.

My father is a minister. He says he was not in love with my mother when they married, but he admired and respected her and their relationship has flowered and matured into a wonderful thing. My father says if I pass up this girl I am foolish. What do you say? — J.

DEAR J.: I say your clergyman gave you good advice. Take it.

Seeks Changes in Divorce Laws

OTTAWA (CP)—A plea for the church's board of evangelism and social service, it asked for a royal commission parliamentary inquiry into Canadian divorce laws.

Rev. W. Charles Pelletier of Montreal told the conference it was "betraying Jesus Christ" by its stand. He had become "more and more concerned with the church's pronouncements on divorce and sex."

He said he refuses to perform marriages that would involve divorced persons.

Marmora Red Cross Campaign 13 Per Cent Under Quota

MARMORA — A meeting of the Marmora Branch of the Red Cross Society was held in the Town Hall on May 25th. Mrs. Howard Bleecker, president said that money collected in the campaign is used for local purposes, and additional funds, if required, can be obtained from provincial headquarters.

The report of Mrs. Hugh Christie, campaign chairman, showed that 97 per cent of the 1965 quota had been collected. Township of Marmora gave $25; union local 6254, $15; Marmoraton Mine, $50; the bibs yielded, $356; a special gift, amounted to $50 bringing the total to $496.

A donation of $250 was voted to the Marmora Recreation Committee towards the swimming program.

Report of the loan cupboard showed that 22 articles are presently on loan and that 33 articles have been lent to date this year. The Marmora Branch is grateful for a donation of 1 pair of crutches from Mrs. Jacquet. It was decided to purchase one back rest and one cane for the loan cupboard.

Mrs. Roy Hunter introduced the 14 Girl Guides she has been instructing in the Red Cross Course "Teen Care in the Home". The girls working towards their home nursing badge are: Catharine Murray, Celia Murray, Lynn Shannon, Carolina Doyle, Bonnie Kilpatrick, Mary Jane Berridge, Connie Bell, Betty Desmorest, Karen Acorn, Margaret Ross Carswell, Mary Elizabeth Loveless, Ann McKee, Janice Black, Eleanor Warren.

RECREATION REPORT

Mr. C. A. Lorenson, chairman of the Marmora Recreation Committee, gave an account of the history of the Recreation Committee, paying tribute to Mrs. Bonnie McCarthy who was the leader in organizing the committee in 1958, with Mrs. Clare Borland, as first chairman. Mr. Lorenson said that in 1965 the Recreation Committee received Government grants totalling $1043, a donation from the village of $200 and the Marmora Red Cross of $250. Disbursements, including wages, playground and swimming program, band music and instrument repairs and insurance, minor softball league and tennis court nets, totalled $1675.

Mr. Lorenson further stated that on the two tennis courts presently being completed the village had spent $1500 and the Recreation Committee $300, for a total of $1800. It is also hoped to have shuffleboard courts at the beach.

Certificates and crests were presented by Mr. Lorenson to seven students who successfully completed a better boating course, conducted at the High School by Mr. Gordon Bennett. The students were: Sally Bleecker, Barbara Bennett, Blayne Reynolds, Robert Robson, Betsy Rothermel, Jeff Rothermel, Rick Wentworth.

The staff for the 1966 summer season at Legion Park was introduced by Mrs. G. A. Wentworth, secretary of the Marmora Recreation Committee. They are: director of summer program, George "Bucky" Mantle- swimming instructor, Bruce Bennett; water safety, Claire Walker and Cathi Jones; playground supervisor, Sally Bleecker.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. A. M. Jones, water safety chairman, introduced the guest speaker, Mr. J. Arbuckle, master of Peterborough, who spoke on the subject of promotion of water safety. Mr. Arbuckle stated that water safety is becoming a problem. Last year over 2,000 Canadians, including 306 in Ontario, lost their lives in water mishaps. It is becoming increasingly apparent, Mr. Arbuckle said, that the public is less concerned with water safety than it was ten years ago and it is the Red Cross's job to spread knowledge to others to try to reduce the statistics. He said that many children drown each year because parents fail to supervise them constantly.

A film was shown, entitled "13 Ways to Drown", which stressed that water safety is a matter of common sense. Common sense applies also to boating. For a life jacket to help save a life, it has to be worn. Over more than 275 Canadians drowned last year because they lost their balance and fell into the water.

Red Cross safety week will be marked from June 5 to 11 this year.

75 Years Ago Silent Ottawa Waited for Death of Sir John

CP FLASHBACK
By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Seventy-five years ago this spring, an ominous silence and suspense shrouded this capital city for eight days.

The sun rose, then set like a fiery red ball through the blue haze of the Gatineau Hills to the north. Tug boats towing booms of logs on the Ottawa River stopped the shrill tooting of their whistles. Even the tinkling bells on the horse-drawn streetcars on Sussex Street were muffled.

For behind the fry-covered stone walls of Earnscliffe, under the slate roof of one of Ottawa's most distinguished Victorian residences still standing high on the bank of the river east of Parliament Hill, the first prime minister of Canada and grand old man of politics, Sir John A. Macdonald, lay mute, paralyzed and dying at the age of 76.

A brain hemorrhage struck in the afternoon of Friday, May 29, 1891, while he was resting. He did not regain full consciousness before his breathing and heartbeat slowly came to a halt at 10:35 p.m., Saturday, June 6. For more than a week, the city was the focus of the country he patched together and loved, and which loved him despite the fractious politics of the day.

BUILT DOMINION

"The Old Man, the Old Flag, and the Old Policy," was the Conservative party's campaign slogan in his last election campaign three months before he died. "A British subject I was born—a British subject I will die," was his political manifesto in that election.

"Old tomorrow," his critics called him for his procrastination in making important decisions. "A rum 'un to look at, but a rare 'un to go," was the way he frequently likened himself to an old buggy horse.

Born in Scotland in 1815 and an emigrant in 1820 to Kingston in Upper Canada, now, in Ontario, he was not only the driving force behind Confederation in 1867 but of the extension westward to the Pacific coast.

After being an alderman in Kingston, he was first elected to the legislature of Upper and Lower Canada in 1844. The Montreal Gazette said of his first speech: "Mr. Macdonald . . . is evidently not used to parliamentary debate, but he as evidently has the stuff in him."

It was as a co-leader of the pro-Confederation coalition government that, by charming his opponents and negotiating with his rivals, he became prime minister of Canada on the birthday of Confederation, July 1, 1867. He was thrown out of office in 1873 when the Liberals got wind of a telegram he sent to the CPR: "I must have another ten thousand."

MADE COMEBACK

Five years later, the Toronto Globe said editorially: "Sir John A. Macdonald is about to retire to private life, a thoroughly used-up character." Not only did Macdonald return to office as prime minister a few months later, but he stayed there for another 12 years.

". . . You would rather have John A. drunk than George Brown sober," he told a public meeting after a particularly virulent editorial attack on him by the Globe's publisher.

Even in old age, when a year before his death he wrote to a colleague, "I am so unwell . . . you must get on as best you can," he was far ahead of his cabinet ministers in planning for the future. In fact, on his death the Conservatives were leaderless and shuffled offices among four prime ministers—Sir John J. Abbott, Sir John Thompson, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, and Sir Charles Tupper — before Sir Wilfrid Laurier began his 15-year term of office as head of a Liberal government.

In his last year, Macdonald fought the Liberal idea of free trade with the United States. "It looks like sheer insanity to propose practically to limit our foreign trade to the United States when there is such an immense opening for development of our commerce with the rest of the world."

UNITY HIS GOAL

Concerning controversy about the use of French in the government and administration of the western territories, he told the Commons:

"There is no paramount race in this country. There is no conquered race in this country. . . . Let us forget this cry, and we shall have our reward in seeing this unfortunate fire, which has been kindled from so small a spark, extinguished for ever, and we shall go on, as we have been going on since 1867, as one people, with one object, looking to one future, and expecting to lay the foundation of one great country."

But just one year before his death, he also wrote to a confidant in June, 1890: "I am a good deal discouraged as to the future. Not that the country has gone or is going against us, but because our ministry is too old and too long in office. I am on the way to 76."

His death marked the end of an era in Canadian history. It also marked the beginning of a period of mourning unparalleled in this city except, perhaps, for that for Queen Victoria in 1901.

His body stayed at Earnscliffe for two days, the old house draped in purple and black. Then it was placed in state in the Senate chamber of the old parliament building while thousands filed by. They came by train and carriage from miles around.

The state funeral was held in St. Alban's Anglican Church near his former Sandy Hill home on Daly Avenue in east - central Ottawa, and the coffin was taken by CPR train, itself draped in purple and black, to Kingston, where the body again lay in state, this time in the old city hall—still standing—where he had been an alderman.

He was buried at Cataraqui, near Kingston, "near the grave of my mother, as I promised her that I should be there buried."

Interest Ceiling on Bank Loans Dividing Liberals

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — After five months of behind-the-scenes arguing, the cabinet and Liberal caucus remain divided on what to do with the interest ceiling on bank loans, party sources said Wednesday.

The disagreement is reported to have persisted at a long cabinet meeting Tuesday and another discussion was set for today's meeting. Some progress toward a compromise solution was made, however.

Some observers see the bank battle as a test of strength between supporters for the eventual succession to Prime Minister Pearson.

Meanwhile, introduction of the revised Bank Act in Parliament is being put off from week to week. The crucial act was to expire a year ago but it has been extended twice, the latest one until Dec. 1.

Even if the Liberals unite behind a draft bill, the legislation faces a long, rough ride in Parliament. Opinion ranges all the way from rural MPs who attack bankers fiercely to senators who double as bank directors.

FAVOR PARTIAL REMOVAL

Liberal informants say Finance Minister Sharp and Trade Minister Winters favor a partial removal of the six - per - cent limit on interest charged by the eight chartered banks.

The limit would be abolished altogether on bank loans of $25,000 or more, which account for about two-thirds of the total amount.

Loans under $25,000 would be subject to a flexible ceiling. Ottawa would fluctuate with market conditions and could raise it 6½ or 7 per cent in "tight money" situations.

The policy and strategy split centres on the proposal for a floating ceiling on small loans. Mr. Sharp is refusing this formula in hopes of winning wider acceptance.

External Affairs Minister Martin, Defence Minister Hellyer and former finance minister Walter Gordon are said to be opposed to higher interest rates on small loans.

FEAR REPERCUSSIONS

They fear the change would drive up interest rates charged by near banks and other lenders, already charging more than the banks. They also fear the political consequences of hitting the average voter in the pocketbook to help the banks compete more effectively in the money market.

By coincidence or by design, the five central figures in the Liberal debate all are considered potential candidates for the party leadership whenever Mr. Pearson decides to retire.

Mr. Sharp and Mr. Winters already have disagreed publicly with Mr. Gordon's proposals for strong government action to limit foreign ownership of Canadian industries.

The Sharp-Winters forces argue for increased competition between financial institutions as demanded repeatedly by the banks and as recommended a year ago by the Porter royal commission on banking.

They also argue that foreign investment is essential to continued growth in Canada, while advocating incentives for more investments by Canadians.

The conflicting economic ideologies likely will clash at a Liberal policy conference here in October.

MOIRA VALLEY CUBOREE

MADOC — The Moira Valley Scout Association held its annual Cuboree at the Madoc Recreation Park on Sturday.

The Cuboree got underway at 1.30 p.m. with the flag break, Grand Howl and prayer. D.C. Joe Irish explained the program which consisted of leap frog, bannering, running a race of 50 yards, wheelbarrow race, knots and a tug-of-war.

Approximately 168 Cubs participated in these events, Thomasburg, Tweed, Stirling, Bonarlaw, Marmora, Deloro and Madoc.

Competition was kept throughout the afternoon activities with the tug-of-war event being the highlight. Madoc defeated Thomasburg in the final pull.

The Madoc Group Council served refreshments to all present including many parents who came to watch the events. Rev. J. H. Thompson, District Council president brought greetings from the Council and congratulated both leaders and boys for a successful afternoon. Judges for the contests were Mrs. Pearl Irish D.C.C. and Gordon Russell A.C.C.

Remember When Doctor Had Coffee in Kitchen?

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Tired of coping with the present?

Well, forget it for a few moments and take a short mental buggy ride into the past. The trip will do you good, and you'll come back refreshed.

It's always a tonic to the spirit to look back and remember when—

You could start an argument over whether Mary Pickford or Mary Miles Minter had the prettier curls.

Gypsies travelled by horse and wagon instead of second-hand limousines.

Cary Grant was making a bare living as an acrobat and stilt walker at Coney Island.

Only after harvest season did a rural minister usually find anything larger than a quarter in the Sunday collection basket.

Everybody in the neighborhood knew father had received a promotion when mother bought a new set of wicker furniture.

The doctor, busy as he was, always had time for a cup of coffee in the kitchen when making a home call.

You could tell how many kids there were in a family by counting the overalls hanging on the backyard clothes line.

Red-haired Clara Bow, Hollywood's famous "It" girl, whizzed up and down Sunset Boulevard in a flaming red car containing seven red chow dogs.

On a cold winter morning the only way to get warm was to dress over a furnace grating in the floor. ("Hurry up, Jim, it's my turn.")

It was commonplace for most people to go through life without ever tasting champagne or eating a raw oyster.

There were only two wonder drugs—aspirin and castor oil.

Those were the good old days. Remember?

FLANDERS FIELDS — Canadian soldiers place boardwalks on the muddy battlefield of Sanctuary Wood while in the background some of the wounded and prisoners make their way to the rear. In the First World War battle, which started June 2, 1916, total Canadian casualties numbered 11,540. Many are buried in this cemetery (lower photo) where two Belgian boys wend their way among the rows of tombstones.

Cheap Cafe With Its Jukebox Marks Site of Sanctuary Wood

By CAROL KENNEDY

A cheap cafe, loud with jukebox music, marks the site now. Outside, a signboard in English, French and Flemish informs the tourist who has toiled up the long rise from the Menin Road, main artery of the First World War Ypres salient, that this was once the immortal battlefield of Sanctuary Wood.

The battlefield, or what is left of it, is in the back garden. For five francs and a touch of imagination, you step back 50 years into grass-grown trenches and dank dugouts, past sad heaps of rusty, bullet-torn tin hats and the antiquated weapons of 1914-18.

It is oddly quiet in the little wood at the end of the garden. Scarred, dead stumps of trees loom ghostly amid young green foliage above what was once the Canadian front line. Here on June 2, 1916, men of the Canadian Corps were mowed down by the heaviest artillery bombardment seen up to that point in the war.

After 12 days of heroic resistance and counter - attack, during which Canadian artillerymen were reduced to defending their guns at revolver - point, total Canadian casualties numbered about 9,000. Never was a battlefield named with more irony.

FORMED KEY BULWARK

By 1916 the Ypres salient was the most dreaded part of the Western front for the fighting men of both sides. A broad semicircle of low-lying clay fields around the gabled, medieval city of Ypres, it formed the Allied bulwark between the advancing Germans and the Channel ports. The war here had become almost static, with the opposing armies crouched in a web of trenches that turned to water-logged death - traps in the wet Flanders weather. Thousands died each day for the gain or defence of a few hundred yards of shell-torn mud.

By June, 1916, the Germans held most of the ridge of low hills around the salient, giving them a commanding field of fire. Only one part of the crest was in Allied hands. Held by the Canadian 3rd Division under Lt.-Gen. M. S. Mercer, it formed the most easterly projection of the salient into enemy territory and guarded one of the main approaches to Ypres.

The chief Canadian vantage points were a flat knoll called Mount Sorrel and two higher rises known as Hills 61 and 62. Northwards the ground fell away to the Menin Road, the long straight highway to Ypres down which men and machines were funnelled in the front lines. From Hill 62 a broad spur named Observatory Ridge thrust westward between two small woods, Armagh Wood and Sanctuary Wood.

EXTENDED TRENCHES

During May, Canadian patrols reported German reconnaissance trenches being pushed towards Hill 62. The Germans also appeared to be bringing up more heavy artillery, but weather conditions made continuous observation impossible.

Opposing the Canadian 7th and 8th Brigades at this crucial point in the front line were two divisions of the Kaiser's crack Westtenberger Corps. The Canadian 7th Brigade included two of Canada's most famous infantry regiments, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the Royal Canadian Regiment; the 8th Brigade comprised five battalions of the Canadian Mounted Rifles and a trench mortar battery.

The fact that the clash was between two proud national corps seemed to strengthen the determination of each side to win.

The morning of June 2 dawned clear and sunny. At 6 a.m. Maj.-Gen. Mercer and Brig. - Gen. Victor Williams, commanding the 8th Brigade, set out on a tour of inspection.

They had just reached the frontline trenches of the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles when the air exploded with the heaviest shell barrage any Allied troops had encountered in 32 months of war.

ALMOST WIPED OUT

For four hours a torrent of gunfire ravaged the Canadian positions, with the worst brunt falling on the 8th Brigade. The 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles were practically annihilated, with 98 per cent casualties. Mercer was killed, Williams wounded and taken prisoner.

At one point the air was so thick with flying shells a survivor recalled, hearing two shells meet head-on "with a shriek like a woman in agony."

Private Gordon Jarrell, an Englishman who joined the Patricias in Canada and who believes he was the last man taken prisoner at Sanctuary Wood, recalls the German infantry advancing with a confident, almost leisurely air in perfect line formation," towards the Canadian trenches.

Fierce hand-to-hand fighting followed, in which the Germans used flamethrowers when they met particularly tough resistance.

In a few hours the Wurtemberger had seized Armagh Wood.

The surviving Patricias under their popular commanding officer, Lt.-Col. H. C. Buller, launched a brave counter-attack as the German sweep up to their section of the line. Buller was killed urging his men on. Sanctuary Wood cost the Patricias 400 casualties, including 130 dead.

FAILED TO FOLLOW UP

This was the only time during the war that Canadian corps gave foil into German hands. They were later recaptured.

The road to Ypres now lay open to the Germans. But, as in so many cases during the Flanders campaign, they failed to take full advantage of the situation, apparently taken by surprise at their success. Instead of attempting to roll up the Canadian left wing held by the Patricias and backed by the RCR, they followed orders issued before the battle and dug in about 700 yards from their original line.

The newly appointed Canadian commander-in-chief, Lt.-Gen. Sir Julian Byng, a British cavalry officer destined to become governor - general of Canada, ordered all ground lost to be retaken in a counter - attack early the next morning. Two brigades of the 1st Division moved in to replace the heavy losses of the 3rd Division.

PRECEDED BY SHELLING

The Canadians advanced 1,000 yards but the operation was only a partial success. A second counter-attack was set up for June 6, then postponed for a week because of bad weather.

Meanwhile the British commander-in-chief, Sir Douglas Haig, was busy preparing his massive Somme offensive. He wanted to expel the Germans from their vantage point north of Ypres but was reluctant to divert British reinforcements from the Somme. Haig sent one brigade of artillery and one of infantry to support the Canadian Corps, instructing that the counter-attack concentrate on heavy artillery barrage.

The new operation was to be spearheaded by the Canadian 1st Division under Lt.-Gen. A. W. Currie. The Canadians mustered 218 guns—one of the biggest concentrations ever seen on such a narrow front.

For times between June 6 and June 12 short, intense bombardments deluded the enemy into thinking the attack was under way. Then on June 12 Canadian guns pounded the German lines for a solid 10 hours. Early on June 13 the infantry moved in, led by Toronto troops of the 90th Battalion, closely followed by Canadian Highlanders.

LOST GROUND RETAKEN

Before the night was over the Allied line had been re-established and 200 Wurtembergers taken prisoner. The first Canadian planned attack of the war had been "an unqualified success," said the British official history.

Between June 2 and June 14 the Canadian Corps suffered some 9,000 losses. Total German casualties were 5,783.

Today a grove of maple trees, planted by the Canadian government after the war, shades a plain, six-sided, white stone memorial on Hill 62. Its twin looks down from Passchendaele Ridge, a few miles to the northwest, where after three - month slaughter of 1917 the Canadian 2nd Division finally captured the remains of Passchendaele's village.

In the early summer of 1916 Sanctuary Wood struck a chord of unparalleled horror in the public mind. The Somme and Passchendaele were still to come.

Group Home Parents Wanted

Interesting opportunity to be of service to others. To assume full responsibility for the operation of a Society-owned home located by the City of Belleville, offering group living to approximately six teen-age girls. These will be local girls in attendance at city schools. The home will be completely furnished and the Society will assume the cost of food, heat, light, etc. While the house mother will be a salaried employee of the Society, her husband, who will be expected to accept the normal responsibilities of the head of a home, may be gainfully employed elsewhere. Interested applicants should be between the ages of thirty and forty-five, enjoy good health, be secure in their personal relationships, and possess as a very minimum, secondary school education. Needless to say, they should be genuinely fond of young people and sympathetic to their problems. They will be expected to work as part of a team, take supervision and participate fully in staff training programs. Couples with a maximum of two children will be considered.

The many advantages offered should make this position attractive to young professional people, for example; an elementary or secondary school teacher and his wife. The commencing salary (which includes full maintenance) will be dependent upon the academic qualification and/or experience, etc. of the applicants. Full staff benefits including medical, surgical, hospital care, group life insurance, OMERS pension plan, three weeks annual vacation will apply. Duties commence on or about the 1st of September, 1966.

turns—received at the Goldstone tracking station on the desert to the east and relayed here—that the landing was fir m enough, however, to cause one foot to make a slight contact depression.

A shadow around the edge of one of the two feet within range of the camera indicated the depression was quite shallow—perhaps, two inches, the controllers said.

The camera was shut down when the earth's rotation blocked signals to Goldstone and officials said no further pictures were expected until 11:30 p.m. EDT tonight when Goldstone again is in position to receive. Meanwhile, tracking stations at Canberra, Madrid and Johannesburg were to make engineering checks with Surveyor.

The crucial terminal sequence —a cartwheel in space to point its feet moonward, then at 60 miles out a blast from its powerful retro-rocket engine to slow to landing speed of 8 m.p.h.—ended with all instruments apparently functioning.

Thirty-five minutes later, it began televising pictures sent throughout North America and overseas by three U.S. networks, employing the Early Bird satellite.

The first batch of three showed a lunar surface portions, with the lunar surface in the background.

There was nothing to hint of danger to future manned landing craft.

A second batch of 10 showed more distant terrain—flat and featureless, except for a shadow, apparently that of the spacecraft, in the shape of a three, and what appeared to be a large rock.

The first two series, televised with 205 scan lines compared to 525 for a home TV screen, were dim and fuzzy and difficult to interpret.

Later shots with 600 scan lines —Surveyor is expected to return hundreds before the chill of the lunar night ends its life 12 days hence—were far clearer.

Some shots were expected to be better in quality, experts say, than the nine pictures sent back by the Soviet Union's Luna IX last Feb. 3.

Surveyor's feat was regarded as a significant advance over Luna IX, which scored after at least four failures. The Soviet craft was a 200-pound shockoscillatant ball containing a cameras.

It apparently was ejected several hundred feet above the surface from a carrier vehicle equipped with small retrorockets. U.S. scientists said its impact probably would kill a man.

Surveyor's main rocket and three guidance rockets slowed its 620 pounds to an estimated 5 miles an hour, then it dropped 14 feet to the surface. Shock absorbers and crushable pads would help. Experts said it apparently was stable all the way down as it balanced on a tongue of flame.

So perfect was the guidance that the landing was within feet of the predicted impact point in the Sea of Storms, a broad dry plain near the western edge of the face of the moon, just south of the lunar equator. It is one of several areas considered as Apollo descent points.

The first picture showed a leg and foot on the soil, snapped as the camera pointed downward in self-examination. The second showed an antenna and beyond that the more distant surface. The third showed a leg, in better focus, resting entirely atop the crust.

The second sequence showed an antenna boom and part of the aluminum tubing frame. Then followed others showing a rocky landscape, dim and fuzzy and the surface looking crisp, some shots showed a distant horizon, with no major features.

The success, which brought shouts of joy from workers assembled at the laboratory, launched a seven-shot series of Surveyors during 18 months in a style few had dared hoped for.

One project official had called Surveyor "probably more difficult and complex than anything yet attempted in space by anyone."

Seven shots were scheduled because the chances of success were so slim. Presumably later shots will aim at different possible manned landing areas. Surveyor's ground shots then will be compared with those from the upcoming Orbiter series, which will make photos as a spacecraft skims as close as 30 miles to the surface, and on the basis of this an Apollo site will be selected.

Telescopic pictures from earth show the Sea of Storms landing area as a hundred-mile-diameter plain ringed with ridges. In the southern portion is the 1,000-foot-high Flamsteed Crater. And just north of it is Surveyor's resting place.

One expert at the laboratory, which controlled the flight, said after seeing the pictures: "It looks like they prepared a landing field for us."

He added that one shot made the surface look "like rough asphalt, but it's still pretty smooth."

"I'll bet the scientists who predicted a heavy layer of dust on the moon are committing hari-kari about now."

The laboratory director, Dr. William H. Pickering, said: "This is the first time a truly soft landing has been made on the moon."

Walked serenely to their deaths, clad in identical blue shorts. They said nothing and were be-

Present Awards at District High School Annual Banquet

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford District High School held the annual awards banquet at the High School on Friday evening with Professor R. D. Chambers of Trent University as guest speaker.

Professor Chambers explained the present explosion in university enrolment as due to the changing period of the time, the recognition of higher education as a necessity and the attitude of high school graduates in regard to higher education and an attempt to approach the American level where 30 per cent of the population attend post high school institutions.

VARIOUS TYPES

He outlined the various types of students in university life, the rebellious student and the apathetic student.

Professor Chambers went on to explain the merits of smaller universities where the academic and psychological problems of the student can be determined as against the larger institution where a student becomes lost in the larger attendance.

Professor Chambers was introduced by student Dan Moon and thanked by Jack Oliver.

The awards were presented to the students of Campbellford High School at the annual awards night.

Academic awards were presented to Susan Brown, Sharon Hupek, Dennis Kerr, Edwin Law, Randy Redcliffe, and Brian Symonds by L. S. Coupbill, principal.

Mr. D. Carswell, Board member presented activity awards to John Gray, Gordon Grant, Brian Symonds, Dan Moon, Sharon Huycke, Don Bain, Ron Atkinson and Lois Clarke.

Brian Symond was the winner of the honor award based on points in the three award areas and was presented with this award by Professor Chambers.

There were two hangmen clad in black robes over what appeared to be military uniforms. Four bugles faced each man and played the Last Post before the trap was opened.

The somber crowd at the hangings contrasted sharply with the cheering, fighting gathering at the four men's hearing Tuesday, when any point the prisoners tried to make was hissed and booed.

The crowd included women and children, but many began leaving immediately after the first execution.

A number of high - ranking military officers, including Col. Pierre Ingila, chief justice at the tribunal which sentenced the men, were in attendance.

But three special chairs were vacant. They were understood to have been left for the three men the condemned politicians were accused of plotting to kill President Joseph N'Saba, Prime Minister Leonard Mutima and the army chief of staff, Gen. Louis Bobutu.

Mobutu did not respond to last minute appeals by religious and diplomatic leaders of clemency.

Most major Western embassies were closed and their staffs and nationals were instructed to stay indoors during the executions.

Better Relations Between East And West Europe Possible

- - Martin

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin said Wednesday he believes great improvement is possible in the relations between the Western and Communist nations of Europe, notwithstanding Viet Nam.

He told a press conference he hopes that the NATO council at its meeting in Brussels June 7-9 will agree on a collective position concerning improvement of East-West relations.

NATO had to be equally as strong as Russia and there must be no let-up. But improvement in East-West relations remained an essential objective.

Mr. Martin leaves Saturday for the meeting June 8, the anniversary date of the 1944 Allied landing in France, the Alliance members except France, but which will have its concurrence, will discuss the consequences of the French decision to withdraw from NATO's integrated military commands.

Mr. Martin again indicated France would be keeping the of NATO council in Paris.

He said it would cailse no problem for members to have the council located apart from NATO military headquarters. which will have to be moved from Paris—probably to Brussels—as a result of the French decision.

France would feel "closer" with NATO if the council remained in Paris, but NATO, London would not be a satisfactory alternative.

Mr. Martin said it is important for NATO to endeavor to improve relations with consultation first among the Alliance members "and not seek only to do it alone."

Asked if this was an implied criticism of Gen. de Gaulle, who will visit Moscow this month, Mr. Martin said he hopes the French president's views are presented to the Russians would not be inconsistent with those of NATO.

Mr. Martin said the Brussels meeting will be "of great importance." He will not se council president at the talks.

"What this meeting will really be concerned with is the future of Europe and of North America's relations with it. . .

"Already over the last few years the stability provided by NATO has permitted recovery but nevertheless significant improvement in relations between the NATO and the Warsaw Pact powers.

"This desirable trend—which I emphasize is supported by all 15 NATO members—must be maintained and encouraged.

"Only through the extension of the detente can we bring about a situation in which free and substantial progress towards a settlement in Europe will be possible."

Mr. Martin said there have been "useful and helpful" talks with Poland concerning the International Control Commission in Viet Nam. Trade Minister Winters soon would go to Poland on a trade mission and later to Russia. A trade mission from Czechoslovakia would come to Canada this summer. A Russian parliamentary delegation would visit Canada in July.

Mr. Martin, within the next three or four months, planned to visit Russia.

Speaker Warns Members About Their Language

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson and Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton North and Victoria) Wednesday accused each other of insulting language in a Commons exchange.

Mr. Muir touched things off by asking the Liberal leader when he expects to receive the report of Mr. Justice Wishart Spence's inquiry into the Gerda Munsinger security case.

Mr. Muir drew angry cries from government benches when he added that Mr. Pearson should be able to provide this information because of his knowledge of files.

This was interpreted as a reference to the government's disclosure of information in RCMP files about Gerda Munsinger, a West German blonde alleged to have had liaisons with some Conservative cabinet ministers in the Diefenbaker government. The Munsinger inquiry was told Mr. Pearson had the RCMP file for some time.

Mr. Pearson rose and began: "In spite of the insulting way in which he (Mr. Muir) put the questions . . ."

LIBERALS APPLAUD

He was interrupted by an ovation from Liberal supporters.

Mr. Pearson concluded by saying he did not know the answer.

Mr. Muir added fool to the issue situation by jumping up and saying:

"My I thank the prime minister for his insulting reply."

This provoked more angry cries.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux warned MPs to ask questions in a more decorous manner.

WEDNESDAY, June 1, 1966

The Commons debated the St. Lawrence ports longshoremen's strike during consideration of labor department spending estimates.

New Democrat Leader Douglas said Labor Minister Nicholson had presented the management side of the dispute to the Commons.

He and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker called for a full statement by the minister about the strike.

Mr. Diefenbaker served notice that he will seek an emergency debate on when and how an RCMP file on Arthur Vachon, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association, got into the hands of the Quebec government.

Prime Minister Pearson said there has been no change in the policy that such files are available only to authorized federal officials.

Four senators over age 75 announced their retirements from the Senate.

3 Countries Send Troops To Help U.S. in Viet Nam And Two Are Sending More

SAIGON (AP)—Three countries have sent troops to fight alongside United States forces in Viet Nam and two of these are sending more.

A fourth country, Thailand, will send a small force this summer.

South Korea has sent 24,500 men who have compiled an enviable record in action. South Korea will send another division of 17,000 men in July to build up its commitment to 41,500.

Australia is moving 4,500 men to Viet Nam by plane and will complete the airlift by mid-June.

Included in this force, despite controversy in Australia, are the first national servicemen (draftees) that Australia has sent to foreign combat. Previously, all overseas Aussies were regular-army volunteers.

The 4,500 Aussies will replace the 800-man Australian force already in Viet Nam since August, 1965.

New Zealand has one battery of artillery in the country, with base and administrative personnel, for a total of about 180 men.

Thailand has pledged to send in July or August, a landing ship tank (LST), a coastal patrol boat and two C-123 transport planes. The crews to man these four craft will number about 180.

The Koreans, almost unnoticed, have achieved a standout record. Most observers agree these are elite troops—finely trained, well disciplined and highly suited to Asian combat. Many of their officers were trained in the United States.

Moreover, as Asians, they know about how to deal with the Vietnamese. They have demanded strict obedience from villagers and peasants in their area—while at the same time they will help the peasant plant his rice and the villager rebuild his house.

The Koreans' most notable achievement has been their pacification of their assigned area—the region around Qui Nhon on the central coast about 270 miles northeast of Saigon. They are well on their way to make it secure from Viet Cong attack.

Korean military headquarters in Saigon reports Korean troops have killed 2,800 Viet Cong since they went into combat last October.

Australian forces are based in Bien Hoa Province, a coastal city 40 miles southeast of Saigon. Like the Koreans, they specialize in search-and-destroy sweeps of their region.

In addition to the aided military contingents, eight countries have sent volunteer medical teams of doctors, nurses and medical technicians. These teams are from the United States, The Philippines, Switzerland, Italy, Nationalist China, Australia and New Zealand. One other team is made up of Cuban refugee doctors.

Bill Adds Nine Seats to Legislature

TORONTO (CP)—The legislature approved in principle Wednesday a bill adding nine seats to the 108-member house and redrawing most of the province's electoral boundaries.

The redistribution bill still must go through committee of the whole, but final approval is expected with a minimum debate.

Redistribution will not become effective until the 27th Ontario legislature is dissolved.

Both Andrew Thompson, Liberal opposition leader, and New Democratic Leader Donald MacDonald suggested to the government Wednesday the establishment of a permanent redistribution commission and the enactment of a statute to cover future representation changes.

Premier Robarts rejected the idea, saying he is against the rigidity which this might lead to.

WANTS LEADERSHIP VOTE

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said post his leadership of the Progressive Conservative party is a vote at a leadership convention within a year, Allan Lawrence, Conservative member of the legislature for St. George, said Wednesday. He told the Rosedale Young Progressive Conservative Association that party members in Toronto are solidly against Mr. Diefenbaker.

Heavy Rainfall Not Caused by Ontario Hydro

TORONTO (CP)—The legislature was told Wednesday that Ontario Hydro was not responsible for heavy rainfall experienced over parts of the province during the first week of August last year. .

Robert Boyer (PC—Muskoka), first vice-president of Hydro, said the company began rain-making experiments in the north last year, but extensive weather provided coincidental with the cloud-seeding operations.

In other business:

—Mr. Boyer told the house that Hydro's east and west systems will be interconnected into a single power grid that will join electrical systems from Saskatchewan to Quebec.

—Health Minister Matthew Dymond differed with two psychiatrists who certified a 18-year-old Welland boy as mentally ill. Dr. Dymond said the assessment vere "could not be the most suitable and desirable place for continuing care and treatment" of the boy, but decisions regarding professional matters were up to the hospital superintendent.

—Liberal Leader Andrew Thompson told the legislature that the 2 persons under the age of 16 have been confined with adult offenders in Peterborough County Jail during the last 2½ years.

—Members approved in principle a bill adding nine more seats to the 108 - member house. The legislature also approved in principle redrawing most of the province's electoral boundaries.

—Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree said the government is not yet ready to introduce legislation giving Ontario nurses the right to collective bargaining.

—Transport Minister Irwin Haskett said no warrants will be issued in the case of a 20-year-old Weston, Ont. driver who said he was charged $284 for car insurance on the basis of an "altered" ifaxsport department document.

Many Questions Remain Unanswered as Nuclear Association Ends Meeting

WINNIPEG (CP) — Questions about possible foreign sales and establishment of a new heavy water plant remained unanswered Wednesday as the Canadian Nuclear Association ended its annual meeting. But final answers are not far off.

Even without these answers the three-day conference gave strong indications that Canada's nuclear industry is in excellent shape.

"We've come a long way in 20 years," said Dr. A. J. Moorcraft, managing director of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.'s Whiteshell nuclear research establishment at nearby Pinawa.

"We've turned a combination of basic research and industrial co-operation into an industry that is one of the leaders in the world," he said in an interview.

Canada's population and development was limited but construction of resources have proved "we can do anything we want."

Close co - operation between government and industry have brought Canada to the fringe of "an exciting era" where it will be able to compete on its own terms with any country in the world.

SUPPORTS HIS VIEWS

Dr. Moorcraft's views received some support from Fenzil Alajoki, director of Finland's government-owned power company.

Mr. Alajoki said Canada might have a "slight advantage" in the competition to supply Finland's first nuclear power station. The Bold topic has been narrowed down to three companies, Canadian General Electric, Westinghouse in the U.S., and a West German firm, AEC.

But the U.S. and German bids were for nuclear reactors using expensive enriched uranium fuel, Mr. Alajoki added in an interview. This means Finland would have to rely on the U.S. for fuel.

While the Canadian natural uranium type reactor would require installation initially, it would have lower operating costs and fuel could be purchased from "many different countries."

The Finnish delegate said the three companies involved now are working on final bids with the chance to revise proposals to build the 250,000 kilowatt power station. Final decision on the matter would be made late this year or early in 1967.

The nuclear station probably will be only the first of many for Finland. He said his nation's power demands were growing so fast that a new 250,000 kilowatt station would be needed every four years.

While there was no guarantee they would be nuclear stations, atomic power had a big cost advantage. Finland's present thermal power plants use either coal imported from Poland or oil imported from Russia. Neither of these nations were willing to guarantee long - term LACK INFORMATION

Mines Minister Pepin brought up the lack of information on Canada's second heavy water plant, expected to be built by COE.

The company has until June 15 to announce the site for the plant, but no indication had been given yet.

Even questions by Prime Minister Pearson got the same answer — "no favorites," Mr. Pepin said.

June 15 also is the deadline for Deuterium of Canada Ltd. to provide proof of financial responsibility to double the production of its heavy water plant at Glace Bay, N.S.

Deuterium of Canada already has a 15-year contract to supply 2,000 tons of heavy water to AECL. The government has offered to double this amount, matching the 400 - tons - a-year production proposed by COE.

If both are approved, Mr. Pepin added, Canada would become the world's largest producer of heavy water by 1971.

Heavy water is used in experimental nuclear reactors throughout the world but Canadian industry has specialized in a reactor using natural uranium fuel and heavy water as a moderator or control over the nuclear reaction. Other types of reactors do not use heavy water but require expensive enriched uranium fuel.

Says Anglicans Decade Behind In Sex Views

TORONTO (CP)—Rev. F. O. Ongley of Oshawa accused the Anglican Church of being at least a decade behind the sexual revolution in America.

He also criticized the diocesan council for social service for failing to provide clergy with directives in matters of morality.

In an address to the synod of the diocese of Toronto Wednesday night, he said: "The clergy are confused and the council for social service must help the clergy cope with their changing role."

Rev. J. F. O'Neil, chairman of the Anglican social service centre, said the centre will soon begin a round-the-clock service, similar to that operated by the Salvation Army, to help those in despair. He said the Salvation Army will provide guidance for the preparation of the service.

MUST KNOW WORD

In another address, Arnold Edinborough said the only way to spread the Christian word is to know it.

Mr. Edinborough, editor of Saturday Night magazine, said the "real job to be done is training lay people so that they know what they are talking about."

"We are not getting to the youth. If we don't try harder to get to people between 15 and 25, they won't make much effort to get us," he said.

He warned that the church is losing up to 90 per cent of its teen-agers.

COULD END WORKS

CALGARY (CP)—The federal winter works program could be discontinued unless a new formula can be found, Jean Marchand, minister of manpower and immigration, said Tuesday. He said in an interview some areas cannot afford the cost of materials so the money is used for projects that are not worth while. The program is being reviewed in hope of finding some new formula.

Business Briefs

SET EARNINGS MARK

Dominion Stores Ltd. had record net earnings of $10,855,576 or $1.32 a share in the year ended March 19 compared with $10,277,227 or $1.26 a share last year, says the annual report released Wednesday in Toronto. Sales jumped 13 per cent to $313,856,740 from $467,735,051.

FAILURES DOUBLE

Liabilities of Canadian business failures in April were more than double those for March and 37 per cent higher than in April, 1965, Dun and Bradstreet reports in Toronto. The company said liabilities in April were $18,300,000 with the total boosted by three bankruptcies with aggregate losses of about $7,000,000.

They're back again!

The gladiators of wrestledom open the 1966 season at Memorial Arena come Friday night with accent on muscle and garnished with a couple of the midget fraternity.

Four bouts round out what appears to be an exciting opening card with the midgets, always a popular attraction in these parts; providing the icing on the cake.

Headlining the program is a 60-minute two-of-three falls event is the powerful boy from Boston Terry Garvin whose name implies he is a tough fighter. Facing him will be Golden Boy Dupree who hails from Hollywood and comes with an enviable record.

Out of New York comes Don Juan, and don't let his name fool you — he's far from a lover boy — who tangles with a clever Puerto Rican ring Tiko Montes. Plenty of action will be seen in this semi-final going to a 45-minute limit.

Well-known here from past exciting performances is the popular midget Roger Littlebrook, a pistole bundle from Britain who takes on Frenchy Lamonte from Shreveport and who will give Master Roger the chase of his life.

Bill Williams of Vancouver and Billy Cash of Charlotte, N.C., will open the show with a twenty-minutes limit bout.

HULL VERSUS SHACK

Well, matters have finally come down to a duel between Bobby Hull, Chicago Black star and Eddie Shack the "clear-that-track" personality of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

It says here that Marse Robert and Mister Ed will tangle in a battle on the Mohawk Dragway Sunday in what should be a track spectacular.

Both are newcomers to drag-strip racing and the five-heat affair should provide some exciting action.

An innovation is that the Hull — Shack duel will be started by the dropping of a puck and not the usual electronic starting system.

The first event of the meet starts at 12.30. The Mohawk Dragway is at Deseronto.

WAR TO THE DEATH

They're going to do it the South American way. The S. A. heavyweight champion Quarrango Bonavera dreamed up the idea and his June 23 opponent George Chuval fell in with it.

They have asked the New York State Athletic Commission to let them fight until one or the other wins. The bout is a ten-rounder in Madison Square Garden.

"Everybody expects a knockout in our fight" quoth the owner "so let's make sure they see one. Why spoil it for them by limiting the fight to ten rounds. This is a fight, not a boxing match."

The last fight to the finish was staged Feb. 19, 1910 when Ad Wolgast knocked out Battling Nelson in the 40th round. The longest fight on record occurred April 6, 1893 in New Orleans when Andy Bowen fought Jack Burke for 110 rounds. The bout took seven hours 19 minutes. At the end of that time, neither fighter was able to continue, and the referee called the fight a draw.

Point Anne Shades City Hotel

Point Anne Consumers rebounded from Tuesday's whipping to edge City Hotel 3-2 in a hot Commercial Softball League tilt under the lights at Alemite Park last night.

The winners scored the winning run in the fifth on a two-out walk, error and single.

In the bottom of the seventh, City's Jack Martin clouted what looked like a home run to tie the game. He was called out, however, for failing to touch first base, setting off the fireworks. During the arguements, City's Doug Murray was ejected from the game.

Ron Marcelo buried the victory, a six - hitter, while striking out six and walking four.

Larry Hull pitched the loss, allowing five hits, walking seven and walking four.

Ron Marcelo paced his own attack with a double and single for two rbi while Glen Maracle, Rick Rosebush and Perry Ellis had the other safeties.

Jack Martin had a double and single, Brooks a double, Doug Hull, Doug Murray and Bobby Ebbier a single each for the losers.

Belvedere Wins With Home Run

Greg Perry slammed a two-run homer in the fifth inning to give Belvedere Hotel a 4-2 Commercial decision over Lightfoots at Prince Charles School last night.

Lightfoots had overcome a 2-0 deficit with single markers in the third and fifth prior to Perry's winning blow.

Loser Jim Hall struck out five and passed four batters.

Don Smith was Lightfoot's starter, giving way to loser George Young in the two-run Belvedere second frame. They allowed only three hits, struck out eight, seven by Young, and walked three.

Perry had a single to go with his home run. The other Belvedere hit was a double by Al Shock.

Tigers Plan Tryout Camp In Guelph

GUELPH (CP) — Walt Jeffries, former manager of Guelph CCOV's of the intercounty baseball association senior series, said Wednesday he has completed arrangements for a major league tryout-camp to be conducted here by Detroit Tigers June 11-12 for players between the ages of 16 and 21.

Yesterday's Stars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitching — Sandy Koufax, Dodgers, shut out St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 on a seven-hitter for his ninth victory of the season. It was the sixth straight victory for the Los Angeles ace, who also struck out nine and walked only one.

Batting—Rich Allen, Phillies, drove in four runs—three with a 447-foot homer—as Philadelphia completed a sweep with a 7-4 victory over Chicago Cubs in the second game of a double-header.

Can't Throw; Hits 400-Foot Homers

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rich Allen can't throw over 60 feet, but he's having no difficulty hitting over 400.

Philadelphia's star third baseman, who missed 39 games with a dislocated right shoulder, is concentrating in the outfield.

Allen drove in four runs—three of them with a 447-foot blast—Wednesday night as the Phillies rallied for a 7-4 victory in the second game and completed a sweep of their doubleheader against Chicago Cubs. Philadelphia won the opener 4-3.

It was Allen's second 400-foot homer since returning to the lineup last week. He's had nine hits in 30 swings and shows a season's average of .364. With him back, the Phils have won six of eight.

Allen's shoulder is still not right. "I might be able to get the ball 60 feet if the game depended on it," he says.

HAS A CADDY

Rather than play him at third base where he'd have to throw often, Phils manager Gene Mauch has put Allen in left field and assigned shortstop Cookie Rojas as his caddy.

On every ball hit to left, Wine races out to relay Allen's weak throws.

Willie Mays hit his 511th career homer as San Francisco Giants defeated Houston Astros 4-3, Los Angeles Dodgers blanked St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 and Sandy Koufax' seven-hitter, Houston Astros shut out Cincinnati Rede 2-0 and Pittsburgh Pirates downed New York Mets 3-1.

After Allen's homer, Wine broke the tie with the first of two doubles and then the Phillies pulled away.

In the first game, Tony Taylor's eighth inning single brought Bill White home with the winning run.

Mays' two-run homer in the first inning was an inside-the-park shot that broke off Mack Jones' glove as he and Hank Aaron collided. Willie McCovey followed with a solo homer and Jim Davenport hit one in the sixth.

NEARS WILLIAMS' MARK

Mays' homer pushed him within four of Ted Williams, pioneers to wave on his Atlanta flight in the ninth with Lindy McDaniel coming on to get the last two outs.

Koufax struck out nine and walked just one in gaining his ninth victory in 10 decisions. He left the only run he needed in the seventh when Willie Davis tripled and came home on Bob Tolan's error.

"This is the best I've thrown all year," said the Dodger ace, who won his sixth straight and lowered his earned run average to 1.46.

Dave Giusti and Claude Raymond combined on Houston's five-hit shutout of the Reds, who dropped their fifth in a row. Jim Wynn drove in one run with a single and Rusty Staub homered for the other Astro run.

Matty Alou drove in one run and scored another in the Pirates' victory over the Mets. Don Cardwell got credit for his first victory after four losses although he needed last-out help from Al McBean to halt a Mets' threat in the ninth.

Bloomfield Grabs Lead

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

PICTON — Timely hits and a steady pitching effort by Ken DeMille guided Bloomfield to a 3-0 triumph over Trudeau Motors, and into first place in the Belleville and District Softball League, here last night.

The triumph was Bloomfield's third in succession, two via shutouts, while Trudeau's suffered their initial setback of the young campaign.

DeMille scattered half a dozen Belleville hits, working on a two-hitter until the seventh. He struck out an even dozen and walked two, one of them intentionally.

His mates got him a pair of runs in the third and another in the seventh.

Trudeau's big chance came in the top of the seventh. Mavety singled and Soule doubled with one out. Baker bunted but Mavety was caught off third on Weese's alert play on the bunt and eventually run down for the second out. Marsela was then put on to fill the sacks. DeMille struck out Wannemaker, the losers' leadoff batter, for the fourth time to get out of the jam unscratched.

Leo St. Denis got Bloomfield's first run when he led off the third with a solid homer over Soule's head in left field. Weese went into second with a double on some alert running and MacDonald slashed a double down the foul line for the 2-0 score. DeMille followed with a single for a fine play. Muirhead to Mavety, cut MacDonald down in a diving play at home.

In the seventh, McNorris got the insurance tally. He tripled and continued home on Muirhead's throwing error. It was the game's lone miscue.

Pat Marsela gave up nine hits on the loser's hilltop. He struck out four and walked a pair. Good outfield catches by Plane and Muirhead helped him out in the first but Soule was also a going after St. Denis' circuit clout.

Dave Lockwood had a triple and single, Ken DeMille two singles, Leo St. Denis his homer, Doug McNorris a triple, Ron Weese and Keith MacDonald a double each for the county crew. Eldon Carson added a single.

Bobcats, the loop's only unbeaten club, meet Ellis Juniors in an 8.30 game at Belleville's Alemite Park tonight.

Trudeau Motors: Wannamaker 3b, Drake 1b, Muirhead cf, Weston ss, Plane rf, Mavety c, Soule lf, Baker 3b, Marsela p.

The Belmont
Plan Strategy Against The 'King'

NEW YORK (AP)—Trainers of nine three-year-olds today mapped the strategy which they hope will carry their finely tuned thoroughbreds to victory Saturday in the 98th running of the Belmont Stakes and rein favored Kauai King's bid for racing's triple crown.

To some the strategy calls for sending their horses out in front at the start of the 1¼ miles with the hope that they'll have enough left to win when they reach the home stretch.

To others the plans call for keeping Kauai King within range and hoping their horses can outfinish the winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

A third group includes those who will have their horses trail far off the early pace and then attempt to strike fast in the stretch, when the leaders tire.

But the trainers' agree that the best thing they have going for them is the last quarter-mile of Aqueduct's racing oval. They see not sure their charges can go 1¼ miles. But neither are they sure that Kauai King can do it. None ever have raced that far and only one—King Ranch's Buffle —ever has worked the Belmont distance.

Camny Max Hirsch, who has saddle four Belmont winners, sent Buffle 1¼ miles over Belmont Park's main track. His time was 2:37 3-5.

Entries will be made Friday morning. Post time will be 3:15 p.m. EDT Saturday with New York racing officials looking for a crowd of 65,000 up. The CBC will televise the classic.

In addition to Kauai King and Buffle, the Belmont runners will be Advocator, Rehabilitate, ridden by Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., Fast Count, Fleet Shoe, Amberoid, Highest Honor and Valiam.

Celebrities Attract Sellout Crowd

Madoc Sports Dinner

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

MADOC — It's inaugural Celebrities Dinner wrote a glowing page in the sports archives of this mid-Hastings village last night.

A capacity crowd of over 400, representative of all walks of life of the district contributed a substantial amount to the Artificial Ice Fund of the arena committee.

It was a grand party. The head table scintillated with top-ranking stars of hockey, football and wrestling; with Bobby Hull taking the popularity contest.

The post-dinner program sparkled with brilliant wit, anecdote and story led by that master dialectician Rudy Pilous now general manager of the San Francisco Seals in the master of ceremonies role.

Among the "400" were representatives of provincial and municipal government, business and industry and general fandom of the county and district.

The celebrities included besides Messrs. Pilous, Storey, Shipp and Lord Layton, Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks; Bryan Watson, Detroit Red Wings; Bob Pulford and Johnny Bower of the Maple Leafs; Red O'Quinn general manager Ottawa Rough Riders; Harry Watson, ex-NHL star; Murray Henderson, ex Boston Bruin; Bob Dillabough of the Bruins and Hal Kelly CBC sports commentator.

Among the visiting dignitaries were Mayor H. J. McFarland of Picton; Mayor Jack Ellis of Belleville; Hastings county warden Clayton Hall; Lee Grills, M. P., Clarke Rollins, M.P.P., Rod Welsh, M.P. and reeves of county communities. The Madoc village council attended in a body.

COUNTRY STYLE DINNER

The dinner was strictly "country style", home - cooked with all the "trimmings" that go with roast beef as only the Madoc district lady chefs can cook it. Some 90 ladies prepared and served it and received many well-deserved accolades.

Reeve Tom Burnside added his official welcome before introducing visiting municipal and industry dignitaries. These also included a former popular Madoc "boy" Jack Baker now vice-president of the Hiram Walker Distilleries. Village priest Father O'Neill was a head - table guest.

The Kiwanis Club of the village headed by president Don Henderson, which sponsored the dinner was out in force augmented by members of the district Kiwanis clubs.

During the reception hour which preceded the dinner, the cynosure of all eyes, were Bobby Hull and his Stanley Cup " shadow" Bryan Watson. The pair are the best of friends and were besieged by autograph hunters and camera wielders.

Humor was the keynote of the post-dinner speeches, revealing a delightful "other side" of professional athletes and those connected with major sports.

The "running feud" between Red Storey and Rudy Pilous and the humorous anecdotes had the big audience in stitches. Lord Athol was at his best as was Billy Shipp.

Johnny Bower, Bobby Pulford spoke briefly. Red O'Quinn strassed the fact the Ottawa Rough Riders were promoting scholarships for promising secondary school football players.

In serious vein Red Storey lamented the fact that hockey was losing interest in Canada. "Look at the empty arenas." He praised the NHL expansion program stating it will provide opportunities for 140 youngsters. Then he quipped "They talk about education. Look at this head table. With the exception of the clergy there's not a brain here — but I wish I had their bank-rolls."

Bob Dillabough and Murray Henderson took bows and Hal Kelly spoke briefly.

Bryan Watson received a fine ovation when he rose to speak. He paid fine tribute to Gordie Howe saying he is the finest player "I ever played with...He is a gentleman on and off the ice who goes out of his way to be nice."

He had the honor and privilege of checking Bobby Hull in the playoffs and I don't know how he put up with me. He is one of the finest competitors in the NHL and he'll be worth the $100,000 he'll ask next year. I am plugging for the job of being his business manager."

Johnny Bower with other speakers paid tribute to the Lands and Forest Department for their co-operation in arranging the fishing trip enjoyed by many of the stars which was followed by a fish fry luncheon.

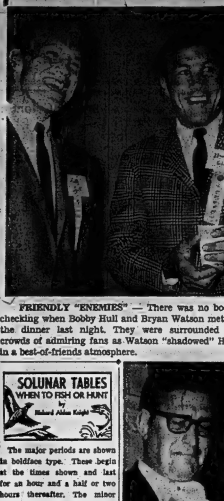
Bob Pulford spoke of the Maple Leafs. "Like the fishing trip" he said, "we were shut out."

Lord Layton was in a rare raconteur form with many funny stories. In serious vein he advocated the study of sports talent in youngsters to see which suited them best.

Mayor McFarland produced the world championship hockey cup won by the Belleville McFarlands in 1959 saying that if the Russians or anybody wanted it back "they will have to fight for it. We've got the army in Picton to back us up."

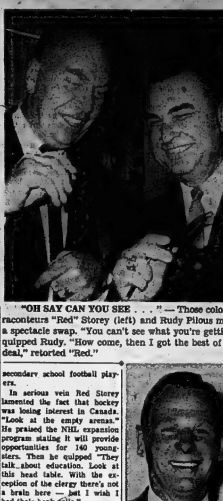
Bobby Hull received a standing ovation. The dynamic Black Hawks star always at ease at the podium paid tribute to his former coach Rudy Pilous, Mayor McFarland and Bob Wilson.

Incidentally Mr. Pilous announced that Wilson had been secured as assistant general manager of the new San Francisco Seals.



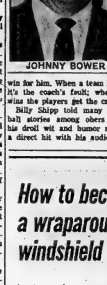
"I have been to many parties, especially in the U.S. where the best men were said to be in attendance, in my opinion the best men are here" Hull said.

"Hockey is a great game for the kids" he said, "it makes them physically as well as mentally fit."



In lighter vein referring to Bryan Watson and his "clutch and hold shadowing", Bobby said, turning to Watson: "Next year I'm going to put a saddle on my back."

He said Billy Reay was a great coach but the individuals didn't win for him. When a team loses it's the coach's fault; when it wins the players get the credit.



Billy Shipp told many football stories among others and his droll wit and humor made a direct hit with his audience.

FRIENDLY "ENEMIES" — There was no body-checking when Bobby Hull and Bryan Watson met at the dinner last night. They were surrounded by crowds of admiring fans as Watson "shadowed" Hull in a best-of-friends atmosphere.

Ex-Dodger Top Fireman For Tigers

Podres Makes Good

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

It's taken two months—and two leagues—but Johnny Podres finally has pitched nine innings.

Podres, acquired from Los Angeles Dodgers last month, continued his strong relief pitching for Detroit Wednesday night as he posted his second straight victory with 3 1-3 innings of one-hit relief work in the Tigers' 9-4 triumph over Minnesota Twins.

The 23 - year - old lefthander now has made six appearances for the Tigers and allowed only four hits and two runs while running his work for the season to nine innings. Over the first month he had pitched only 5 2-3 innings for the Dodgers.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles out lasted California Angels 9-7 in 10 innings, Kansas City Athletics walloped Cleveland Indians 8-3, Chicago White Sox downed New York Yankees 6-2 and Washington Senators whipped Boston 6-5 before the Red Sox took the night cap 5-0.

Podres, plagued by wild hot years by arm trouble, figured as a starter with the Dodgers during the Sandy Koufax-Don Drysdale holdout siege but became expendable when the Dodger aces signed. The Tigers grabbed him for cash and a player to be named later.

Against the Twins, Podres came on in the fourth inning with two men on and two out. He walked Jim Hall, but got Tony Oliva on a grounder to first. He then gave only a single by Harmon Killebrew before leaving for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Al Kaline drove in four runs for the Tigers but Jerry Lumpe supplied the key hit with a two-run single in the seventh inning that snapped a 3-3 tie.

The Twins built a 5-0 lead with the help of Harmon Killebrew's seventh homer but Kaline singled in two runs in the fourth and Dick McAuliffe tripled and Norm Cash's grounder produced a tie in the sixth.

Jerry Adair was 3 for the Orioles with a tie-breaking pinch-hit single in the 10th after Baltimore had filled the bases on singles by Paul Blair and Dave Johnson and a walk to Andy Etchebarren. Luis Aparicio's sacrifice fly produced an insurance run.

HIT TWO HOMERS

Boog Powell hit two homers and Andy Etchebarren one but Orioles' ace Hall had to play catch up, tying the Angels 7-7 in the eighth on a double by Brooks Robinson and a pinch-hit single by Frank Robinson.

The Athletics tagged Indians' starter John O'Donoghue and two successors for 13 hits, including homers by Ed Charles and Ken Harrelson and triples by Dick Green and Danny Cater. Green's triple and a single by Joe Nossek in the sixth broke a 3-3 tie and put Kansas City ahead to stay.

Tom Tresh's error and singles by Dave Apex, Bill Skowron and Floyd Robinson gave the White Sox two runs in the third inning. They also scored what turned out to be the decisive run in the fifth when he walked, stole second and came all the way home on Bill Skowron's grounder.

Two - run doubles by Bob Chance and Dick Nen in the last two innings brought the Senators their opening victory. The Red Sox took the nightcap as Bob Sadowski and Jose Santiago limited the Senators on three hits and Rico Petrocelli collected his sixth homer.

Subdued Cassius Clay

Denies Beat-Draft Quote

NEW YORK (AP)—A subdued Cassius Clay returned by plane from Cairo Wednesday and denied that he had said he was coming home "to beat the draft."

"I didn't say anything like that," said Clay on his arrival when asked about a story from Cairo May 27 quoting him to that effect.

"That's just some mad, angry reporter trying to get something started.

"It would be ignorant to make a statement like that. It would be foolish to say anything like that."

The heavyweight champion however, declined to answer questions on his draft status and whether he was a conscientious objector.

Clay is appealing his reclassification to 1-A, which makes him subject to military call-up.

VISITED UAR

He visited the United Arab Republic after he stopped British-Henry Cooper in the sixth round of a title fight at London May 21.

Clay, who prefers his Muslim name of Muhammad Ali, had a 40-minute talk Tuesday with President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Asked how about his particulars and whether he was proud to be an American, Clay replied: "I'm not saying anything about that. That's a tough question."

He added that no matter what he said it might be misunderstood, so he preferred to remain silent.

He reported that he was ready to defend his title against West Germany's Karl Mildenberger. He also said that if Floyd Patterson were acceptable he would be interested in meeting light heavyweight champion Joes Torres of New York.

Reject Finish Fight

NEW YORK (AP)—There will be no fight to the finish for heavyweights George Chuvalo of Toronto and Argentina's Oscar Bonavena at Madison Square Garden June 23. They will meet in a scheduled 10-rounder.

Both boxers' request for a fight to the finish was rejected by Edwin B. Dooley, the new chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, in his first ruling as he took over the post Wednesday.

"It would not be in the best interests of the boxers," said Dooley. "It would be a big step backwards since all of the measures passed in recent years have been for the protection of the boxers."

There is a New York state law against fights to the finish.

Dick Brown Has Second Brain Tumor

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dick Brown, catcher for Baltimore Orioles, will begin receiving extra treatments this week to diminish a second brain tumor.

"The situation isn't good," his wife, Larry, shortstop for Cleveland Indians, said Wednesday. Larry himself is recovering from surgery removing a section of the skull and nose.

Larry was the first to reveal the tumor condition. The second brain surgery in less than three months. A spokesman for the Orioles confirmed the essentials of Larry's description and said the club would make no further statement since it considered it now a family matter.

A tumor described as about the size of a golf ball was removed from the 31-year-old catcher's brain March 7. His last internal surgery again last Friday.

How They're Biting

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sports fishing hit an early-season peak last weekend, with reports of catches ranging from the hundreds coming in from across Ontario.

Foresters in all 22 districts of the Department of Lands and Forests reported prospects for all species are good for the next week, although the hot, muggy east catches of cold-water fish are expected to begin tapering off as the weather settles down.

Anglers can almost take their pick of baits that are proving successful. Trout are almost everything in the lure box, from worms, live minnows, minnow lures and spoons to wobblers and feathered jigs.

Pickerel are being taken on or with lake trout, pickerel and pike. Speckled trout fishing reached good in some areas, but rainbow trout successes were tapering off.

SOUTH

Lake Simcoe—Pickerel, good to good, pike, fair to good, bass and speckled trout poor. Pickerel have been good in the Trent Canal—where you can try a feathered jig. Georgian Bay—pike and pickerel fair, lower Nottawasaga River, Lake Simcoe and Cooks Bay poor. Sparrow Lake and Lake St. John fair. North River excellent. Panfish catches good.

EAST

Kemptville—Lake trout good and pike good, some bass fair to good. Charleston, Red Horse and Lower Rideau lakes best for lake trout, Thousand Islands and Lake St. Frances for pike, Upper Rideau Lake for pickerel.

Lindsay—Two 14-pound lake trout were taken from Dreg Lake as good results for this species were reported across the district. Pickerel have been only fair in most places, pike fair to good, speckled trout poor to good. Minnows, worms and artificial minnows have been effective for pickerel in the Kawartha Lakes, where the best spot has been Buckhorn. Other good lake trout fishing has been in Paul, Stone and Kennisis Lakes, Haliburton area, where bass have attracted good pike, lake pickerel.

Trout—Lake trout and speckled trout good to fair, rainbow trout poor, pike good, pickerel good to excellent, panfish good. Best baits have been spinners, off on the weather switched. Five minnows. Fishing for hot spots have been East, West and Morin lakes for pickerel, Westmanhurst Lake for lake trout and the Dacre divisions for speckled trout.

WEST

Lake Erie — Pickerel have been fair in the Detroit River and Lake Erie, perch good throughout Lake Huron and panfish good in Michell's and Goderich harbors. Worms and minnows are most popular baits.

Lake Huron—Angling for all species has been only fair.

Manager To Protest Tactics

TOKYO (AP)—The manager and challenger for Bobo Zoro of Hawaii said Wednesday he plans to file a protest with the World Boxing Association against the tactics of Masahiko (Fighting) Harada in winning Tuesday night's world bantamweight title fight.

Harada outpointed Zoro unanimously in a decision many disputing the title he had won from the Brazilian last year.

"I am not satisfied with the decision," said Zoro's manager, Tetsuharu Kawakami. "Harada did not fight. He won by holding, clinching and pushing."

THE CARROLL Palmer Method

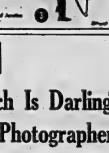
BY GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

SAND SHOTS REQUIRE UPRIGHT SWING PLANE



Occasionally conditions force a golfer to change his swing slightly on a given shot. Such is the case when he finds himself in sand.

Sand shots require a more upright swing than normal so that the clubhead will enter the sand behind the ball (Illustration No. 1) and then cut under it.

To produce an upright swing, you merely stand a bit closer to the ball than normal and keep most of your weight on your left foot during your backswing.

This will cause you to hinge your wrists early on your backswing and your club will rise and descend abruptly (see illustrations No. 2 and No. 3).

Raquel Welch Is Darling Of European Photographers

By BOB THOMAS

ROME (AP) — In the U.S., they still ask, "who is Raquel Welch?" In Europe, they know.

Raquel's splendid 37-23½-35½ can be seen on every newsstand. Recently, she appeared on five French magazine covers via Ursula Andress' two. She is featured in two others—as the star with Marcello Mastroianni in a comedy, to play the French wife with probably the sexiest torso, to star in Fraulein Dürtor for Thos de Laurentiis, all of which will probably be.

She is the darling of Europe's photographers, who consistently ask her: "Are you really an American?"

Indeed she is. Born in Chicago and reared in La Jolla, Calif., she was a 17-playboard dab star at the Makeup Artists' Ball just a couple of years ago. But her looks landed and Spanish name—she is of Spanish-French-German - English - Scottish descent—have European admirers who is one of them.

Raquel now is appearing in (and perhaps at) The Biggest Bundle of Them All with Victorio Deaks, Edward G. Robinson, Robert Wagner and Godfrey Cambridge. She is living in a villa near Rome, and there is no expression on the amazing turns in her career.

WORE WRONG COSTUME

She made one starring film in Hollywood last year, the unreleased science-fiction film Fantastic Voyage, but perhaps because she was clothed in a space suit, she attracted no great notice.

The avalanche began when Raquel went to England and the Canary Islands to star in One Million BC. Her striking appearance in a skimpy prehistoric costume attracted wide approval.

Raquel has enough film offers to extend her stay in Europe another two or three years, and it's likely that her film making will be centered here.

"Hollywood doesn't know what to do with me," she explained. "I'm not the girl next - door type; I don't look a bit like Natalie Wood. So I don't fit into the kind of movies they make in Hollywood.

"On the other hand, I do seem to fit the pictures the American companies finance in Europe. I'm not anti-Hollywood by any means; I just have to go where the work is."

RECALL MILLAN

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves, trying to bolster their infield, recalled second baseman Felix Millan Wednesday from Austin of the Texas League.

Minor Baseball Results

Boller's Little Giants defeated Lions Club 12-6 in tyke and BEW whipped the Jaycees 10-2 in peewee as Belleville Minor Baseball continued last evening.

Stephen Burke and Allan Wood combined for a one-hitter on the BEW pitching mound. They struck out six but issued ten free passes.

Brian Shepes and Peter Fraser gave up six hits in defeat, fanning five and walking 14.

Allan Wood and Stephen McDowell led BEW's doubles. Terry Collins two singles. Stephen Burke and Mike Goegan one each.

Cindy Jaskiech collected the lone Jaycee base hit.

Robin Guest and Wally Dalton pitched fastball ball for Boller's with 97 strikeouts to their credit. They walked four.

Don McTaggart and Allan Whitney allowed nine hits for Lions and struck out 21 batters. They issued but 4 downs.

Rick Collin, Wally Dalnard and Jet Forester had two hits each for the winners. Cliff Redbourne, Paul Meagher and Robin Guest shared the others.

Red Wings, Leafs Split Shutouts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The batters couldn't beat the pitchers and both teams came up with shutouts in an International League doubleheader at Toronto Wednesday night.

Billy Rohr struck out nine batters and allowed only five hits as Toronto Maple Leafs won the opener 8-0, and Tom Phoebus gave up four hits and struck out nine as Rochester Red Wings blanked the Leafs 11-0 in the nightcap.

In other league action, Toledo Mud Hens defeated Richmond Braves 8-4 and Jacksonville Suns blanked Columbus Jets 2-0.

May Start Fan War

Soccer Takes Over TV

LONDON (CP)—Britain is expected to go soccer-mad for three weeks this July and the anguished cries of those who are not fans are already being heard.

The BBC Tuesday announced it will televise 50 hours of football during prime viewing time when teams from 16 nations compete here for the World Cup. That works out to about two hours a night.

The independent television network every night for 16 hours.

Soccer fans—and there are millions of them—are overjoyed at the extensive coverage. But there also are millions of non-fans.

TIME FOR VACATION

Columnist Ann Buchanan writes in today's Daily Sketch that "television has solved my annual problem for me—when to take my vacation. "I intend to be hundreds of miles away from the dreaded goggle box during those three weeks in July. . . ."

The Daily Express has a cartoon of a housewife reacting to the news by sawing down the family TV aerial.

The Daily Mirror points out that "millions of viewers, especially women, are bored stiff with football."

Jo Grimond, liberal party leader, said he hopes BBC and ITV will get together to provide some alternative to football.

Injuries Hit White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox said Wednesday night third baseman Pete Ward of Montreal will be out of action four to six weeks because of a bursitis.

Only 24 hours earlier, the White Sox lost shortstop Ron Hansen for the rest of the season because of a ruptured spinal disc.

BRAZIL WINS CUP

TURIN (AP)—Brazil's Corinthians of Sao Paulo soccer team defeated Spain's Espanol of Barcelona—where Brazil's Santos city Wednesday night to win the city of Turin cup tournament on better scoring from the penalty points needed to break a 1-1 tie.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 3

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Full Moon position emphasizes travel, added knowledge, with interest to change with the times. Friend who advocates standing still may be misguided. Be aware.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You could receive something of value. Key is being ready to act on knowledge. Study Aries ... sound investment opportunity. Co-operate with mate, partner.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Emphasis on ability to unite opposing forces. Heed voice of experience ... be willing to learn. If you ask for what you require ... then you have better chance to succeed.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Be concerned with various methods of arriving at goal. Handle responsibility with dignity. Avoid brooding, complaining. Positive attitude brings forth best results.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 23): Fine for creative endeavors, meaningful decisions, possible travel. Also good for advertising, personal contacts. Let others know of your capabilities. Avoid false modesty.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Highlight willingness to be loyal, steadfast. Best course — stick to basic project, adhere to rules, regulations. Lunar position emphasizes family, home, people who care for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 — Oct. 22): If you are lost ... then difficulties could evaporate. Try to see both sides of any controversy. Those others will not press issues. Better to postpone journey if possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Misery question among friends requires thought, discussion. Take conservative course ... to avoid extravagance. Check with individual at a distance. Make necessary call.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Cycle high ... but pressing duties could cause fatigue. Realize value of pacing. Don't try to accomplish too much at once. Take special care with personal appearance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your knowledge may not be complete. There may be room to "romance" a bit on matters not on surface. Check behind the scenes. Heed words of older individual.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your methods may be open to constructive criticism. Know this and be ready with facts, figures. If you make some concession, you open way for gain, ultimate advance.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Take special care where contracts, legal papers enter picture. Stay on top of situation. Don't delegate duties if you can "be there" in person. Be self-reliant.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... you tend to be "on the go," have a bad for life and yearn to travel. Would make fine travel writer, editor, photographer.

Judgment June 28

Admit Tale of OPP Corporal Of Talk by Alleged Robbers While He Posed as Prisoner

The three-day Frankford bank robbery trial ended yesterday following the acceptance of voirdire evidence given Tuesday by Cpl. J. Claude Courville, a Cobourg O.P.P. officer who said he spent 20 hours in jail with the four Montreal men accused of the armed robbery.

Cpl. Courville testified he spent the night of April 1 and morning of April 2 in Hastings County Jail with the accused, Maurice Langis, 31, Armand Bisson, 29, Victor Tessier, 42, and Gilles Gaudette, 27. He related conversations he overheard and others in which he participated.

Judge J. C. Anderson gave Crown Attorney John Pringle and defence counsel Robert Temple until June 16 to submit their written arguments. Judge Anderson said he will reserve judgment until June 28.

Using the name of Corbett, and dressed in old clothes, Cpl. Courville was placed in bullpen number three in the jail here before any of the prisoners arrived and posed as a prisoner.

He admitted under cross examination he drank two and one-half pints of beer on the way from Cobourg to Belleville and poured beer over his head and clothing. Defence counsel Temple suggested the beer might have been blended with thinking about the events that transpired while he was in jail.

THIRD EXPERIENCE

Cpl. Courville, 41, said this was the third time he had performed these undercover duties. He said he had done the same thing in Peterborough in 1961 and in Simcoe in 1964.

The witness said, "As soon as Gaudette walked into the bullpen he said, 'They got me on bad charge. They pick me up on big highway and they got me on bank job.

"There was another prisoner besides myself and Gaudette in the bullpen. Gaudette asked him can [illegible] French?"

"The prisoner answered, 'No, we can't.'"

Cpl. Courville said he never mentioned to any of the accused whether he could or could not speak French.

He said he told Gaudette he was in jail for passing a bad cheque. "He asked me if it was my first offence. I said no, it was my second charge and I was already on suspended sentence.

"When I answered he said, 'Not me. I got bit record. This

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Much cooler air is advancing southward from Hudson Bay and by tonight is expected to reach the Muskoka and Haliburton regions after which it should push slowly southward into the lower Great Lakes. Southwest winds will bring warm air into the southern regions today although increasing cloudiness may tend to hold down the temperatures. Showers are expected to spread gradually eastward over most of southern Ontario today.

May Increase Price of Milk Next Month

TORONTO (CP)—A spokesman for the Ontario Milk Marketing Board says milk may cost a cent or two more a quart at the retail level next month because of a proposed increase in the price of fluid milk.

The board, composed of 27 producers, mostly from southern Ontario, has instructed farmers to raise the price of fluid milk to $3.75 a hundred-weight effective July 1. It was $3.39.

The increase, which would be effective throughout the province, still must be approved by the Ontario Milk Distributors' Association. If rejected, it could go to arbitration before the Ontario Labor Commission.

The distributors association met board members here Thursday to discuss the situation.

Milk sells in Toronto from 18 to 20 cents a quart, depending on whether it is bought in one, two or three-quart containers and whether it is home-delivered.

A 1 Timmins Thursday two milk distributors said they are protesting any increase. A joint statement from them said the milk marketing board "is concerned only with the benefit of those increases on the milk producers, having little regard for their impact upon the distributors, especially the small independents and very importantly upon the consuming public."

Future of Seven Days Show Still in Doubt

OTTAWA (CP) — The future of the CBC's This Hour Has Seven Days was left in doubt Thursday by corporation President J. Alphonse Ouimet.

He told the Commons broadcasting committee it may be impossible to continue the show next season.

As the committee concluded more than a month of hearings on the dropping of the co-hosts from the television show, Mr. Ouimet said recent statements by Executive Producer Douglas Leiterman which challenged management's authority had made necessary a study of the feasibility of continuing the program.

But he said if Seven Days is scrapped the CBC will turn out a magazine-type program that is "virile, aggressive and interesting."

Mr. Ouimet said the review, which he hopes will be completed this month, is required to determine whether the program can be produced according to CBC policies.

Mr. Leiterman, whom management says it wants to produce the show again, has stated that producers should be given the right to give editorial opinion and has defended use of "extra - legal" methods of reporting, Mr. Ouimet said.

"Such views are unacceptable to corporation."

The committee, set to work lasty month when the Toronto Producers' Association threatened strike action over the decision against keeping Patrick Watson and Laurier LaPierre as co-hosts, hopes to write its report in time for the three-day meeting of the CBC board of directors scheduled to start June 27.

The strike was postponed after Prime Minister Pearson named Stuart Keate, on leave of absence as publisher of the Vancouver Sun, to review the dispute to determine whether a solution was possible.

Mr. Keate found blame on both sides and urged CBC to give a clear explanation for its action. As it had a month be-

Industry Estimate Held Up

By PAUL DUNN

OTTAWA (CP)—Debate on industry department estimates continues today in the face of what Industry Minister Drury calls a New Democratic Party filibuster.

Thursday was the second day this session that the department's 1966-67 estimates have been before the Commons and at adjournment there was no end in sight. To quote Reid Scott (NDP — Toronto Danforth): "I am prepared to stay with this department almost indefinitely."

Earlier Thursday it appeared the estimates might not come up at all. Opposition Leader Diefenbaker moved adjournment of the House to debate Premier Jean Lesage's use of RCMP files in the case of Arthur Vachon, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux refused the subject was not sufficiently urgent to warrant an emergency debate.

Mr. Vachon was branded a security risk by the Quebec premier. Mr. Lesage said RCMP files had been made available to his government.

Mr. Diefenbaker contended the federal government condoned the delivery of RCMP information to Quebec officials. He said this betrayed the legitimate rights of individuals to liberty under the law.

Mr. Drury then moved into

British Seamen To Meet

By JIM ANDERSON

LONDON (CP)—Pressure for an even tighter clamp-down on Britain's trade appears to be growing among striking seamen.

The national executive of the 65,000-member seamen's union will meet Monday for the first time since the strike began 19 days ago.

It will be faced with appeals from strike committees in London, Liverpool and the northeast for stronger measures to break the deadlock.

It will also face a thinly-veiled appeal for a return to work made by Lord Pearson when the judicial inquiry into the strike he is heading began formal sessions Thursday.

He said: "If the strike could be called off and the men went back to work, our discussions and deliberations could take place in a calmer atmosphere, which would be a great advantage."

RESERVES DROP

His remarks that the strike is causing "great damage to international interests" were underlined Thursday by the news that Britain's gold and dollar reserves dropped $38,000,000 ($114,000,000) during May to $1,218,000,000 ($3,637,000,000).

Waitress Tells Grim Story At an Inquest Into Deaths

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP)—A waitress testified Thursday that Andre Durocher—the man who escaped from jail with Lucien Rivard—told her he had murdered a man and a woman shortly after the escape March 2, 1965.

Minutes later, Durocher testified that the waitress's dead husband was the killer.

They were testifying at the inquest into the deaths of Andre Paquette, 43, and Alice Rioux, 28.

The lime-covered bodies of Paquette and Miss Rioux were found May 10 in a shallow grave in the Piedmont-St. Hippolyte district of the Laurentians. The two had been missing since the night of March 2, 1965.

They are said to have sheltered Rivard after his escape in March, 1963, from Bordeaux jail. He was then being held for extradition on narcotics charges which brought him the 20-year sentence he now is serving in the United States.

Paquette has been mentioned in court as having been implicated in a $1,400,000 mail truck robbery in Montreal two years ago.

At the inquest Thursday, the 24-year-old waitress, testifying under her maiden name of Claudette Riopel, said Durocher told her last year he had killed Paquette and Miss Rioux outside their cottage in Piedmont.

Durocher countered by saying the killings were carried out by Miss Riopel's husband, Conrad Brunelle, a convict who hanged himself in his cell at St. Vincent de Paul [illegible] penitentiary two months ago.

Miss Riopel said she drove Durocher back to the cottage May 23, 1963, the day after the murders, because her husband had agreed to lend his car to Durocher.

When they got to the cottage, Durocher told her to stay in the car and went into the bush wearing rubber boots, carrying a pail, a bag of lime and a flask of water.

Durocher returned in the car complaining that they should have brought more water as that "they would have bubbled a lot more."

During the return trip to Montreal Durocher asked her if she knew what was going on. When she said she did not, Durocher volunteered to tell her the whole story.

Miss Riopel said Durocher told her he had handcuffed Paquette's hands behind his back and forced him to show where he had money hidden. Durocher got some money from inside a piano then more from a flat tin box buried under a flat stone.

Then, said Miss Riopel, Durocher said he forced the pair to their knees, stuffing a towel in Paquette's mouth so he would not scream.

She said Durocher told her he then shot Miss Rioux through the back of the head. Paquette, through the back of the head.

Miss Riopel was accompanied at the inquest by Montreal lawyer Leo-Rene Marandas, who produced a letter he said he had received from Conrad Brunelle a few days after Brunelle was found dead in his cell.

Miss Riopel read the letter aloud. In it, Brunelle said he knew homicide squad detectives would believe the story in Paquette-Rioux murders.

"I can't see myself spending several years in jail for some thing I didn't do and then come out broke and so old man, so I have decided to kill myself."

Brunelle asked the lawyer: "If ever Durocher puts the finger on me those murders I ask you to defend my name and that of my wife."

Photographs submitted in evidence showed a pair of handcuffs and a length of electric wire close to Paquette's body.

Speeding Toward Space Rendezvous With Target Ship

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Gemini 9 astronauts — shattering a 17-day jinx — rode a Titan II rocket into orbit today and sped at 17,500 miles an hour toward a rendezvous with a target satellite.

After two heart-breaking scrubs, astronauts Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan finally got going on a vital three-day flight that could bring the U.S. its second space triumph of a busy week.

"For the third time, go!" Stafford said as he sat in the spacecraft poised for the launch.

Just 31 hours after the Surveyor 1 moonship landed softly on the lunar surface and sent back dramatic pictures of possible manned landing sites, the Titan propelled Gemini 9 aloft on a vital, three-day rendezvous and space-walk mission.

The big Titan, with the rays of a bright sun glistening on its sides, rose slowly from its launch pad and sped out over the Atlantic Ocean, followed by a big white tail of vapor.

"We're right down the middle," flight director Eugene Kranz shouted. "Good! Excellent!"

"Everything," he told Stafford, "is green and go."

—"We're on our way!" Stafford yelled exultantly. "It's fantastic."

To make today's launch possible, Stafford faced and overcame the same communications problem that forced Wednesday's shutdown 100 seconds before firing.

A radio guidance command that would have given the spacecraft precise steering directions failed to get through to its computer. The time, the decision was made to go ahead. Shortly after the Gemini separated from its booster rocket, Stafford fired his jet thrusters to make necessary corrections in the orbit and plane of the spaceship and put it on the desired target program.

Before returning to earth, the astronauts were to perform many of the manoeuvres Apollo

Dockers Will Talk With Firms

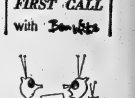
MONTREAL (CP) — The International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) said Thursday it cannot negotiate further with the Shipping Federation of Canada and has scheduled a new rounds of talks today with representatives of 11 stevedoring companies.



The ILA, which represents 4,200 striking longshoremen in Montreal, Trois - Rivieres and Quebec City, withdrew from negotiations with the shipping federation Thursday.

In a telegram to Prime Minister Pearson, ILA representatives said they "have been placed in the position of dealing with the Shipping Federation of Canada, the members of which are not our employers but are in fact foreign steamship companies for the most part located in Great Britain.

"It is obvious that the British seamen's dispute is responsible for the adamant and capricious attitude of the Shipping

Second Series of Moon Photos Received

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Surveyor I radioed its second long stream of pictures from the moon early today—photos of "desert and lunar terrain. They contained no surprises.

Some of the second series were out of focus, hurriedly taken to speed the camera on a full-circle sweep of the landing site — the Sea of Storms near the moon's equator.

Others of the series were remarkably clear, showing moving items as small as one-eighth of an inch, scientists said, after studying parts of the full-circle sweep, plan later to turn the camera back to snap interesting areas.

The 620-pound spacecraft settled gently on its three shock-absorbing legs early Wednesday after a successful 63-hour voyage of more than 250,000 miles.

The feat was hailed as a significant advance in the race to land men on the lunar surface by 1970.

Radios brought from President Johnson, along with praise, a renewed call for preserving the reaches of space for peaceful, scientific activities.

One shot of the horizon 1½ miles away showed small craters in the distance.

Another, aimed almost straight down at the ground, five feet away, depicted gravel-like objects on the apparently level pocked surface. Some were one-eighth to one-half inch in diameter.

Damage to Tobacco Plants Heavy in Southwest Ontario

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

One man died and damage to tobacco plants was heavy in southwestern Ontario as overnight frosts hit farmers' crops.

However, a Canadian Press survey shows that recent frosts haven't been as damaging as might be expected because less than 50 per cent of the tobacco has been planted because of cold spring weather.

The unseasonable cold, persisting into June, has put growth one to two weeks behind normal, agricultural reviewers say. It may cut the size of the expected 230,000,000-pound tobacco crop.

George Staley, a 45-year-old Tillsonburg pilot, died Thursday when his single-engine plane crashed near Simcoe. He had been flying over his brother's tobacco fields, to circulate air currents to prevent frost formation.

The Ontario agriculture department said the main damage was in the counties of Simcoe, Wellington, Waterloo, Grey and Kent, to tobacco, tomatoes and corn.

L. S. Vickery, director of the Delhi tobacco experimental farm, said frost early Wednesday and Thursday killed an estimated 40 per cent of the tobacco acreage planted in the area. He said about 40 per cent had been planted. Heaviest hit farmers were in the Aylmer, Strafford-ville, Langton, Tillsonburg and Port Burwell sections.

At Brantford many tobacco fields will have to be replanted. Farmers were saved from full-scale kewel, officials said, by the spotty nature of the frost.

Frost caused some damage to corn and barley crops in the Huron section of Lambton County. Damage was light in Perth, confined to legume crops.

Land O'Lakes Association Quits Hastings Group, Will Operate Independently

TWEED — The semi-annual membership meeting of the Land O' Lakes tourist association was held in the Northbrook Legion Hall on Wednesday.

The president, Mr. Jim Arbuckle of Arden, welcomed everyone and gave a report on the work that had been done since the last meeting. He said that the area had been divided into subdivisions to ensure equal representation in the whole area.

He said that in the past few months newspaper advertising had been stepped up with terrific results. Information signs have been distributed throughout the area.

Mr. Garth Reid of the Department of Tourism spoke to the members. He pointed out that the tourist industry is the third money earning industry in the province. He said it was the Department's intention to help all associations to promote the tourist industry and to help them set their goals for the grant money for tourist promotion.

Mr. Stan Walkers of Tweed gave the financial statement and this showed a substantial balance to carry on for the rest of the year.

A discussion followed, on whether to withdraw from the Hastings Land O' Lakes association and operate Land O' Lakes as an independent association. After a lengthy discussion it was decided by vote to withdraw and operate independently.

A discussion took place regarding a by-law which said that only a tourist operator could be president of the association. Most members felt that any paid-up member should be allowed to be president and an amendment was added to this by-law so that in future any member may be president.

Mr. Roy Cadwell of Madoc announced the proposal to set up a regional maple producers association and stated that anyone with maple trees on his property would be eligible to join. A meeting has been set up for June 18th at the Madoc Art Centre. If interest is sufficient a meeting will be set up with a government representative.

Mr. Arbuckle read a letter from the Lake Ontario Development Association whose purpose is to promote cooperative development for sportsmen's shows.

Mr. Ted Courneyea, a former president, was presented with a piece of luggage on behalf of the association in appreciation for his work

SPEAKS ON CONSERVATION

Mr. Jim Arbuckle introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Norman Patrick, the District Forester of the Department of Lands and Forests from Tweed. Mr. Patrick spoke on the conservation program. He said that the development of natural resources was a large scale financial program to fisheries and wild life. He said that water is much the same as land, that there is a limit to the fishing it can produce. He said that angling was an inefficient method of harvesting fish. All sorts of things influence what happens to the fish and there are specific requirements for management. The Department is now becoming aware of the problem of pollution which greatly affects the fish population. There are intensive studies underway to determine the causes of the decrease of the fish population are residue such as D.D.T., fertilizer, the need to supply enough food and cover and the sea lamprey are other problems. These problems make it difficult for tourist operators when guests don't catch fish and Mr. Patrick suggested that tourist operators advertise recreation, not fishing. He said fish stocking was not the answer.

THURSDAY, June 2, 1966

A Conservative attempt to get an emergency Commons debate on the use of RCMP file information against Argosy Yachts, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association, was ruled out of order.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker sought the debate, saying the federal government condoned the handing over of RCMP information to the Quebec provincial police.

Prime Minister Pearson said he hopes to appoint soon a three-man royal commission to study national security procedures.

Auto safety took the limelight as the Commons studied industry department spending estimates.

Howard Graffety (PC—Prince - Mississquoi) said federal enforcement of safety legislation in the field could not be handled by half.

FRIDAY, June 3

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. to continue study of industry department estimates. The Senate stands adjourned until June 7.

Mazinaw Inn Changes Hands

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Wilbell and son George of Fort Erie have recently purchased Mazinaw Inn from Mazinaw Enterprises, Limited, and are now operating this popular resort at the foot of Lake Mazinaw.

Warren Frid, son of a former owner, Harvey Frid of Belleville, will continue as assistant manager for a year.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbell owned Wilbrell Opels and Sports in Fort Erie for the past 13 years. They were both active in the community life of that town, where they were a keen interest in the Jaycees and the Chamber of Commerce. They are continuing to operate the business in Fort Erie for the time being, with Mr. Wilbell and son George, taking turns at the shop in western Ontario.

Mrs. Wilbell is the former Janet Hughes of Vennacher. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. George Hughes, well-known residents of that district. A sister, Mrs. Herb Holmes, lives at Vennacher, a second sister, Mrs. Herb Chatlson lives at Peterbogh. Mr. Wilbell is a native of Calgary, Alberta.

The lodge is now open and will remain open until after the hunting season this coming fall. The dining room will be open to the public at regular hours and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbell are prepared to cater for weddings and conventions.

The new owners are planning to make their home in the Mazinaw district the year round.

School Pupils Taking Trips To Village

Upper Canada Village in the St. Lawrence Valley east of Morrisburg is bracing itself for the annual young generation invasion.

Public School children from all parts of Ontario are arriving daily at the reconstructed pioneer village where they fill in a chapter of their history books and see at first hand how their ancestors lived a century or more ago.

This year Grade 8 pupils from four Belleville schools, numbering about 450 in all, are making the trip to see some of Upper Canada's history.

Yesterday the Grade 8 pupils from Queen Alexandra School and King Edward School made the train to the Village. Today pupils from Harry J. Clarke School made the trip and on June 14th the Grade 8 pupils of Sir MacKenzie Bowell School, in the east all Belleville students made the trip to the Village on the same day, but the year round scheduling problems made it necessary for them to go on different days.

The pupils board special coaches for the trip to Morrisburg and back.

District Residents Get Chance to View Breeding Bulls, Barns

The next two Sundays — June 5th and 12th — will be "Open house" for Eastern Breeders Inc. at its barns just west of Belleville on the road to Wallbridge.

During the two "open house" days, local Association members and other interested farmers will be able to inspect premises and see the 40 bulls kept at the Belleville stock farm.

The artificial breeding of cattle for milk production was the Quinte district since the Quinte District Breeders Association was first established back in 1945.

Membership in the Association grew steadily and in 1962 the Quinte Association was merged with the Eastern Breeders Association and re-named Eastern Breeders, Inc. with headquarters at Kemptville.

Today Eastern Breeders Inc. has more than 12,000 farmer members and artificially breeds approximately 40 per cent of all cattle in Central and Eastern Ontario.

Seventy five per cent of its 12,000 members raise grade cattle and use artificial breeding to take advantage of top grade bulls.

Up to 24 bulls, both Holstein and beef type, are kept at Belleville with another 30 being kept at Kemptville.

"Open House" days at the Belleville barns have proven popular in the past with a total of 600 attending last year.

Included on the program for the next two Sundays will be contests drawn and door prizes.

2 Freight Trains Collide At Station at Cornwall

There were no injuries resulting from a railway accident at Cornwall at 11.25 last night when a 70-car east bound freight train crashed into the rear of a standing freight at Cornwall Station. Details of the accident were the three diesel units and four cars of the east bound freight and the cars of the standing train which had its caboose demolished.

The 2.2 mile east bound track cleared by 4.30 this morning. H. J. Fast, Belleville, manager of Eastern Canada Railway News, said that the east bound track would be cleared late this afternoon. He said that the switch at its 'apr'ipright but have to be put back on the rails. A Montreal-to-Toronto passenger train had to be re-routed through Ottawa and Napanee because of the accident.

Mr. Fast said an accurate estimate of the damage will be made when insurance adjusters have completed their reports. The derailed cars were carrying general merchandise, including tobacco and canned goods, to Montreal and other eastern points.

A.F.E. Jarrett Dies in Hospital At Burks Falls

A former manager of the Bank of Montreal in this city and while a resident here took part in many community projects, A. F. E. "Jerry" Jarrett, died in the hospital in Burks Falls on Thursday.

Mr. Jarrett came to Belleville in 1956 from North Bay and was appointed manager of the bank in 1961, when he retired after 45 years of banking service. For about a year after his retirement he made his home at Sundridge and on retirement moved there. While a resident of this city Mr. Jarrett took an active part in the life of the community and was especially prominent in the planning of the Quinte Curling Club of this city. He became vice president and treasurer of the club and he was instrumental in arranging the finances which enabled the members to build one of the finest curling clubs in this section of the Province.

He was a director and treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce, a district director and treasurer of the Sales and Advertising Club, a director of the Agricultural Society. In official functions he was a member of the Rotary Club, the Belleville Yacht Club and the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

His banking career started in Hamilton his home town in 1916 and he originally served with the Molson Bank but transferred to the Bank of Montreal in the merger of 1925. He was appointed manager of a Toronto branch in 1945 and in 1946 went to the head office in Montreal. For four years before coming to Belleville he served as manager at North Bay.

Mr. Jarrett enjoyed a wide circle of friends in every walk of life while a resident here and his death will be sincerely lamented.

Mr. Jarrett is survived by his wife and two daughters.

The funeral will be held from St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sundeiday on Saturday at 11:00 a.m. with interment in Sundridge cemetery.

TELL GOSPEL STORY

A modern day version of the Gospel story will be presented in the Pathway Players of Toronto in the Salvation Army citadel on Saturday night. Modernistic scenery and 20th century costumes lend a dramatic touch to the ageless story of the beginnings of Christianity.

The play is part of a week end missionary service in the Salvation Army citadel. Colin Leslie Russell, second in command of the army in Canada and Bermuda, will speak and officiate at an altar missionary service.

IN MEMORIAM

CAIN — In loving memory of my dear sister who passed away June 3rd, 1965.
You are not forgotten sister,
Nor will you be,
As long as life and memory last,
I will remember thee.
Sadly missed by sister Florence.

McHENRY, Olive — In loving memory of a dear daughter, who passed away June 4th, 1965.
Her heart is still, her work is done,
And peacefully she rests;
What is left us to love you,
No one will ever know,
Time can not heal our lonely,
And everything goes wrong,
We miss you more each day,
Sweet memories are all we have.
Lovingly remembered by her husband Bob.

Industry

the driver's seat with his estimates, only to be told his department isn't doing enough about automobile safety—and, moreover, his department shouldn't even have jurisdiction in the field.

Howard Greffiey (PC—Brome - Missisquoi) urged the government to start cracking on its proposed safety regulations. Only the federal government could bring safe manufacturers under legal control.

Little remedial auto safety was being done in Canada. A national research centre on the topic should be established. He drew solid backing from former Trade Minister Hees (PC—Northumberland), Arnold Peters (NDP—Temiskaming) and Richard S. Southam (PC—Rhone Essonite).

DUTIES CONFLICT

Mr. Drury agreed that another department, possibly transport, should handle auto safety. His department had to co-operate with the auto industry and at the same time was being asked to impose regulations on it.

The Commons then moved to the department's designated-area program, whereby communities are given incentives for settling in certain areas of high unemployment.

MPs, particularly those in the NDP, peppered the minister with questions about why some areas qualify and others don't. He was then told the formula used to qualify an area for the "d e s i g n a t i o n" distinction is wrong and unfair. Other MPs wanted to know where such areas are located.

Mr. Peters thought there was "nothing to it" in the charges leveled at his plans. After Mr. Peters and Mr. Scott had taken an hour to air their questions, Mr. Drury reacted.

"I must either assume I am in the presence of a master filibuster or else the honorable member (Mr. Scott) is rather more stupid than hitherto I thought him to be."

He decided the first impression was likely correct.

CAR'S A 'MICROBE'

On the auto safety question, Mr. Graffiey described the family car as a "microbe" in the microbe in an epidemic of fatal accidents.

By forcing the industry to put scientifically-proved safety features on autos, the government would cut fatal accidents by 30 per cent.

Mr. Peters said he would be prepared to consider $100,000 to the department's estimates of $50,582,400 "to start off an auto safety program."

The minister said information is being gathered on auto safety and he recommended a nine-volume review of the field by the National Research Council.

The next step was to search for solutions to a problem that appeared, statistically at least, to be worse in Canada than in the U.S.

Mr. Drury said a federal auto safety code now being drafted will be submitted to a national conference of federal, provincial and private bodies in June.

DISCUSS AUTOMATION

Speakers also dealt with automation—Mr. Hees devoted himself to this—and the industry department's controversial designated area program during the debate.

Mr. Graffiey said New York state is ahead of any government in the Western world in auto safety and he suggested Canada should co-operate with the state in a program.

Mr. Peters agreed. Canada should give the National Research Council $1,000,000 to begin a program complementary to New York's, under which a prototype safety car is being built.

The NDP member recalled his own experience with a heated Meteor when he worked in a union organizer in Northern Ontario.

He said that after driving 300 or 400 miles on paved roads, mostly, the rear shock absorbers were torn out of the car.

He noticed that the seats were too short. Mr. Peters said he was told later by a Ford representative that they were built so stand straight rather than at an angle, as they were on the Meteor.

He refused to lease the car any more. But he found out that a man was fired for it later.

DOESN'T USE STRAPS

Mr. Peters said he now has a Volvo with harness shoulder straps. He never wore them—getting into a car with safety features was a problem—but his son reported they are effective.

"My son had the unfortunate experience of rolling the car one night and he thinks the straps work well."

Mr. Hees said the government must set an example for industry in the way it treats employees affected by automation. It should study "what is being done by large U.S. companies" and then "give leadership to Canadian companies."

John M. Reid (L—Kenora-Rainy River) urged Mr. Drury to look into the possibility of starting training programs for Indians in Northwestern Ontario. He also suggested the designated area program be extended to this part of the country.

After Mr. Drury described the designated areas program as strictly a federal one, based on federal statistics and designations, Eric Winkler (PC—Grey-Bruce) said the municipal authority hadn't been consulted. Mr. Winkler has complained that his area was left out.

SAYS PROVINCES INVOLVED

Mr. Peters asserted that the provinces are involved. If they weren't, why did Quebec have 62 designated areas and Ontario five?

He said such areas as Elliot Lake, Ont., don't benefit from being designated. Nobody was unemployed there because there was no place to work. Everybody had left.

Mr. Peters said that to date the plan seemed to encourage "building factories on top of factories in Toronto." This was not in the "best interests of the nation." Members of the Ontario legislature seemed to operate on the basis that if they "can't look out the window and see it, it doesn't exist."

Rod Webb (PC — Hastings-Frontenac) wasted Bancroft, Ont., "given-Go-Ahead" as a designated area.

Cannot Maintain Growth Level of Past 3 Years Says Council Director

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian economy cannot maintain the growth level of the past three years, Dr. A. J. Smith, director of the Economic Council of Canada said Thursday.

He told the Consumers Association of Canada that the present rate of growth—about 6% per cent—is largely due to "the drawing in of economic slack" from the previous five years.

The economy is capable, however, of maintaining an annual increase of about five per cent, he said.

Dr. A. W. Wood of the University of Manitoba told the association knowledgeable and vocal consumers should be members of farm marketing boards. He said consumers have for far too long been unrepresented in the public management of economic affairs.

Dr. Wood suggested the system of establishing farm prices quotas as a method of raising prices for producers in one that might bear fewer inflationary, harmful to consumers.

Delegates heard conflicting statements on who gets how much of the consumer drug dollar, and how, during a panel on drug prices. They also got the three-day annual meeting of the association under way.

Drug manufacturer Leslie Dan of Toronto said if brand names were abolished, prices would be lower.

But Peter Howarth, another Toronto manufacturer, said he would rather learn the country than live under a system in which "doctors can't choose which medicines to buy."

John Turnbull, executive director of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, said manufacturers receive 62 per cent of the drug dollar, while the pharmacist makes only four cents profit on the prescription drug dollar before taxes.

Expropriation Methods May Be Changed

TORONTO (CP)—A bill was introduced in the legislature Thursday requiring hospitals, universities and conservation authorities to seek the permission of a judge before expropriating property.

Attorney - General Arthur Wishart said the proposed law is a "trial of necessity" for the three expropriating authorities. He said other authorities will not be forced to undergo the same procedure.

In other business:

—Provincial Treasurer James Allan announced a study into the system of government grants to encourage the breeding of race horses in Ontario.

—Agriculture Minister W. A. Stewart announced farmers who lost 50 per cent of their crop last year now may buy pesticides and herbicides with interest - free government loans.

—Mines Minister Leslie Frost said horse doctors will be no longer required.

But Peter Howarth, another Toronto manufacturer, said he would rather learn the country than live under a system in which "doctors can't choose which medicines to buy."

John Turnbull, executive director of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, said manufacturers receive 62 per cent of the drug dollar, while the pharmacist makes only four cents profit on the prescription drug dollar before taxes.

CMA Determined to Get More Information on Federal Plans for Medicare

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Medical Association, on the eve of an annual convention at which medical care insurance is sure to be a prime topic, has taken a new short week week to get more information on federal plans in this field.

Officers of the CMA will meet Prime Minister Pearson briefly Wednesday and their talks will be followed by a full day of intended discussion of federal medical care insurance proposals with Health Minister MacEachen.

In a telegram to Prime Minister Pearson, the CMA requested the meeting be held before the association's annual meeting June 13-17 in Edmonton in the light of indications that Ottawa's legislation soon will be placed before Parliament.

The CMA executive instructed its representatives to remind the federal government that the association already is "satisfied" — which produced withdrawal of doctors' services—re-lated from agreement on the action which precluded private practice outside the provincial plan.

"Nothing would be more disturbing to the doctors of Canada than to hear of legislation after it is presented to the House of Commons," the CMA telegram said.

Mr. Pearson already has indicated in the Commons he hopes debate on the federal legislation will begin before the Commons take an extended recess.

Informants said this probably will mean introduction this month or early next month of the bill, empowering the federal government to pay half the costs of medical care programs which meet certain conditions.

While the CMA has met three times this year with Mr. MacEachen, the discussions touched on medical care insurance only at one meeting.

The CMA has said it objects to two of the four conditions which will be attached to federal payments to the provinces.

Speeding

space men will make on round-trip journeys to the moon.

A year and a day after Edward H. White II became the first American to walk in space, Cernan was to climb out of the space, duly Saturday and for 2½ hours hurdle through the skies as a human satellite.

A barrel-shaped target satellite—fired into orbit Wednesday before a communications failure forced the second crash of the Gemini launch—flashed across the cape as the Titan roared to life.

It was the second time Stafford had seeded three holes before going into orbit. His Gemini 6 flight last year was postponed twice before finally getting away.

The 16-foot-long target satellite, a tiny dot to the vastness of space, was catapulted its 300-revolution of the earth as Stafford and Cernan began their hot pursuit.

They planned to close in on the quarry after a four-hour chase covering 75,000 miles.

With Cernan calculating the orbital mechanics and piloting the Stafford firing the thrusters, the astronauts made a major shift in mission after launching as Gemini 9 whipped high above Australia.

Plans were lifted the low point of their orbital course from 90 to 144 miles.

The target spacecraft started the chase, the target was 640 miles ahead. After the maneuver, the distance between the two vehicles was reduced to about 460 miles.

The Manned Space station also passed word that Gemini 9 was good for at least 15 orbits. This is the number of revolutions it plans to be made during the flight after all aspects of the mission have been tested.

Not until they were within eyesight of the satellite would astronauts know whether a shroud protecting it from the heat and pressures of blastoff had been jettisoned and separated from its Atlas booster.

MAY CHANGE PLANS

If it had not, they would have to cancel plans for a linkup of the two orbiting vehicles, for the shroud covers the docking collar on the satellite. That way would, however, be able to practise a series of rendezvous maneuvers.

Stafford made his first move in the chase just seconds after the Gemini booster rocket had fired his jet thrusters to adjust the high point of the space craft's orbital path to about 172 miles.

As the rocket rose, capsule communicator Neil Armstrong commanded the Gemini 9 flight, told the astronauts they were "go for staging."

"Roger, understand we're go for staging."

When the second stage separated, Stafford saw a fireball in the sky.

"It's fantastic," he said.

When the 136-foot gantry was pulled away from the spacecraft this morning, and light broke into the capsule, Cernan murmured: "Oh, boy!"

Stafford added, "It's a great day."

THIRD TIME LUCKY

And it was. Proving the third time is the charm, the Titan vaulted off its pad at 9:39 a.m. EDT, riding a blazing tail of fuel spume more than 100 miles out into space.

By the time the spade ship settled into its orbit, the target satellite had sped 428 miles ahead of them—and the chase was on.

It was to terminate high over the western Pacific about 2:20 p.m.

This would be two hours less than the time the Gemini 8 astronauts took in March when they accomplished the first space union with an Agena satellite.

During the chase, command pilot Stafford was to manoeuvre Gemini 9 in much the same manner as Apollo astronauts will guide space ships leaving the moon for return journeys to earth.

All three days of the Gemini 9 flight plan were packed with important, action - filled tests.

Three Commit Suicide After Brother Hanged

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—The wife, brother, and sister of Emmanuel Bamba, one of the four ex - ministers executed Wednesday, have committed suicide, it was disclosed today.

Jean - Jacques Kande, high commissioner for information, confirmed the deaths but gave no details.

Other information ministry officials said that according to reports the three hanged themselves Thursday night.

New Eldorado Cheese Factory Opened May 16th

Following an expenditure of approximately $118,000 in new plant addition and equipment, the enlarged Eldorado Cheese and Butter Co-Operative factory is again back in full scale operation.

The plant re-opening was originally scheduled for April 15th but due to inclement days didn't actually open for the season until May 16th.

The enlarged 1-Eldorado Cheese factory has a capacity of 96,000 pounds of milk per day or almost double this former 50,000 pounds.

The closing of two other district factories, Madoc Cheese Company and the Oak Leaf Factory whose patrons commenced shipping to Elzbrando, last year boosted production to the limit of its capacity and the decision was made to undertake a build-ing program.

The new addition to the south of the old plant, was erected by Mr. Wilfred Spencer. The addition provides for an enclosed cedar curing room, receiving room where milk is weighed, tested and clarified before entering the vats.

Financing of the project has been greatly assisted by a grant of $90,000 from ARDA, Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act) which was announced several weeks ago.

Included in the new factory equipment is a new bulk tank truck, which will pick up milk from all increasing number of patrons, who are adopting bulk cooling tanks for the handling of their milk.

Youth Fined, Prohibited From Driving

A 16-year-old Belleville area boy was fined $75, prohibited from driving a motor vehicle for two years and given a severe reprimand by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city court today on a charge of dangerous driving.

Michael Joseph Lloyd, R. R. 2 Belleville, pleaded guilty to the charge.

Police said that Lloyd drove out of the driveway of Quinte Secondary School April 18 at 12.20 p.m. at a high rate of speed. He turned west along College, narrowly missing a car parked on the north side of the road and striking an east-bound truck owned by Maitland Caterers and being driven by Kenneth Bruce Keller, 38, Ivanhoe.

Mr. Keller suffered a broken left leg and multiple lacerations on both legs, arms and chest and is still in Belleville General Hospital.

After hitting the truck, Lloyd's car continued another 175 feet across a lawn and into a tree at the rear of 44 College St. W. There was $2,400 damage to the two vehicles.

Acting crown attorney, Ralph Graham, agreed with defence counsel Don Templeman that a jail sentence would not serve the purpose for society, but he called for a substantial fine and prohibition "as a warning to the public to show that this type of driving just will not be tolerated."

Magistrate Wills said, "There is enough of this wild driving around that I'm getting sick of it. Some measure has to be enforced for it. I'm not saying you should be, but there are a growing number of cases of this nature and soon an example must be made for persons who are violating the public rights such as you have.

"You might have killed somebody here. I trust you've taken to heart what's been said by both Mr. Graham and myself on this occasion."

"I assure you that if you try to sneak drive anybody else's car within the next two years and are caught and brought before this court, you will go to jail, probably for a substantial period of time."

The plan was to be altered in flight, depending on whether or not the s a t e l l i t e remained locked in its shroud.

Cernan's space walk was to be the highlight of the 3-day say. The navy lieutenant-commander—a rookie in space—was to manoeuvre himself with a rocket-powered back pack, playing a Buck Rogers sort of game with the spacecraft.

Mediator Calls Air Employees To Meeting

TORONTO (CP)—An official mediator from the federal labor department has called officials of Air Canada and the Canadian Air Lines Employees Association to a meeting today in an effort to avert a strike by the 1,500-member association.

Bernard Wilson, assistant deputy minister of labor, appointed T. Bruce McRae, the department's chief officer in Toronto, to meet with management and the independent union after negotiations broke off Thursday.

Robert Dye, president of the association, announced earlier that the association will begin a two-strike vote next Tuesday. He predicted a strike would ground Air Canada and cost the company $1,000,000 a day.

But an Air Canada spokesman said the company would keep flying despite the strike threat.

HANDLE VARIOUS JOBS

The association represents reservation and ground agents, terminal control and ground hostesses, ticket office workers and switchboard operators.

The membership rejected a conciliation board's report that suggested the equivalent of a 15-per-cent salary increase over 18 months. The current maximum rate after 5½ years for those in the passenger-agent category is $478 a month.

The association is asking for a minimum wage increase in each year of a two-year agreement; a reduction in the work day from eight to 7½ hours without cut in pay; and a $25-a-month premium for long-service employees.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, Air Canada statement said the company is willing to resume negotiations with association representatives at any time.

Job Retraining

The recent award of diplomas to 169 "Program 3" trainees in Belleville represented encouraging progress in this vocational training plan involving retraining of the unemployed and of workers wishing to upgrade their technical skills.

The program is country-wide and is of particular value in these days of job obsolescence resulting from automation, and of labor shortages. Students receive financial assistance during the period of their course.

Knowledge and skills are more vital today than ever before, as the numbers graduating from universities these days indicate. And if in its early stages education seems like a drag, the younger folk should bear in mind that as learning process becomes progressively more interesting as they get older.

It is common at university to have among those graduating older members of families who went back to school to acquire fresh knowledge and skill.

Whether at university or by means of schemes like Program 5, such training is vital in view of Canada's continuing labor shortage and the complexity of modern educational needs. Only this week 50 skilled workers arrived in Toronto from England to take up jobs with the Douglas Aircraft Company at Malton. They were hired to counter a shortage of Canadian workers in this field.

Children and TV

Children are sensitive beings and they need a lot of love and attention from parents during the growing up period. The little Vancouver girl held for two hours by a knife-wielding former mental patient is one who will now need reassuring constantly before she forgets her terrifying experience. It is no wonder the child has been having nightmares since.

One wonders in this context how often children pick up wrong impressions from television? Probably more often than we know. Judging at least from the amount of television viewing children put in, their minds are probably full of undesirable ideas and impressions gleaned from this source.

A New York couple we have been reading about returned recently from a trip to Europe to find their 10-year-old daughter had been suffering from a "nervous breakdown." It turned out she was upset at the thought of her parents being in "war country" — the impression she had gained of France and Germany from watching the program Combat, on TV.

Most of us recall familiar youthful fears about our parents' and families' safety, and before television came into widespread use there were sundry "thrillers," westerns and horror movies which scared the youngsters out of their imaginations. Even the nasal twanginess of the villain in one of Walt Disney's children's epics could strike fear in a youngster's heart until reassured that it was only in fun.

An acquaintance has mentioned a film he saw as a youngster some 25 years ago. Today he still recalls scenes from the film — for example, members of the Ku Klux Klan sitting around a table — and the shudders the movie gave him at the time.

The film? It was Edgar Wallace's The Crimson Circle. All of us have similar early memories, so that we cannot blame television too much for some of the ideas the modern generation picks up.

Happy Landings

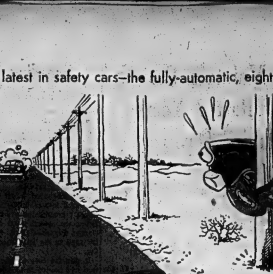
Edgar Allan Poe called it "The Imp of the Perverse," in one of those macabre short stories he penned before his death in 1849 at the age of 40.



Today we know it as a condition associated with fear of heights — that highly disturbing magnetism that seems to say "Go jump in the lake" (from a height of course!) or throw yourself in front of that truck!

The feeling usually strikes only when the subject is standing on a height, say a cliff above the ocean, or close to a rail track — or on a balcony of a modern high-rise apartment building — and the mind is otherwise empty and there is all that space down there. Wow. . .

A fellow tells us he had that awesome feeling standing on such a balcony recently. Far below was a row of greenhouses, and thinking to himself what a mess of glass there would be he prudently stepped back into the security of the apartment!

Which makes us think that with so many high-rise apartments springing up all over the place, people must be more immune to this feeling or else they grow out of it.

Not that we have ever heard of anyone falling from a high-rise apartment building. Yet the feeling Edgar Allan Poe described is one that strikes most people in varying degrees. But knowing your enemy is half the battle, and so too is the knowledge that the feeling is not unusual. Happy landings. . .

Nylon Carpet Shocks Harmless but Annoying

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: We've been searching for the right source: Carpet expert? Electrician? Doctor?

What causes electric shocks when walking on nylon carpeting? What can be done to prevent them? All members of our family, except one, experience these shocks. We can't turn on a light, touch the wall, which has metal laths under the plaster, open a window (metal frames) or dial the phone without a shock.

This has become such a problem that we are ready to give up the carpeting. Can you help? — Mrs. C. T.

It's not strictly a medical question, but what happens is this: friction between two dry insulated surfaces (in this case your shoes and the carpet) builds up charges of static electricity. At the first opportunity these charges will escape to the ground — and the metal in your house or apartment is connected to the ground. That's when you get the shock and a small spark.

Medically it is harmless, but it is startling and annoying.

What is needed is some way for these static electricity charges to leak off gradually instead of building up. You've seen gasoline trucks with a piece of chain or metal ribbon dragging on the ground. This is to let such charges leak off the ground before they building up to make a spark that might ignite the truck's cargo of gas.

For years now, operating rooms in hospitals have been equipped with "conductive" floors, that is, floors which will carry electric charges off to the ground and prevent sparks. (Some anesthetics are highly inflammable.) Nurses and doctors are instructed to never wear nylon slips or underwear. Nylon is an insulator, hence, with friction, can build up static charges. Cotton, however, which absorbs a bit of moisture, becomes a conductor instead of an insulator — so charges leak away as fast as they build up. Result: no sparks or shocks.

A carpet manufacturer told me that for several years rug and carpet cleaning establishments have used a spray which prevents nylon and other synthetic fibres from building up static. It takes the shock out of carpets.

In checking around, I discovered that this spray is still completely unknown in some carpeting stores, and that some cleaners don't seem to know about it, either. One single upholstery spray I have found effective is a weak solution of a household detergent in water. Applied as a fine spray to the carpet, this is effective for several days.

You may have to do some hunting, depending on where you live, but the process does exist. I have no places handling it; you'll have to search for it yourself.

Oh, you may wonder why one member of the family does not get the shocks. The answer is probably in the footwear. You may have noticed that when you walk barefoot, you don't get the shocks. There's enough moisture on the feet to limit static gain of. Footwear which for any reason, conducts electricity would do the same. In warm, moist weather there is less trouble.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can excess calcium make a child sweat? — M. E. W.

No.

Note to Mrs. G. H. B.: Pernicious anemia results from lack of an "intrinsic factor" in the digestive tract. Giving Vitamin B12 periodically makes up for this. However, we do not know what causes this lack of the "intrinsic factor."

U.S. Grip on Our Industry

Toronto Star

Other countries which were once in a similar position to Canada — Mexico, for example — have not suffered any drop in national welfare and living standards because they took over key industries formerly owned by foreign interests.

In fact, the policy of "Mexico for the Mexicans" has been the foundation of that country's remarkable advance in the last 30 years.

On the other hand, a continuance of the present foreign ownership could be a far greater threat to Canadian living standards than any degree of economic nationalism. Unless present trends are reversed we are heading toward the status of an economic colony of the United States, wholly at the mercy of decisions taken in Washington and New York.

Already a word from south of the border can stop production in many of our most important industrial plants or dry up in an instant the flow of investment funds on which we have counted. What security is there in this situation for you or the livelihood of the average Canadian?

Here in Canada we have the three necessary ingredients for a stable and lasting prosperity — abundant natural resources, modern industries and advanced technology. But these things have little value unless we can keep control of them in our own hands.

Spain at Crossroads

Chicago Daily News

Franco's regime is now in its 27th year. Younger Spaniards have no bitter personal recollection of the civil war that brought him to power, and no real loyalty to his cause. It is the younger people — students, young priests (as against the elders), and young labor leaders — who are now agitating to lead Spain into the 20th Century. Two alternatives* are open to Franco. He can try to call a halt to the liberalization program; or he can extend it and make it more meaningful. When even priests rebel in Spain, the latter course would seem to be wiser and less perilous.

State Aids Crime Victims

San Francisco Chronicle

For the first time since its enactment, California's pioneering "Good Samaritan law" has come into play, and the state has paid $200 to Clifford G. Miller Jr., of San Diego for medical expenses not covered by insurance.

The amount is not great and the facts of the matter not especially dramatic, but the payment is worth noting as the product of social legislation that is at once novel, progressive and creative.

Miller's medical bill resulted from a fractured hand received when he intercepted a prowler in an neighbor's yard and held him for police.

Reimbursement by the state is an acknowledgement that a private citizen who acts to prevent crime is performing a public service and should be indemnified by the state for damages or injuries suffered thereby.

The California law, first of its kind in the nation, was originated by State Controller Alan Cranston. Introduced in the legislature by Senator George Miller Jr., and signed by the Governor last July.

It was inspired by numerous reports of crimes in which onlookers declined to intercede.

Cranston conceded that his law is not likely to chenge human nature, but believes it may modify the modern, bi-city aversion to "getting involved" and contribute toward a revival of concern and willingness to act for the safety of others.

Getting Away From It All

Stratford Beacon-Herald

Here's some very old but still very valid advice which it seems appropriate to repeat at this season when most people's fancies turn to thoughts of vacations:

"Every now and then go away, have a little relaxation, for when you come back to your work, your judgment will be sure, since to remain constantly at work will cause you to lose your power of judgment. . . . Go some place away because then the work appears smaller and more of it can be taken in at a glance . . ."

Summertime

Montreal Gazette

The market places are filled with boxes of ananasia, which is a sure sign that summer has arrived.

The gardeners are out with trowels and spades in fashion the rows of color which will show in July and August. The time of renewal has arrived.

But the most secure feeling of all to those who enjoy this month and the ones that follow, is the touch of the soil, the feeling of the good earth in one's hand once again. It is worth waiting for.

Strictly Personal

Eye Is Window of the Brain

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What could be more "natural" than the ability to see? To suggest that we learn to see sounds foolish, for it seems perfectly evident that we could see the moment we opened our eyes.

Yet what seems "perfectly evident" is not true. The very act of seeing is a learned process that takes many months, or even longer, to develop.

For it is not the eyes which "see," but the brain. The eyes are merely sensory channels that take in visual stimuli and transmit them to the brain — and the brain has to learn how to discriminate and interpret these stimuli.

In the research of von Senden and Diesen, based on studies of children and adults who were blinded by cataracts at birth, it has been shown that when they later in life successfully underwent surgery for the removal of the cataracts, they were not able to "see" what went on around them.

They could detect movement, the intensity of light, and some color; but they could not judge distance, distinguish form, perceive depth, separate a figure from its ground, or appreciate the constancy of size.

And these were all intelligent children or adults, who had merely failed to read despite their blindness. Yet, as Dr. Arthur Jensen of the Institute of Human Learning at Berkeley, observed: "One puch girl still had difficulty distinguishing between two psychologists whom she met daily for over a month. To distinguish a triangle from a square, even the most intelligent patients had painstakingly to count the corners."

Moreover, they all lacked what is called "thing constancy." That is, they could not recognize an object as the same object under different conditions of viewing — as automobile seen from above would not be perceived as the same automobile seen from the front or the side. There was nothing wrong with their eyes, or with their brains — but the two had not yet learned the process of working smoothly together.

If so elementary a function as seeing is dependent upon the slow and steady accumulation of learning, and is not "natural" at all, then we can judge how important the early environment is for learning of other sorts — of words, of concepts, or relationships.

If being deprived of sight in the early years makes it so hard to see afterwards, how much more so being deprived of verbal and intellectual stimulation makes it difficult, if not impossible, to think and reason and formulate. Perhaps this way we can grasp the magnitude of "cultural deprivation."

Census in Early Times

Brantford Expositor

Though census-taking has its roots far back in history, the modern form of this national stocktaking has a Canadian setting. In 1666, under the direction of the famous royal intendant Talon, a census was taken of the inhabitants of New France. Later other countings followed this lead.

The questions to be asked of Canadians this June bear a remarkable resemblance to those first put 300 years ago. Basically, census enumerators will be asking for such information as names, sex, marital status and the age of people. A quinquennial count is much more limited in scope than the detailed 10-year questionnaires that have been compiled in Canada regularly since 1851. Concurrently with the population count, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics will be completing an agriculture and merchandising survey, but these will not concern the average householder.

Today it also undertaking an interim census this summer, using a different method. Only one in every sample will be sought as a basis for forecasting trends in housing, transport, immigration and the like. Without such information, modern government would be seriously handicapped in keeping up to date with the demands for services. Legally, however, in Canada, the object of a decennial census is to enable a Redistribution Act to be passed by Parliament for fair electoral representation. So far Parliament has failed to act on the 1961 census finding with the result that five federal elections have now been held on the outdated figures of 1951. Socially and economically, however, the latest returns have proved invaluable.

It will not escape notice that the word "census" is derived from the Latin verb "censere" meaning "to tax". This was the reason for the great Roman census initiated by Augustus and also for the compilation of the Domesday Book by William the Conqueror. Modern day governments are just as concerned about what their real estate will produce.

Is Ottawa In a Fog?

Winnipeg Tribune

Transport Minister Pickersgill says: "There is a shocking lack of detailed and expert knowledge of transportation in Ottawa."

After all the probes, enquiries, commissions and investigations in recent years, this shocking lack comes as a surprise.

By this time one might have supposed that there was detailed knowledge about every nut and bolt on every box car in the country. And the movement of 300 million bushels of grain through the Lakehead during the past year, seemed to indicate a pretty good working knowledge of how to run a railroad.

Moreover, Ottawa has made some fancy adjustments in freight rates and paid out some pretty substantial subsidies in recent years.

Could everyone have been acting blindly?

Ont. Supplies 40 Per Cent Of Gross National Product

MONTREAL (CP)—Ontario's gross national product last year — a record $21,000,000,000—accounted for more than 40 per cent of the entire country's GNP, Stanley R. Mitchell, Ontario minister of economics and development, said Thursday.

The province anticipates its GNP for 1970 will reach $30,000,000,000, he said in a speech to the Kiwanis Club.

"Though our population of less than 7,000,000 is about one-third of Canada's population, we produce over 40 per cent of the national income and contribute more than 50 per cent of the direct taxes to Canada," he said.

A recent study by his department revealed that Ontario's factories produce 90 per cent of all motor vehicles made in Canada, 94 per cent of all automotive parts and accessories, 82 per cent of all office furniture, 80 per cent of all production of electrical industries, 87 per cent of all agricultural implements and 88 per cent of all iron and steel production.

HAS AN ADVANTAGE

The prosperity is the result of human resourcefulness, he said, and Ontario does have a geographical advantage in addition to a good supply of raw materials and fertile agricultural land.

"They have brought back over $100,000,000 in export orders," Mr. Randall said of a "trade crusade" currently underway in Ontario to keep the province prosperous.

Mr. Randall said Ontario's automotive vehicles and parts industry alone "is the province's greatest industrial advance in 1962, accounting for more than $150,000,000 of increased investment and creating 13,000 new jobs.

"It's estimated that 41 new automobile or automobile parts plants will be located in Ontario within the next few years," he said. In addition, 115 plants are under consideration by manufacturers in these industries.

Major Inquiry Into Divorce Laws Ordered

OTTAWA (CP)—A joint committee of the Commons and Senate set the stage Thursday for a major inquiry into Canada's divorce laws, particularly proposals to widen grounds for divorce.

The first meeting of the committee decided to call lawyers, sociologists and other experts in divorce laws and their effects.

Religious, women's, labor and other national organizations will be invited to submit briefs.

Reid Scott (NDP — Toronto-Danforth) said the inquiry would demolish one and for all "the widely - held myth that large sections of the population oppose wider grounds for divorce."

The committee of 24 MPs and 12 senators will deal specifically with private member's bills by nine MPs and by Senator Arthur Roebuck (Liberal—Ont.) to add new grounds for divorce to the existing cases of adultery and impotency.

Most of the bills list desertion, criminal behavior, incurable insanity, drug addiction and cohabitation as new grounds.

The date of the first public hearing will be set next week.

"Later Tessier came in, Tessier and Gaudette talked in French to each other. They mentioned how they hadn't been questioned by police like they usually are with the Montreal and Quebec police.

"Tessier explained how he refused to admit he understood the police warning read to him in French. He said he was shown the warning in French and then laughed and said, 'I told them I couldn't even read.'

Opl. Courville said that Bisson came in about one-half hour later.

"He talked about being accused of nearly hitting a boy in Frankford. He said he denied ever seeing the boy and were quite alarmed at this charge by the police. They said there was no boy at the bank.

Toronto Stock Exchange Indexes

May — 1966

LAST-MINUTE JUMP — Golds scored a last-minute jump on The Toronto Stock Exchange during May. Gold stocks climbed 7.07 on index Tuesday to end the month at 178.84. The rise was greatest for a day's trading since September, 1964. Other stocks declined on index, industrials to 163.37 from 168.91, base metals to 90.69 from 95.38 and Western Oils to 104.67 from 111.49.

Montreal Stock Exchange Indexes

Watering — 1966

BANKS UP, OTHERS DOWN — Bank stocks increased slightly on index at the Montreal Stock Exchange during May but other indexes showed declines. The banks index rose to 123.60 from 122.06, while the industrials index dropped to 161.42 from 168.52. Utilities were off at 142.71 compared with 145.22 and papers ended the month at 114.90, down from 121.02.

paragraph of this witness. Tessier pointed to a picture of a man and said, 'Who's this fellow here?'

"Langis read the writing underneath the picture and said, 'This was the man who kidnapped the getaway car at the bank.'

"Tessier swore and said, 'Was he ever scared.' And with that they all laughed."

Cpl. Courville said they had been questioned French all this time. There were some cards in the bullpen and the other prisoners began to play and gamble.

Gaudette said to Bisson, 'Everything worked as planned except for the last two minutes.'

"Bisson said, 'Why did you have to stop and pick us up. Didn't you see the truck behind us?'

"Langis said, 'No. The windows were all steamed up.'

"Bisson said, 'How come?'

"Langis said, 'It was parked all night and I just got in it.'

"Bisson was annoyed at Langis for stopping on the highway when he did."

Opl. Courville said they began reading the newspaper again and talking about the case.

FOOTPRINTS NOT MATCHED

"Gaudette insisted it was impossible for the footprints in the area of the Oldemobile to correspond with the boots they were wearing.

"I asked Gaudette just where the Olds was parked. He laughed and said, 'How would I know?'

He said, 'You were there.'

"Then he pulled a Quebecco pouch out and put it by the bank picture in the newspaper. He then explained how one car pulled in front of them and one behind them.

"I said to Gaudette that $15,000 would be a large package. He said the amount wouldn't necessarily mean a large package."

The crown witness said the four accused were rough looking. "Their clothes were shabby. They had at least one day's growth of beard."

Referring to the story in The Intelligencer, Cpl. Courville said: "Langis read for the second time the part where a shotgun was found in the car. Gaudette son or Tessier laughed and said, 'You'd be scared too if you had a gun pointed at you.'

The corporal explained that in the morning April 2, about 9 a.m. or 9:30 a.m. Tessier, Bisson and Langis were allowed to go out into the exercise yard.

"About one-half hour later they came in and Gaudette, the other prisoner and I were out. I stayed right with him. Gaudette talked freely.

"I asked if this was the first time he'd been involved in bank jobs. He said no, he and Tessier and Fernand Jacques had been involved in many but Jacques was let out of the group because he acquaited on them. He said he thought Jacques may have squealed on them this time."

"I asked him why they didn't stay in Quebec to rob banks and he said they have time locks on the bank vaults there and it's difficult to judge the time correctly.

"I made a joke about that and told him if he had to wait for the lock for 10 minutes he could always have coffee with the boys.

"He thought this was very funny and he laughed about it for about 10 minutes.

"Gaudette said this was the first time that Langis was with the group."

As soon as Cpl. Courville completed his testimony, defence counsel Robert Temple asked for an adjournment. "The decision was taken by surprise," he said. "At the preliminary hearing I argued quite strongly that the defence be allowed to know all the evidence the Crown has against the accused.

"I had counted that all the evidence be called at the preliminary. This evidence was not.

"It is absolutely vital to the defence, any defence, to find out everything about the Crown's case against the accused."

Mr. Temple said he wanted an adjournment to allow him time to go over the various statements made in the enquiry by the witness and to decide what action should be taken.

Judge Anderson granted the defence a remand until yesterday. He said, "The defence is entitled to a reasonable time in preparing a full defence. I have decided to adjourn this case until Tuesday to enable Mr. Temple time to consult with his clients."

CROSS-EXAMINED

Cpl. Courville was in the stand three hours yesterday being cross-examined by Mr. Temple.

Mr. Temple said, "What do you call the type of job you thought you were going in for?"

"No special name. It's just police work."

"Little, unusual wouldn't you say?"

"Yes, it is unusual."

Mr. Temple pointed out spots in Cpl. Courville's testimony where he had made grammatical errors in his speech. "You've been speaking English a great deal more in the past nine years than you learned French, isn't that so?"

"Yes, it is."

"If you don't know the meaning of the English word, grammatical, then there are a good

First Woman's Library Opens Centennial Year

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP)—If biographies of Canadian women make dull reading, it's often because family and friends have made them that way.

Elizabeth Long of Winnipeg says Canadians lack literary sophistication and have "deplored the personal aspect of notable people, usually out of misplaced feelings of delicacy. They have also concentrated on stroyed them because there has been no place where such things could be sent to be useful and safe.

As chairman of the National Council of Women make-over-dien library committee, Miss Long has helped to solve that part of the problem.

For several years she was guardian of a library without a home. Books by and about women were donated by members of the council and other interested people. The original plan for housing them fell through and they became a bulky problem in storage in Miss Long's basement.

TO OPEN LIBRARY

Last year a home was found, largely because of her stubborn efforts. In 1967 a women's library will open at the University of Waterloo with the council's books and a centennial project fund from them to start it on its way.

Miss Long says the collection is just about up to the 2,000 books she would like to see it total by next year.

It will be the first women's library in Canada. It will be a research library on the history of women with the emphasis on Canadian women, though books from other countries will be an important part of it.

Miss Long says she hopes a by-product of this storehouse of material will be more and better books about Canadian women.

"People think that somewhere there are lots of good Canadian books. Well there aren't, and it is partly our fault. People have not saved books and papers. There has been no place to keep them."

"With enough material I hope there can be new biographies for new generations and the changing emphasis in living."

Ladies' Auxiliary for Retarded Assoc. Sponsors Fashion Show

The initial fund-raising venture of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children was an unqualified success, as took the form of a Fashion Show, held at Club Cedars on Wednesday evening.

The enthusiastic audience of several hundred were seated at tables grouped around the dance floor of the spacious and beautifully decorated club, and enjoyed to the fullest the presentation of the latest in fashions, hair-do's and accessories. Then again, the House of Originally Yours, with fashions by Eold, demonstrated the versatility of design and beauty of fabric, that is rapidly gaining it an enviable reputation in the Quinte District fashion circles.

The guests were received by Mrs. J. R Blackburn, wife of the chairman of the Belleville Retarded Children's Education Authority, and Mrs. Thomas Stowell, president of the Belleville and District Association for retarded children.

Mrs. Stowell welcomed the guests and spoke briefly on the objectives and accomplishments of the organization. Future projects will include the operation of a workshop for the adult retarded at 97 Dundas East, and eventually it is hoped, provision for a community residence for retarded people as well. The John Street School, which has been in operation since 1956, receives operating costs from the Provincial and Municipal Governments, but funds required for capital expense must still be raised by the association through such projects as the Flowers of Hope.

Mrs Stovell introduced the commentator for the evening, Mr. Dave Charles, of Radio Station CJBQ.

As every picture needs a frame to show off its full beauty, the smart bair-do's that were the work of the French Salon, the skillfully applied makeup of the Fashion Two-Twenty, under the direction of Mrs. H. French, and the harmonizing shoes and bags from Vanessa, did much to complement the fashions. Proceeding on the cake was provided too, by the tasteful and interesting costume jewelry, that was the work of Ronald Kool Jewellers. The committee is most grateful for the assistance of these organizations in helping to make the presentation so successful.

VERSATILE ENSEMBLE

Leading off the parade of fashions was the versatile nine - way sports ensemble, in dashing red and white, that was a real eye-catcher in its many uses and adaptations. This offering was followed by a selection of cool and dress ensembles, that were done especially well by Originally Yours. One attractive model was an Arnel denton coat that boasted fluid princess lines. The low neckline was collared with contrasting Bahama linen imported from France, and the coat was closed with fabric loops and satin covered buttons. The chic little summer gown that went with it, in red and white Shirley Bemberg, was cut with an empire bodice, was sleeveless with a low round neckline and a softly fitted "A" line skirt. Another particularly interesting ensemble, that would go throughout an entire season was a combination of a black cotton diagonal cord and printed cotton tweed line. This featured a high crown hat with part lined brim, a matching hip length straight cut jean jacket with three quarter sleeves and two button styling. The massive pattern of the simple shell dress was an interesting contrast, as were the smart white pumps and matching bag.

Not forgotten in this group was the more lady of fashion, right for her was the pretty blue and white bolero tooth three piecer that was cool in popular box style. It had a simple and unctuttered design, and lent itself to very interesting jewellery combinations to dress it up. The jacket was three quarter straight, set in sleeves and with a collarless round neckline and open front.

The blouse was a semi fitted shell with boat neckline.

No description of this portion of the program would be complete without mentioning the appearance of the littlest model of the evening, were Miss Mary Neal, all of two years, but already a trouper, as this was her second show. She appeared with her mother in pretty summer coat of boys cotton in candy pink with cut in three quarter sleeves, round neckline and pretty bow trim down the centre fronts. Mother's coat was waist-length in the same fabric, and also lined in lace. The simple dress-es, worn were of white embroidered eyelet cotton, just right for warm summer days.

During the intermission performances by members of the auxiliary served coffee and cookies to the many guests, and drew for the numerous door prizes were held. These had been donated by generous merchants and friends of the auxiliary and highlighted by the presentation of a hairpiece of real human hair from Wolf's Salon, as presented by Mr. Buddy French to the lucky winner, Mrs. Gilbert Sills of R.R. 3, Belleville.

EVENING WEAR

The emphasis on the later hours of the day was the theme for the second half of the program and the collection of cocktail gowns and formals was gleaned from Originally Yours. Typical of the restrained good taste shown here was a lovely white formal, fully lined, cut from peau-de-soie in a princess sheath design with a sleeveless, low cut neckline to emphasize those summer tans. The only feature of this gown was the use of a contrasting spirited hand made silk organza posies in green and blue. The young spokesman was interlined for shape-retention and a clever net swirl skirt was added and trimmed with imported straw banding, complimented by matching gold pumps and evening bag.

SHOW CLIMAX

The bridal party that is always the climax of any fashion show lived up as always to the reputation Originally Yours has acquired for the beautiful wedding parties it has dressed. The bridesmaids and matron of honor were gowned in gowns of contrasting colors of blue and pink, and fashioned in the empire mood with bouffant skirts. They were crowned with a band of solid color at the waist line. The extra feature of these was that the trim could be removed, the entire gown shortened and converted into cocktail or summer frocks. The bride was lovely in white peau-de-silk, that was breathtaking in its simplicity, and crowned with a lace veil and cathedral train.

The show was co-ordinated by Mrs. Shirley Woodcox and Mrs. Enid Neale, all of whom, also who were Nancy Finkle, Rene Klassen, Shirley Woodcox, Betty Cairns, Jennifer O'Connor ,Leslie Gardner, Carol Ann Brant, Mary Lush, Sharon Fisher, and Enid and Peggy Neale.

At the conclusion of the show, a presentation was made to Enid Neale by the Auxiliary and to Dave Charles, on behalf of the models, by Rene Klassen.

Church Groups

MARMORA HOLY NAME SOCIETY BANQUET

MARMORA — Douglas Lynch, president of the Holy Name Society of Sacred Heart Parish, Marmora, welcomed guests to the Holy Name annual banquet in the Parish Hall Monday evening. They were F. J. O'Neil of Madoc, Rev. J. F. McGarvey of Stirling, Rev. F. J. Speare of Madoc, spiritual fathers and sons of the parish.

Mr. Lynch outlined the true principles of the Holy Name as showing reverence and respect to the holy name of Jesus, and revived the old word that the Society in parish functions is Marmora.

A suggestion was made that proceeds from one of the weekly bingos conducted by the Holy Name Society be donated to the Village Centennial Committee. The final decision will be made at the next meeting.

Mr. E. D. O'Connor thanked the ladies of the C.W.L. for catering to the dinner.

Father Speare commended the Holy Name for their work in the past and offered his assistance in any new programs planned.

Colored slides of the Ecumenical Council were shown and commented on by Father Speare.

QUEBEC CORN BREAD

1½ cups sifted pastry flour,
½ cup corn meal,
½ teaspoon salt,
½ cup milk,
½ cup maple syrup,
2 teaspoons single-acting baking powder,
¼ cup sugar,
1 egg,
¼ cup melted butter.

Sift flour, then sift again with sugar, salt, cornmeal and baking powder. Beat egg, add milk and maple syrup and melted butter. Add to dry ingredients. Mix until smooth. Pour into greased 8 x 8" pan. Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes.

Long Jackets Favored in Fall Show

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP)—A collection of fall ensembles — designed by Robert Agni of Montreal — was shown to the press Thursday by designer Robert Agni of Attractive Garment.

All but a few suits had long jackets and most skirts showed A-lining.

Shades of forest green and burgundy again appeared to be favored.

Dresses belonging to matching coats came with long lines and generally the silhouette was close to fitted.

LENGTHENED TWEEDS

The textured fabrics selected included English tweeds, Shetland wool, imported hair from Scotland, Italian wool weaves, worsted checks, silky Italian llamas and wool brocades.

In the latter fabric came a dressy suit in turquoise tones and a dress and coat in brown.

A silky brocade costume that came in purple tones was followed by a double - breasted black and cognac theatre. The procedure were deeply textured. The heavy camel hair coat and suits also were double-breasted and one had a jacket that was almost three - quarter length.

SUPPLIES CONTRAST

A burgundy bolster knit dress diagonally worsted wool camel with a loosely sashed coat that contrasted, with the more frequent fitted look.

A dark avacado green - noticeably present in the fall color lineup—was used for a tailored knit ensemble.

Italian linen was used for a white three - quarter - length walking suit.

MP's Secretary Needs More Tact and Stamina Than the Average Girl

By MARILYN McCOUVE

OTTAWA (CP)—If you're always wanted to meet a lot of famous people, or if you'd like to be close to the latest political developments, you could do worse than getting a secretarial job on Parliament Hill.

An MP's secretary needs more tact and stamina than the average girl, though. She has to soothe constituents and fend off the press, and occasionally keep on typing until the House of Commons rises at 10 p.m.

But the girls who go through the Gothic arch under the Peace Tower every morning must thrive on that kind of thing. At least, few leave for the more peacefully peaceful business world.

Apparently such impulses smolder under a fresh pile of memos in the in basket.

"We have very few vacancies," says Patrick Nye, chief of the Commons stenographic branch. "Some retire, some are married in between jobs and move away, a few go to the civil service."

Mr. Nye is a small, slight French-Canadian with the soothing, faintly-doctor manner that comes from years of dealing between secretaries and their bosses. He moved to Ottawa from Edmundston, N.B., with his wife and five children and went to work in the branch as a messenger. He's been chief since 1953.

SEEKS MATCHING TYPES

When he took over there were 125 secretaries, working as a sort of giant pool in several basement rooms. Each would handle the work of two to four members. Now the pool has been dwindled to 15 who mostly work for the MPs who are parliamentary secretaries to cabinet ministers.

The other typing girls work right in the offices of their MP. Mr. Cyr says the volume of correspondence has tripled since he came and that's why each MP now needs exclusive service.

At the beginning of each session, he has to match the new MPs with the secretaries whose members didn't run or were defeated. Although he suggests possible secretaries to each MP, final selection and retention depend entirely on the MP.

"It's more psychological than anything. You have to match the personalities.

"It takes to match a freshman MP with a secretary who has had several years' experience on the Hill. She can tell him where to direct constituents' inquiries, put his letters into parliamentary style and generally show him the ropes.

"They're here to serve the members—it's not just a job."

That's why their regulation 9-to-6 day with 1½ hours for lunch and stretch long into unpaid evening overtime. If they work Saturdays or Sunday they get an equivalent amount of time off, but that's all.

WORK THROUGH RECESS

About 75 per cent of the secretarial staff are married, "It's not a place for a career girl. Until three years ago most of them would be out of work during the recesses, when we only kept a skeleton staff."

Since 1963, the girls have stayed on during the recesses, working mostly up on work left over from the hectic session, but technically they could still be dismissed at any time. That's because they're "seasonal employees"—not part of the permanent Civil Service.

They build up sick leave and annual leave at the regular rate of 1¼ days a month, but are encouraged to take leave only during recess.

Most of the staff are from Ottawa - small towns in the Ottawa Valley. Many are bilingual, which is not a requirement. Most are 35 to 40 years old.

"We have very few teenagers—I'm against it," says Mr. Cyr. "I don't think an MP should have a secretary without three or four years experience as a general rule."

Working on the Hill is "different from an ordinary business office. A secretary needs to be very much self-initiative. I think they can learn more there than anywhere else."

Late-Born Girl Says Her Life Has Troubles

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I think it's mighty noble of you to want to help all the women over 40 when they feel that they are pregnant (and ready to kill themselves) but have you ever stopped to think about how life looks to children who are born to women past 40? I know—because I am one.

My father died before I graduated from high school — at the age, of course, I never knew a grandparent. My nieces and nephews are just about my age. (My nephew went to the same school and it was pretty embarrassing to have that little runt call me auntie.)

Please quit telling those old crows how GREAT the "late dividend" can be. — ONE MYSELF.

DEAR ONE: Those women don't ask whether or not they should have late babies. They are already pregnant — and they're scared stiff.

As for you — wouldn't you rather have been born late than never?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was adopted by a wonderful family when I was a baby and dad are the only parents I have ever known. They did not tell me for years because I was a delicate child and they didn't want to add to my problem. A neighbor accidentally blurted it out one day and it had a terrible effect on me. Why, oh why, can't people keep their mouths shut?

Now I am going through the same thing again. We have three children and two are adopted. We have never told our adopted children about their history because we didn't want them to feel different from our blood child. Everything was going fine until last week when we received relatives in another state. My sister-in-law's children spilled the beans.

Now our adopted children are bitter and resentful. They say we lied to them for years and they are cold and withdrawn.

Please, Ann Landers, tell people that it's up to the parents to tell or not to tell their children if they are adopted. Outsiders should shut up about it. — SALT LAKE MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: If you had grown up with the knowledge that you were adopted — as you should have — the neighbor's remark would have had no effect on you whatever. If your children had been told at an early age that they were adopted because they were very special and you wanted them very much, they would not feel betrayed now.

People talk — and they especially like to talk about other people. To expect the whole world to keep your secret . . . was a foolish miscalculation. I have said this repeatedly in my column and I'll say it again. This information, if offered by an outsider, can produce wounds that never heal.

DEAR ANN: I'm 28 and engaged to marry a fine girl. Problem: I was divorced two years ago. No children. No alimony. No dirt. I want to tell my fiance's parents before we marry. She says she feels they will take it better after we are married. What do you say? — R.R.

* * *

DEAR R.R.: Tell them at once. And don't leave out any details for others to provide — as they inevitably will if you give them the opportunity.

Susanna's Family Fare

Mrs. Mary Connor, daughter of Mrs. Percy Smith, Charles Street Belleville and the late Mr. Smith graduated from Western University London, Ontario, last Wednesday when she received her Bachelor of Nursing degree. Mrs. Connor, a graduate of Quinte Secondary School; also a graduate nurse from Belleville General Hospital has accepted a position on the teaching staff for nurses at St. Joseph's Hospital, London.

Miss Victoria Wheeler, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wheeler, 141 Macdonald Avenue, is a graduate mechanical engineer. When she received her B. E. Sc. diploma at the University of Western Ontario's convocation May 28 she became the first woman to graduate in engineering from Western. A former BOVS student, Miss Wheeler has accepted a position as a systems engineer with International Business Machines at Toronto.

Lynne Meagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Meagher, 47 Creatview Ave. received the degree of Bachelor of Science from St. Michael's College, University of Toronto at the convocation on June 2. Miss Meagher is an honor graduate of Nicholson College. She will attend Ontario College of Education during the summer and join the staff of La Salle High School, Sudbury in September.

FILMY SUMMER EARRINGS

Dear Susanna: I'm the type who looks frightfully overdressed at the drop of a ruffle. I must strictly curtail the number of colors I introduce to my ensemble and about two pieces of jewelry at the same time are usually my limit.

Recently I acquired a lovely filmy gown that I am looking forward to wearing at a special occasion in June. Earrings and a gold bracelet are the only accessories I plan to wear.

This puts the onus strictly on the earrings, as I want them to blend with my gown (which is pale mauve) and at the same time be soft and summery — metal ones seem too hard and out-of-season.

The perfect solution came in the form of a beautiful matching shade of rick-rack braid with narrow gold gilding about 1 in wide. With it, I was able to make — in a matter of minutes, for a matter of a few cents — delicate pair of earrings that are a perfect complement for my gown.

Briefly, for each earring, all that is necessary is to double a 24-inch length of the braid, down to the desired earring lengthwise. Then, with a double thread, sew a small bead in the centre of the braid, pleating or shirring firmly as you go. Fasten the two ends securely and neatly to complete the circle.

Using china cement, press the rick-rack ends firmly to each place on a pair of round-back earring clips measuring ¾ inch in diameter. Allow to dry, and look forward to impressing your best beau with your handiwork! — Jean Beardmore

CLOTHESPIN HANGER BAG

Dear Su: Of all my extra home laundry aids, there is one in particular I would really hate to do without.

That's my clothespin hanger bag. It is always conveniently right there on the line — I simply push it along ahead of me as I go. Even though I now have a dryer, there are still dozens of personal and drip dry items I prefer to hang up . . . some outside in the summer, others inside all year round.

The bag itself is made from ½ yard of ticking, denim or good sturdy awning material. Using French seams, fold up the bottom to make a pouch for the pins and turn the top over to cover a 12" ordinary wooden coat hanger. Cut the hanger hook to size if necessary, and leave the hook protruding for hanging on the line. — Mrs. Geo. W. . . .

Club Activities

WHITE CANE CLUB

The regular monthly meeting of the Senior Chinese was held in the Recreation Centre on Wednesday.

The president, Mrs. M. Clapp, was in the chair and Mrs. L. Adams presided at the piano.

Two visitors from Picton were given a special welcome, one new member joined the club, and the birthday box was sung for one member.

A potluck supper will be held on June 15th at 6:30 p.m. A bon trip to Niagara Falls on August 26th is being planned.

The lucky draw was won by Mrs. Bedell.

Mr. Norman Carter, assistant director of recreation took over for election of officers for the ensuing year. They are past president, Mrs. M. Clapp; president, Mr. H. Taylor; vice-president, Mr. S. Smith; secretary, Mrs. L. Lamarsh; treasurer, Mrs. A. Scales.

Bingo was played, with prizes going to the winners and refreshments were served by Mrs. L. Adams and Mrs. L. Longhurst.

Scretaries Plan Year-end Meet

The year end meeting of the Quinte Medical Secretaries Association will be held on Wednesday evening at Education Hall.

Plans are made for a gala occasion, beginning with a potluck supper with Kingston Medical Secretaries as guests.

A film will be shown and the guest speaker will be Dr. J. R. Birchard.

There will be gifts and door prizes.

Local Heart Foundation Re-organized

A meeting was held Tuesday evening in the board room of Victoria and Grey Trust Company for the purpose of reorganizing the Belleville chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation.

A number of interested citizens were in attendance.

Mrs. Eleanor E. Hunter of Kingston, field co-ordinator for Eastern Ontario spoke briefly, explaining the purpose and aims of the Heart Foundation.

The following officers were elected: honorary chairman, Mayor J. Ellis; past president, Mr. R. N. Laughlin; president, Mr. A. S. Lloyd; 1st vice-president, Mr. J. E. Plans are already underway for a financial campaign in February.

U.C.W. Hold Tea and Coffee Party

A tall lilac tree in full bloom graced the entrance of Holloway Street United Church where a salad, tea and coffee party was held under the sponsorship of the United Church Women, on Wednesday evening.

In the tea room two large globes covered with white linen cloths were centred with yellow tapers and shasta daisies. Tall blue tapers flanked the arrangements. The local point of interest which proved to be a conversation piece was the decor on stage, arranged as a patio with white wrought iron furniture, evergreens and apple blossoms. Spring flowers placed at strategic positions were in profusion in the tea room and the parlor of the church.

The minister of the church, Rev. J. W. Lamb officially opened the successful event.

General convenors were Mrs. E. Parks and Mrs. J. Bush. Those receiving guests at the door were Mrs. F. Wilson, Mrs. J. D. Robertson, Mrs. E. Hobbs, Mrs. C. Holmes, Mrs. R. Kilbank, Mrs. N. Brown, Mrs. G. Hart, Mrs. D. Shantz, Mrs. A. McMillan, Mrs. W. Rowe and Mrs. J. Gunn. Treasurers were Mrs. C. Wannamaker and Mrs. H. Murphy assisted by others of the group.

In the tea room, which was convened by Mrs. R. Taylor in the afternoon and Mrs. T. Postle in the evening, tea was poured by: Mrs. E. C. Moyes, Mrs. T. F. Townsend, Mrs. G. Coulter, Mrs. A. Hilsdon, Mrs. M. Hicks, Mrs. A. C. Campbell, Mrs. O. Denyes and Mrs. L. Reid. Coffee was poured by Mrs. H. Dixon, Mrs. G. Dobbs, Mrs. E. Knight and Mrs. H. Gallagher. The tea room hostesses were Mrs. D. Richardson, Mrs. W. Oliphant, Mrs. H. Hott, Mrs. F. Scott, Mrs. D. Koller and Mrs. G. Carlisle.

The large bake table which did a flourishing business was located in the S.S. auditorium and convened by Mrs. A. Mitchell in the afternoon and Mrs. V. Bailey in the evening.

Pearl Has Long History As Women's Ornament

By MARGARET NESS

NEW YORK (CP) — The pearl, birthstone of the month of June, has had a long history as an ornament for women. Only in comparatively modern times has man come to the aid of the oyster to stimulate its production.

But a pearl is not always a pearl. In addition to the natural gem, or its cultured cousin, there is the imitation pearl. It is considerably cheaper than the genuine article.

Pearls are mentioned as early as 2300 B.C. before the birth of Christ. In Oriental legend, the pearl is a symbol of good health, energy and beauty. In India priests carried a pearl in the palm of one hand, as a charm for their safety. Later the pearl was associated with the goddess Diana, a hunter but also the protector of young girls.

Cleopatra is said to have dissolved a pearl earring in vinegar and drunk the mixture while dining with Mark Antony. This is linked with the tradition that pearls are equated with love. But the story is apocryphal — pearls do not dissolve that readily.

The oyster produces both natural and cultured pearls. The cultured also get an assist from man. Pearls originate as an irritant, such as a grain of sand, that accidentally gets into the oyster along with the seaweed the oyster eats. The oyster cannot eject the irritant so it covers it with a smooth coating which hardens and grows. This is the pearl.

BEGAN OYSTER FARMS

Because the color, shape and size of pearls varies greatly, a perfectly - matched necklace of natural pearls is extremely expensive.

It wasn't until the 18th century that science discovered how the pearl is made. It was much later before the process of aiding the oyster in forming pearls became a big business.

The best oyster beds are on the coasts of the southern Islands of Japan where a warm stream from the south seas sweeps in. So oyster "farms" have been started there.

Mother oysters spawn in June. In a week or so the larvae turn into shells. These young oysters are then collected and kept in nets or cages, under the sea, for three years. At that time they are injected with an irritant. But the pearls will not be ready for another seven or eight years. During this time the "mother" oysters must be carefully watched, to see they get enough food and are safe from parasites that could destroy a whole oyster bed.

USE FISH SCALES

Both natural and cultured pearls come in many shades, from yellow to black. It's a misconception that pink are the best. You should choose the color that suits your skin tone and shade of hair.

The oyster plays no part in the making of imitation pearls. Here a bead is covered with a pearl - like essence, quite often fish scales.

The best known of these simulated pearls are produced on the Spanish island of Majorca in the Mediterranean. Tourists can roam around the large government store where all sorts of jewelry and figurines resembling the real gems are sold at reasonable prices. But there are no tours of the factory. The smell from the fish scales used is overpowering.

Simulated pearls have two advantages over the real thing, natural or cultured. Their lower price makes them available to those with small incomes. And their size can be regulated so that it is easy for the manufacturer to produce thousands in matching sizes and colors.

TEXTURE DIFFERS

One quick way of telling real from simulated pearls is the feel. Real pearls haven't absolutely smooth surface as the imitation. There's almost a granulated feeling.

This spring there is great interest in pearls combined with gem stones. Trifari uses imitation pearls and pseudo gold for pins, elongated and modernly shaped, to wear at the neckline of late-day dresses. There are also flower pins that look like pearls, embellished with rhinestones. And for summer strapless gowns, the suggestion is a necklace of two rows of pearls with a side clasp in various imitation gems.

Judith McCann likes pearls in shading two-tone colors in pink, light blue and green, as well as six - strand necklaces, each strand composed of gold beads and the other half of imitation pearls.

PRETEND PEARLS — Interest in pearls is increasing this spring, especially in combination with gem stones and gold. Real pearls are extremely expensive but man-made pearls are within the reach of most. These pretend pearls, by Judith McCann, are arranged in four strands and caught with a matching leaf pin. The necklace comes with matching leaf shaped earrings. (CP Photo)

Assaults Daughters So Mom Takes Them

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS: The letter written by Not To Blame might be from my husband, as the circumstances are very similar. My husband came home in 1945 from overseas and from that day until he has never been satisfied; in other words, he was always going with women.

I put up with it till at last my feelings were dead; then all I ever wanted was peace and quiet to bring up my 13 children. Twice he had tried to kill me. He is well known by the police here as they were so often called to the house.

I agree the wife's place is in the home, but my youngest was at school and I felt the strong urge to work in the local hospital as a nurse's aide. He was quite willing for me to do so.

Now the job pays very little money but it was the peace and contentment that I sought. He had no time for me; rarely took me out but always had time to spend with other women.

Two months ago, after weeks of listening to his sex talk, he put me and my three girls out on the street. I made up my mind that never again would I go through the hell with him that I had had for years. Can you imagine living with a man who sexually assaulted his own girls? Yes, that is true, and that is why my girls will never go back home.

I now have my own apartment. My girls and I are happy, though I am lonely.

Doris, I believe the man is sick, but only he can help himself. I do not hate, just pity him. Though he still tells people I run around I know they don't listen for they know me better. — HOPING AND PRAYING.

DEAR HOPING AND PRAYING: The situations are similar, that's for sure, and your answers might well be the same reasons why Not-All-To-Blame's wife took a job which "barely paid enough to buy handkerchiefs."

Obviously you finally had to separate to find peace, in your case.

DEAR DORIS: I am writing about Sick at Heart whose son and daughter-in-law were alienating themselves from her.

It seems to me that this man is deliberately forgetting all the sacrifices that he did in with motherhood, and that his mother loves him dearly.

That this couple is going so far as to not allow grandmother to visit her grandchildren is a cruel and heartless thing. I am only a young schoolgirl, and my grandparents are very dear to me. As for the spoiling bit, tell me of one child who was spoiled by love.

And I'm not afraid to sign this letter. — SANDY.

DEAR SANDY: That's what I always say too.

Retiring Teachers Feted

Mrs. Florence Graham and Mrs. Laura Ragsdale, retiring teachers were honored at the annual retirement banquet of the Belleville Teachers' Institute, held at the Masonic Temple on Monday evening.

Mrs. Grace Anderson, on behalf of all present, expressed thanks to the two women for their years of diligent service, their contributions to the teaching profession and their care in child guidance.

Following Mrs. Anderson's tribute, Mrs. Dorothy Blakely and Miss Alice Heasman presented gifts to the retiring teachers in their respective fields. Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Ragsdale spoke of their pride in their profession and of the many rewarding personal experiences they had gained in teaching.

Mr. H. Smith, chairman of Belleville Public School Board also paid tribute to the teachers on behalf of Mr. L. Kelly.

The previously retired teachers who were present for the evening.

Entertainment was provided by Mr. Robert Reid, who accompanied by Mrs. Reid, sang a medley of musical comedy songs.

Presentations for the evening were made by Mr. L. Moore, president of the Teachers' Institute and Miss M. Howe, vice-president.

Melrose United Church Women catered for the dinner.

fore, the directors admitted a failure in communications had backed management's decision.

There has been no indication what the committee will report or what effect the report will have on the situation.

Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) asked Mr. Quinet what his reaction would be if the committee recommended the co-hosts be reinstated. The president replied it would be the first time in 30 years that a parliamentary committee had made recommendations on a specific program and its personnel.

He was not trying to tell MPs what to do. But in the past parliamentary committees had always limited themselves to broad policy questions.

He rejected a proposal by David Lewis (NDP — York South) that he accept the producers' latest demand that the name of the co-hosts be submitted to binding arbitration.

It would be a "very dangerous precedent" to hand a programming decision to a party that has no responsibility within the CBC structure, he said.

The controversy over the program opened in April with producers arguing that normal communications channels were short-circuited by management when it acted on the co-hosts.

Mr. Keate recommended appointment of a vice-president to consult directly with producers and the public affairs department to improve the communications system.

Mr. Quinet told the committee Thursday that at the moment he does not know whether this is the best way to proceed.

Mr. Keate also reported that the "gut issue" in the dispute remains — the announcement April 22 that the president and the board reviewed the Watson-LaPierre case and confirmed the decision not to renew their contracts.

Mr. Quinet agreed with suggestions by Harold Stafford (Lib—Elgin) that a public campaign protesting the firing of the hosts was largely "stimulated" by the Seven Days producers and a committee of Toronto intellectuals.

Mr. Stafford said a Save Seven Days Committee bombarded MPs and the CBC with more than 3,000 telegrams, inserted full-page advertisements in many newspapers and organized speaking tours by principals in the controversy.

Mr. Quinet agreed with the Liberal MP that this type of conduct by employees would not be tolerated by business firms.

Federation of Canada," the ILA telegram said.

The ILA met briefly Thursday night with two men who represented the St Quebec stevedoring companies affected by the 36-day-old strike. neither side had any comment after the meeting. they said the talks will re-open today.

GETS INJUNCTION

The National Harbors Board obtained an interim injunction Thrsday prohibiting the longshoremen from threatening its employees, invading harbor property, blocking free access to the harbor or picketing on streets leading to the port area.

The injunction, which will be reviewed at a hearing June 6, also limits the number of pickets at entrances to the harbor.

Lawyers for the National Harbors Board cited reports of violence in the port area Tuesday in making their request for the injunction in Superior Court.

They said a Brazilian navy cadet was in hospital with a fractured skull as a result of the violence and another cadet was assaulted.

In Ottawa, Transport Minister Pickersgill told the commons Thursday that interference by a picket line at Quebec City forced the Russian liner Alexandr Pushkin to sail downstream Wednesday night without a pilot.

The ILA met briefly with a federal mediator, Judge Rene Lippe, Thursday night to consider another proposal dealing with the reduction of work gangs. A spokesman said this was the major stumbling block to the conclusion of successful contract negotiations.

PROPOSES COMMISSION

Judge Lippe's proposal calls for the establishment of a commission to investigate the make-up of work gangs and other related matters.

The recommendations of the commission would be implemented sometime after Jan. 1, 1967.

Under the plan, ILA members would be also assured of alternate employment or employment compensation during the 1967 shipping season.

Neither the longshoremen nor Judge Lippe had any comment on the proposals after the meeting.

"We will meet with the stevedoring companies tomorrow and consider all the facts together before making a statement," an ILA spokesman said Thursday night.

The stevedoring companies previously had not taken part in negotiations in the current strike. They are, in effect, the direct employers of the longshoremen, since they contract with shipping firms to provide men and facilities for loading and unloading vessels.

PAID FOR PRISON

KAMPALA (AP) — Five dismissed Uganda cabinet ministers are to be paid $1,500 each for a day spent illegally in prison. They were arrested the day before warrants were issued for them. The five, dismissed when Premier Milton Obote seized supreme power, now have to show cause why they should not be convicted.

Nature Study Outings For Grade 6 Commence

Grade 6 public school children in Belleville are to get some "on the spot" nature study this year and will take one-day excursions to the country to do their studying.

The program got underway yesterday as approximately 70 Grade Sixers from Bayview School made the trip to the Colonel Vanderwater Conservation Area at Thomasburg for a full day in the country.

The daily trips to the park will continue through until the latter part of June by when it is expected Grade 6 pupils from all city schools will have had their day in the country.

It's all part of the conservation school program started this year by the Belleville Public School Board. It is being carried out with the co-operation of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

PREPARE QUESTIONS

In preparation for their day at the Vanderwater Park, the pupils have been honing up on their nature study and when the big day arrives go armed with a score or more questions for which they will try to find answers.

The pupils get in some free identification, with pointers from a Department of Lands and Forests expert, get to know the meaning of soil profiles, hunt for insects and animal life and study weeds and other small plant.

At the park the pupils are divided into small groups by their teachers, go on nature trail hikes, hunt for pollywogs and frogs and otherwise enjoy themselves.

Then, just as a check to make sure that the children take in what they see, they are expected to make a report and will be judged on their results.

TOKYO CROWDS UP

The population of Tokyo is thought to have passed the 11,000,000 mark.

POLLYWOG HUNTERS seem in danger of ducking as they grab for marine life in park demonstration pond.

Cub Pack Enjoys Trip To Toronto

NAPANEE — Monday morning 40 excited boys between eight and ten boarded the train in Napanee and were greeted by parents and friends when they returned the same evening. Meanwhile, they had toured Toronto, visiting the Parliament Buildings, Casa Loma, the Riverdale Zoo and the Royal Ontario Museum and had a ride on the subway and free time in a shopping centre.

They were the Third Napanee Cubs, led by Mrs. Eleanor Tack and Mrs. Fred Dibb, and accompanied, also, by Mr. B. Keniry, a C.N. guide. To finance the outing, the Women's Auxiliary had made a donation, but the boys had earned most of it themselves delivering hand bills. The group committee had made up the small balance.

A few weeks ago they visited the Ontario Provincial Police headquarters in Belleville and the weather station at the Canadian Forces Base, Trenton.

De Valera Wins Irish Election

DUBLIN (Reuters) — Veteran statesman Eamon de Valera—one of the last surviving leaders of the 1916 Easter rising which wrenched Ireland from 300 years of British rule—today scraped to victory in the republic's presidential elections by a mere 10,500 votes.

De Valera, 83, who said it was his final election campaign, won his second seven-year term as head of state after his challenger, Tom O'Higgins, conceded defeat shortly after midnight Thursday night.

Scout Awards Presented At Church Parade Service

NAPANEE — The Bushman's Thong, the highest award in Scouting, was presented to David Hotchkiss last Sunday at the Napanee Arena during the third annual church parade service of Scouts, Cubs, Girl Guides and Brownies of the area. In addition, David was also presented with the Scout Gold Cord. The presentations were made by W. Harper of the provincial executive and L. Griffith, assistant district commissioner.

Derek Martin of Napanee also holds the Bushman's Thong, awarded some years ago. Fred and Richard Pixey and Geoffrey Smith were presented with their Queen Scout parchments by Sheriff Harold Webster.

Religion and life awards were presented to 23 Girl Guides by Miss Eva Baker, Quinte Area Commander of the Girl Guides of Canada. Miss Baker, who gave the address during the service was introduced by Mrs. D. C. McVicker, of Desoronto, division commissioner.

Others taking part in the program were, James Madden, District Commissioner Robert Casey, and William Finlay, president of the Napanee Valley Scout Association.

Led by the Salvation Army Band of the Kingston Citadel, and by a color party of Branch 147 of the Royal Canadian Legion, the more than 600 Scouts, Cubs, Guides and Brownies and their leaders had paraded from the Market Square.

The salute was taken in front of the arena by Mr. Griffith and Mr. Harpur.

SIGHT ROWERS

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Two English journalists, trying to row to England in a 15-foot boat, were sighted by the U.S. submarine Cutlass Thursday, 90 miles east-southeast of Cape Henry, Va. The submarine's skipper reported that David Johnstone, 34, and John Hoare, 25, told him they were doing fine.

Anthony Hunt Will Be New Vice-principal

NAPANEE — Anthony Hunt, now teaching in St. Patrick's School in Kingston, will succeed George Vance as vice-principal of the Napanee Public Schools. Mr. Vance, who has taught here for five years, has accepted a position on the staff of the Queen Elizabeth Collegiate and Vocational School in Kingston.

Mrs. Mac Martin of Esterprise and Petrina Lewis, a Napanee girl now teaching in South Fredericksburg, will also begin their duties in Napanee in the fall.

They will replace Mrs. Eleanor McLaughlin of Tamworth, who has taught here for seven years, and Russell Gourmley, who will teach in the Ernestown Township School Area after six years on a Napanee teacher.

Appoint New Police Constable

DESERONTO — Wayne Foley, 21, of Trenton, joined the Deseronto Police force Monday. He has had experience as a peyrost with the militia. Constable Foley is married and has one child. His reporting Constable Walker Turner who has joined the police force in Perth after only two months in Deseronto.

CURFEW RECEIVED

The curfew, received in Deseronto only two weeks ago, has brought good results, Police Chief L. W. Thomlinson reports. A bylaw authorizing a curfew was passed many years ago but had fallen out of use. Because of vandalism it was revived and the trouble has stopped. The bylaw demands that children of that age when in a gathering of any sort after nine o'clock must be accompanied by a parent or someone deputized by a parent.

3-year Terms For Aldermen Said Likely

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal councils in Ontario will be allowed to sit for three-year terms from Jan. 1, 1967, instead of the present two years, Wilfrid Spooner, municipal affairs minister, said Thursday.

He told a standing committee of the legislature he plans to bring in amendments to the Municipal Act within a few weeks to make the change.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

"Red" Storey, the personality Marco Polo of the House of Seagram, who doesn't believe in moderation in laughter, is a former football star, hockey player, and whistle-toating arbiter of the National Hockey League.

Rudy Pilous, first general manager of the San Francisco Seals of the 1967-68 National Hockey League, has a Stanley Cup and other national hockey championships to his credit. He is a former public relations official of the Ontario Jockey Club.

Both are well-known names in the realms of amateur and professional sport.

Both have something in common. Under the thick sports blides of them is the other half of dual personalities. They are brilliant before and/or after dinner speakers; raconteurs of rare ability.

Their repertoire of stories and anecdotes ranges from "Fee Biggs Only" to church choir conventions. Like Bobby Hull their personalities fairly leap out and over the napery to the back benches of the audience.

Pilous is a master dialectician. Close your eyes and you hear negro, Irish, Jewish — name it and you've got it. Storey doesn't use dialect. But you're laughing before he delivers the punch line.

At the Madoc Sports Celebrities Dinner Wednesday night Storey related the yarn of a gift received from the president and vice president of the New York Rangers, fan club after he had finished a tough game.

"The New York team lost — and the fans had given me a rough time" he said. "To my surprise these two guys of the club handed me a small package to show their appreciation, they said. In the package was a large cork with a note 'To fit the hole in your head' ".

Speaking of minor hockey, Red said the kids of today have it easy and made to order. "When I was a kid we chased a horse a quarter-mile to get a pock. And that's no bull."

At a Notre Dame—Tennessee football game, he said two drunks were bemoaning their fate. Their team was losing to the famous Irish and one hiccupped in disgust "The Catholics are beatin' us. Lesh go to California, there's noo many Catholics there. Naw, bic'd like buddy lesh go N'Yawk, there's only a few of them there."

"At this point," Red said "a lady in front turned in her seat and said 'Why don't you two go to hell — there's no Catholics there.'"

Pilous stories included that of a man at an auction sale bidding for a parrot with a guaranteed vocabulary of 37 words. He bid $25 and an unseen bidder took him to $100 before he got the parrot.

"So" he grunted, "you're the bird with 37 words. Let's hear you prove it. Prove it, be damned croaked the Polly, "whoinell do you think was bidding against you."

He told the story of the inmate of an asylum who was painting grass yellow with a huge brush. A passer-by stopped to talk.

"You're a kind man" said the inmate, "I'm going to do you a favor. Under that big tree is buried $100,000. Go get a shovel and dig it up. It's yours."

Later the man returned. "There's no treasure buried there" he said. "Did you dig for it?" asked the painter. "I did and found nothing" was the reply.

"Okay, buddy" said the inmate, "go get yourself a brush."

Even Bobby Pulford got into the story-telling act. Bobby related how a referee after being buzzed by a player told him to shut up or "I'll bite your head off."

"Just do that" retorted the player, "and you'll have more brains in your stomach than you have in your head."

WE GOOFED

My sincere apologies to that fine Madoc expatriate Jack Riley, vice president of the House of Seagram for referring to him as "VP" of that other distillery in the dinner story. Sorry, Jack, the next six are on me.

Radatz Unappreciative ★★★★★ ★★★★★ Loses First Game

Bosox Get 2 Indians For 'Monster'

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dick Ellsworth now is doing the latest act for the Cleveland Indians—and it still works like magic.

First he appears. Then he disappears.

Radatz did both in the seventh inning Thursday night four hours after the Indians acquired him from Boston. He faced eight batters, retired one, watched five cross the plate and left with the Indians well on their way to an 11-4 loss to Kansas City Athletics.

Earlier in the day, Radatz expressed pleasure with the trade that sent him from the struggling Red Sox to the American League leading Indians in exchange for pitcher Lee Stange and Don McMahon.

"It's like starting life all over again—being born again," said Radatz. "There's nothing wrong with my arm. My trouble is mechanical and if I pitch the way I think I can, the Indians will win the pennant."

BOSTON DIDN'T BENEFIT

His effort, which didn't help the Indians, didn't help the Red Sox either.

The Kansas City victory, coupled with Boston's 12-2 loss to Washington Senators, tumbled the Red Sox into the A's cellar while the Athletics climbed into ninth place.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles outlasted California Angels 9-8 in 10 innings, Detroit Tigers edged Minnesota Twins 7-6 and New York Yankees defeated Chicago White Sox 5-3.

The way Radatz thinks he can pitch is the way he pitched from 1962 to 1964 when he twice won the Fireman of the Year award as baseball's No. 1 relief pitcher. The way he pitched against the Athletics is the way he's pitched the last two years while breaking in his disappearing act.

Radatz, who had a 9-11 record with a 3.8 earned run average last season, took a 4.74 ERA into the Kansas City game. He went on stage with the Athletics leading 5-1, surrendered three hits and four walks and left with the score 10-1 and his earned run average at 7.11.

LED THE ATTACK

Bert Campaneris led the Athletics as they got together a 14-hit attack against the Indians for their largest run production of the season. Campaneris collected two singles, a double and a triple, stole two bases and scored four runs.

National Fitness Council

Will Study Amateur Hockey Problems

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister MacEachen said Thursday he hopes a study of hockey to be undertaken by the National Fitness Council "will remove any problems surrounding hockey . . . and strengthen its position as the country's national game."

A fitness council statement said the study is to be a wide-ranging one, covering all aspects of amateur hockey in Canada.

"The areas which the study committee will explore include, among other things, the relationships between pros and amateurs, conflicts between hockey and education, playing rules, player drafts, Canadian participation in international competition, and the role of Canada's national hockey team."

Committee chairman is Bill Hewgill, a former junior hockey player who now is director of the physical education department at the University of Western Ontario.

Mr. Hewgill told a reporter last month that results of the study will be made public. He said the committee would report to the fitness council and the council to the health minister who is responsible to Parliament for the amateur sport directorate.

He said the committee would recommend solutions for any problems it may find in its study.

Relationships between the National Hockey League and the CAHA have become strained lately and the amateur group voted a year ago to end its agreement with the pros. The break is scheduled for next year.

The CAHA wants the NHL to discontinue its present drafting of amateur players while they are still juniors and to put funds it spends on minor hockey into one pot where all amateurs can benefit, instead of sponsoring certain teams.

Gordon Juckes, secretary-registrar of the CAHA, has said his group welcomes the committee's interest and will throw open its operations to the committee.

The committee first will gather all available information from organizations involved in hockey. It may also interview officials and accept briefs from interested persons.

Rev. David Bauer, adviser to the national team, has high hopes the committee will strengthen future teams representing Canada abroad.

The CAHA, which sponsors the national team, feels strongly the pros haven't done as much as they could for the nationals.

In Melville, Sask., Juckes said "a detailed study is bound to work in the favor of hockey."

He said the CAHA would provide the committee with names of "people they should interview" in amateur hockey and hoped the committee will "also interview people in professional hockey."

He said the study could clear the air between the CAHA and the NHL but he said he is "hopeful" the two groups could meet before then, likely either in Montreal or Toronto during June.

Senior Baseball

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a poor night for home teams in the Inter-County Baseball Association Senior series Thursday. The home side lost in all three games that were played.

Rich Jack pitched a three-hitter as Kitchener Panthers spoiled Brantford Red Sox's home opener, 11-1. Galt Terriers made life miserable for Hamilton Red Wings with a 9-2 victory in Hamilton's first home game and Listowel Legionnaires ruined Stratford's home debut by winning 10-4.

Juniors Win, Bobcats Lose

Two Firsts At Alemite

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)

Ellis Juniors combed Bobcats' starting pitcher, Clair Leahy, for six runs in the first three innings on their way to a 8-1 victory in B. and D. Softball League action at Alemite Park last night.

It was Ellis' first win and the Bobcats' initial loss in three starts each.

The Juniors went with a makeshift lineup, got another big strikeout performance from Bob Ethier and failed to get a base hit after the third frame.

Temple replaced Leahy with Bob Lott after falling behind 6-0 with two out in the third. Lott pitched hitless ball over the remainder, striking out 11 batters in a strong effort. He allowed just two base runners, one on a walk and another on a missed third strike.

Leahy fanned one and walked four and was rapped for all six Junior hits.

Ethier had little trouble holding Temple's Tabbies at bay. He scattered five hits and fanned third strikes past 18 batters, a league high for the season. Ethier walked only one.

A leadoff walk and a too-late fielder's choice on St. Denis' sacrifice got the Cats in trouble quickly. One run scored as Barker grounded to third and a second crossed the plate when Meraw threw wildly to first. Ethier singled, the only hit of the inning, to make it 3-0.

Stewart and St. Denis poked base hits and Boomhower's double added one in the second.

A base-on-balls kept it going in the third. Coughlan singled, Stewart sacrificed, Moon's fly ball scored one and St. Denis singled home another. Lott took over at this point.

Bobcats scored in the fourth on a two-out outfield error after Brennan and Mowat got on with base knocks. Ethier proceeded to strike out seven batters in a row from the fifth through the seventh.

Jerry St. Denis had two Ellis Junior singles, Carl Boomhower a double, Bob Ethier, Bernie Coughlan and Larry Stewart a hit each.

Paul Meraw collected a pop double and a single in defeat. Hugh Brennan, Lem Mowat and Billy Mills split the others.

The Bobcat - Trudeau game, rained out Tuesday and re-scheduled for tonight, has been postponed allegedly due to other park commitments.

Pointers' Rally Nips Cheesemen

Fighting an uphill battle from the first inning, Point Anne pitched to defeat the seventh place Black Diamond Cheese 9-8 in a loosely played Commercial Softball tilt at the Point last night.

Walks and errors marred the game scene in which the Cheesemen took a 4-0 lead in the top of the first and led 8-6 going into the final game.

Eric Maher's two - run double tied it and he crossed the plate with the winning marker on Tom MacDonald's single.

M. Kimmett pitched four innings and Ron Maracle three for the Cementmen. They gave up six hits, fanned five and walked nine.

Don Holoway allowed only five hits in defeat but walked no less than 16 men. He struck out three.

Tom MacDonald and Eric Maher had two hits each for Point Anne while Perry Ellis got the other one.

R. Pointer had a pair for Black Diamond. D. Holoway, Jack Fracula, Doug Archer and T. Francis also hit safely.

S. Warner Noses Past City Hotel

Stewart Warner took over first place in the Commercial Softball League last night, edging City Hotel 7-6 for their third victory in four starts.

Point Anne has also won three but had been beaten twice.

City jumped into a big 5-0 lead after three and a half innings but Warners erupted for six in the fourth. The losers tied it in the top of the seventh and Turner drove in the winning run in the bottom of the frame.

Junior Day was touched for seven hits in burfing the win. He struck out three and passed a pair.

Gerry Genereaux and Larry Hull combined for a three-hitter in defeat as they fanned three. Walks hurt with Genereaux giving up seven of nine, five of them in the fourth. Wild pitches and errors were also costly.

Keith Bertrim hit a double, Rod Turner and Junior Day a single each to account for the winners' total.

Doug Hull rapped three singles and Bob Brooks a double in defeat. Frank Donovan, Doug Murray and Larry Pot-ter also had singles.

Giants Score Four Runs On Single

Refurbish Heavily Supported

Fifth Win In Row

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Our Atlanta Braves believe in Southern hospitality. But giving up four runs on a single . . .

That's what happened to the Braves Thursday night when San Francisco Giants handed Atlanta its sixth straight setback, 5-0.

Outfielder Felipe Alou was the goat on Cap Peterson's sixth inning single that broke open a 1-0 game. The bases were loaded on two infield hits and an intentional walk to Willie Mays when Peterson came to bat.

His laced a single to left and when the ball bounced past Alou and rolled to the fence, all for runners scored.

That gave B. Bolin a comfortable margin and the Giants' righthander made it stand up. He allowed only one single over the final seven innings and finished with a three-hitter for his fourth victory in seven decisions.

STILL LEAD LEAGUE

The victory was the fifth straight for the National League-leading Giants, who still hold a 2½-game margin over surging Los Angeles. The Dodgers won their ninth game in the last 10 by shutting out St. Louis Cardinals for the second straight night, 2-0.

Houston Astros tagged reliever Jack Baldschun for nine hits and scored eight runs in the 12th inning to beat Cincinnati Reds 11-4. Philadelphia Phillies edged Chicago Cubs 5-4 and Pittsburgh Pirates blanked New York Mets 5-0.

Until Peterson's hit and Alou's error broke the game open for San Francisco, Bolin had protected a 1-0 lead built in the first inning on a single by Jim Davenport and Mays' double.

The error was the second this year for Alou, who made only five all last season.

Don Sutton and Ron Perranoski combined for Los Angeles' second straight shutout. Sutton, the rookie righthander, raised his record to 7-4 with Perranoski relieving in the seventh.

BRING RUNS IN

Wes Parker singled home the first Dodger run in the fifth and then Al Ferrara's pinch single in the seventh brought home the other.

Houston broke loose with eight straight singles before Baldschun broke the string by hitting a batter. When the Astros were through, they had eight runs and the Reds were headed for their sixth straight loss.

Jim Gentile, Dave Nicholson and Jim Wynn drove in two runs apiece in the big inning. Nicholson had belted a two-run homer earlier but Cincinnati rallied for two runs, tying the score in the ninth.

Rich Allen's hot bat continued to pace the Phillies. Allen smashed a 430-foot homer as Philadelphia won its fourth straight and seventh in the last nine.

Rookie catcher Randy Hundley hammered a two-run shot for the Cubs.

Vern Law pitched a three-hitter and cracked a home run as the Pirates blanked the Mets. It was Law's fourth straight shutout over two seasons against New York and his first victory since opening day.

Vinnie Clendenon and Willie Stargell also homered for Pittsburgh.

Yesterday's Fights

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore — Johnny Gilden, 151, Baltimore, outpointed Charley Scott, 155, Philadelphia, 10.

Los Angeles—Irish (Frankie) Crawford, 127, North Hollywood, Calif., knocked out Raul Carreon, 126, Sonora, Mexico, 1.

Boise, Idaho — Boone Kirkman, 200, Seattle, Wash., stopped John (Tiger) Collins, 205, Boise, 4.

Las Vegas, Nev. — Johnny Brooks, 148, Henderson, Nev., and Joe Clark, 148, Las Vegas, drew, 10.

Portland, Me.—Pete Ricciteli, 170, Portland, knocked out Jimmy McDermott, 166, Holyoke, Mass., 4.

ALCOHOL STILL KILLS

Blood analyzes showed half the people killed on Illinois roads in the first three months of this year had been drinking.

'THE KING' AND FOUR WHO MAY CHALLENGE RIGHT TO TRIPLE CROWN — Kauai King, who looks like a "sure thing" to become the ninth three-year-old to win the Triple Crown, come Saturday and the Belmont Stakes at Aqueduct, probably will face seven and perhaps eight other colts in the "test of champions." Among them are Stupendous, Buffle, Amberoid and Advocator. (AP Wirephoto)

Name "King" Belmont Favorite

By ORLO ROBERTSON

NEW YORK (AP)—If you believe exactness is paramount in a horse race, go no further than Buffle in betting for the probable winner of Saturday's $125,000-added Belmont Stakes at Aqueduct.

Although not heavily campaigned, the home-bred son of Zenith out of Bold Venture mare, Refurbish, is supported heavily by a cast wise in the ways of the 1½-mile race which winds up the triple crown competition for three-year-olds.

Post time Saturday is 5:15 p.m. EDT.

Kauai King, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, is 4-to-5 favorite to become the ninth winner of the triple crown.

Not one of his cast over has won near the New York track on Belmont Stakes day.

Buffle is owned by Robert Kleberg's King Ranch which has won three runnings of the Belmont in 11 tries—with triple by crown winner Assault in 1946, Middleground in 1950 and High Gun in 1954.

He is trained by Max Hirsch, 85, who has saddled four winners—the King Ranch trio and Vito way back in 1928. And he'll be ridden by Manuel Ycaza, who has tried four times and won once with Quadrangle two years ago.

C. V. Whitney is the only owner except King Ranch among the 10 scheduled entries who has won the classic. His silks were carried to victory by Phalanax in 1947 and by Counterpoint in 1951. He's tied with 16 other horses.

Whitney will be represented by Fax Count, a son of Counterpoint who this year has won all three of his starts, each at 1¼ miles and all over the Aqueduct oval.

Hirsch stands alone among the trainers as winner of the coveted race.

Jockey Braulio Baeza, who'll ride the well-liked stupendous from Mrs. H. C. Phipps,' Wheatley Stable, won with Sherluck in 1961 and Chateaguay in 1963.

Johnny Sellers climbs on the popular Carry Back in 1961 but came through with Hail to All last year for his first Belmont triumph in five rides. Baeza also has ridden in five Belmonts as has Bobby Ussery who'll be after his first triumph on Fleet Shoe, the hope of California.

Valium, a rank outsider who'll start only if the track is fast, is the lone other horse with a complete novice case. The others—Amberoid, Highest Honors and Rebabilitate—all will be ridden by jockeys who have been in one or more Belmonts.

Entries closed at 10:30 a.m. EDT today with a pot of $160,200 due if 10 are entered. The winner will earn $118,450 with $25,000 to second, $12,500 to third and $6,250 to fourth.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Brockton Boy, ridden by Avelino Gomez, won the $3,000-purse seventh race at Greenwood racetrack Thursday before 8,446 fans.

Owned by Larkin Maloney, Brockton Boy completed the seven-furlong distance in 1:24 4-5 and returned $3.40, $3.20 and $2.60.

The daily double paid $124.50.

BELKIN ADVANCES

CARDIFF, Wales (Reuters)—Former Montrealer Mike Belkin, now of Miami, Fla., reached the men's singles semi-finals in the Glamorgan tennis tournament Thursday by defeating O. Ishiguro of Japan 6-1, 6-3. Keith Carpenter of Montreal lost 3-6, 1-6 against South African Abe Segal.

'Sulky' Likes . . .

It will be interesting to fellow "Sulky" as he is the world's worst bettor. For June 4 races at Belleville, "Sulky" likes:

First race, Don Comet
Second race, Polaris Minitie
Third and Seventh race, Brian Wynn
Fourth race, Single De Best
Fifth race, Buick
Sixth race, Royal Abe
Eighth race, Dilly Direct
Ninth race, Ben Ezawa
Tenth race, Magic Charm
Best Bet, Royal Abe in the sixth

This being Belleville's first race this season, "Sulky" knows very little about the nags but he likes the numbers.

Abel Fires Stasiuk, Moves Bush

DETROIT (AP) — Manager-coach Sid Abel of Detroit Red Wings announced Thursday the shift of one of the National Hockey League club's farm team coaches and the firing of another.

Eddie Bush, coach of the American Hockey League Pittsburgh Hornets, left his post to rejoin Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. Hamilton is the Red Wings' top amateur farm club.

Vic Stasiuk was relieved of his duties after one season as head coach of Memphis Wings in the Central Hockey League. Abel said replacements for Bush and Stasiuk would be named later this month.

May Increase Harness Meet Charters

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons agriculture committee agreed Thursday to consider ways Ontario agricultural groups can obtain charters for two or three days of harness racing in connection with their fall fairs or other activities.

S. B. Pratt, head of the department's race track betting division, is to prepare a report on all aspects of his section's work with the tracks, including charters. The section supervising pari-mutuel betting at tracks which operates under federal or provincial charters and does all bed work such as saliva and urine testing of the horses.

Mr. Pratt said the shortage of racing charters is found only in Ontario. Other provinces have passed special acts granting new charters when they are needed.

The Criminal Code forbids betting at harness racing tracks unless they hold charters or granted before March, 1912, or are authorized under special acts of Parliament or the provincial legislatures.

Mr. Pratt said there is a shortage of racing dates in Ontario this year. The larger tracks in the past had passed around charters to the smaller ones but this year, with extended meets at the bigger centres, there were not enough dates to go round.

Eric Whelder (PC — Grey-Bruce) said agricultural societies depend on revenue from track meets. A way should be found to grant them charters for a few days of racing each year.

Leads Memphis With 63

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Bert Yancy of Philadelphia shot a seven-under-par 63 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the $100,000 Memphis open golf tournament.

Trailing Yancy by three strokes with 68s were Bob Charles of New Zealand and Americans Dale Douglass and Gene Littler.

Player Let Off With Warning

Wayne Woods, second baseman for Ellis Juniors in the Belleville and District Softball League, was let off with a warning after an incident involving umpire Les Barton last Saturday night.

Woods threw his bat, was ejected from the game by plate umpire Barton and then, according to the official, kicked the umpire in the shins.

League president Frank Insley, of Trenton, said after a meeting last night that Woods has been warned and that a motion was put to the league books which "should prevent any further incidents of this type."

The motions calls for immediate ejection and an automatic one-game suspension for any throwing of equipment or use of profane language by the member of any team. This is for the first offence. A second time, the player must come before the league executive for further action.

Woods watched last night's Ellis - Bobcat game from the stands.

U.S. Football War

Approaches Showdown

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—The pro football war moved closer to a showdown Thursday when Pete Rozelle, commissioner of the National Football League, said there was concern in both major pro leagues about lame duck players.

Rozelle's comments about reported talent raids of men under contract or option were made in an interview while the 15 NFL coaches were finishing a two-day meeting.

George Halas, owner-coach of Chicago Bears, and Vince Lombardi, coach-general manager of the champion Green Bay Packers, both voiced disapproval of New York Giants' plans to re-sign with Buffalo Bills of the American Football League and became a free agent May 1. The Giants announced his signing May 17.

Gogolak's contract became official while the last few days. Commissioner Rozelle had 10 days to disapprove after it was filed. The 10 days expired and Rozelle did not reject it.

The signing of Gogolak touched off a series of reports that AFL clubs had offered NFL stars future contracts if they play out their options.

Under pro football rules, a player can refuse to sign for a year, but still play with the team the following season. He becomes a free agent the following May 1. This is known as playing out the option.

Outdoor Tips And Tricks

BY BOB BLAIND

The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests can take a breather on the Moira Salmon they have planted in the great lakes system.

Their American counter department the New York State Conservation Authorities who had preceded them in planting this type of trout have been very successful in their operation.

The Kokanee salmon is originally a western trout of the sockeye family and at maturity will measure only 10 to 18 inches in length. They usually mature in their fourth year, then die after spawning.

Normal existence is silver and as the spawning season approaches the adult turn to a purplish silver that gradually turns to fiery red.

These trout were established in the eastern lakes as forage for trout fish for the lake and rainbow trout as well as to introduce a new type of game fish to the local waters.

As these small sockeye are a plankton feeder there was some interest as to whether they could be caught on a hook and line but in the New York state lakes they now makes one of the most sought after trout, and are being harvested in great quantities.

The best rig to date to catch these silvery fighters seems to be what is generally called a Christmas Tree. The proper name for this rig is a Willowleaf troll and it is used mainly to catch rainbow and lake trout, it is a series of spinners about 18 to 30 inches in length with an eye for attaching either a minnow or worm.

If fishing in Quinte the local guides figure you do not have any good tackle for trout if you have not several of these lures in your tackle box.

The kokanee also will take small grubs, worms or salmon eggs and it might be a good fishing trip if on a calm day on Lake Ontario in the direction of area around the mouths of some of these creeks entering the lake to try fishing for these little fighters in spring or early fall.

Plenty will be heard about this new trout in the next few years ,a welcome newcomer to eastern waters.

Cold weather has failed to dampen the spirits of local fishermen. The past weekend many of these fellows braved the cold and rainy weather to fish for pickerel, pike and trout with fair success.

West Lake and Moira Lake are still the top producing lakes in the area for pickerel while the Hastings county lakes seem to be much better this year for bakes than the lakes in Frontenac County.

Parks Creek locality has been the hot spot for the speckled trout, some very nice catches taken on a spinner and a worm.

Ralph Smith of R.R. 1, Bellville booked a good 14-lb. Pike in 14 Island Lake on a large minnow.

Bass fishing opens in local waters on Saturday, June 25th. No size limit and a 6 per day limit.

Muskie season starts July 16th with a size limit of 24 inches and a possession limit of 2 per day.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference have announced the signing of Terry Leonard, a 205-pound defensive halfback from University of Arizona, and Billy C. Moore, an offensive halfback from Mississippi State.

Senator New CFL Boss?

OTTAWA (CP) — Newspaper reports say Senator Keith Davey of Toronto is the choice for commissioner of the Canadian Football League to succeed Sydney Hutter of Winnipeg.

Senator Davey, at 40 the youngest member of the Upper House, held the position of national organizer of the Liberal party from May, 1961, until early this year. He was appointed to the Senate in February.

At that time he said in a newspaper interview he intended to work at another job besides that of senator and was weighing offers, mainly in the communications business. Before moving into his post with children, was an advertising salesman for Toronto radio station CKFH.

The newspaper stories suggest he will be given a two-year contract with a salary "in the neighborhood of $25,000 annually."

He would be permitted to remain in the Senate—where he draws a salary of $15,000 a year —but would be asked by the CFL to curtail his Liberal party activities.

In Montreal, CFL president Ted Workman said Thursday he has no comment to make on the reports.

Minor Baseball Results

Park Dale hammered Mead Johnson 13-3 in a Belleville Minor Baseball Association bantam division game last night.

Terry Meagher and Jim Wood combined to pitch a three-hitter for the winners. They struck out ten but walked nine.

Jim Potts stayed the route for Meade, allowing eight hits, fanning 13 and passing seven.

The losers were in front briefly, 2-1, but fell behind early and Park Dale put the game in wraps with five runs in the sixth.

Terry Meagher paced the winners at bat with two doubles and as many singles. Paul Crossen added two hits, Jim Wood and Gerald Pope one each.

The losers' singles went to Rick Insley, Jim Potts and Tony Goncalves.

TRACED PAINTINGS

BERLIN (Reuters) — East German officials said Wednesday two paintings by the 15th century German artist Albrecht Duerer, recently discovered in New York, belonged to a Weimar collection before they disappeared more than 20 years ago. A culture ministry spokesman refused to comment on whether East Germany will claim the paintings from New York lawyer Edward Elcolon, in whose private collection they were found.

Jets Leadoff Batter Stages One-Man Show

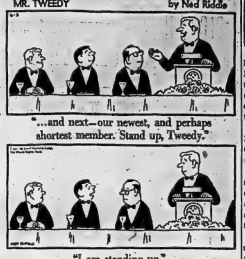
By THE CANADIAN PRESS

George Springs is a leadoff batter for Catches Jets, but he performed like a cleanup hitter Thursday night.

Springs hit an inside-the-park homer and two singles, drew two walks, stole a base, scored four runs and drove in three more to lead the Jets to a 10-3 triumph over Jacksonville Suns in an International League baseball game.

The victory kept the Jets five percentage points ahead of Toledo Mud Hens in the battle for first place while the loss dropped the Suns into third, 1½ games behind the leaders.



Toledo, meanwhile, rode a four - hit pitching performance by Jack Cullen to a 1-0 victory over Richmond Braves.

Toronto Maple Leafs stayed a half-game ahead of the last-place Syracuse Chiefs by edging Rochester Red Wings 4-3. The Chiefs split a doubleheader with Buffalo Bisons, losing the first game 10-1 but winning the second 5-2.

TOTALS DROWNINGS

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Red Cross reported Wednesday that a recent survey showed 1,106 persons died by drowning in Canada in 1965. It said more than 30 per cent of the drownings were associated with boating mishaps and more than 18 per cent occurred while victims were swimming or wading.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Becky Herbert, owned by Bill Herbert of London, Ont., won the featured sixth race at Garden City Raceway Thursday by defeating odds-on favorite Kiss Too Colby.

Trotting the mile in 2:06 4-5, Becky combined with Kissoo Colby for a $13.10 exactor.

OTTAWA (CP)—The judges ruled interference by Wiki Indian Thursday night and awarded Lightning Dares his seventh victory of the season at the Rideau-Carleton Raceway.

The incident in the seventh race moved Wiki Indian to fifth from first place. Official time for the mile was 2:10 2-5.

Sticks Not Sabres

TORONTO (CP)—Scotty Morrison, referee-in chief of the National Hockey League, will recommend legislation for safer sticks at the NHL annual meeting next week in Montreal.

He wants a minimum depth and thickness of stick blades.

Some players whittle the blades of their sticks to thin planks. Others curve the blades in hopes of getting a faster, more accurate shot.

"I'm not criticizing the curved blade," Morrison said in an interview Thursday, "only the lethal qualities of a stick bound to a knife edge."

NHL rules state that the blades of sticks for all but goaltenders can be no more than three inches high.

Modern Fire Equipment Displayed at Meeting

PICTON (Staff — a display of the most modern fire fighting equipment featured the regular monthly meeting of the Hastings and Prince Edward Wednesday night.

The display included a new type of hose nozzle with a ring at the top for changing the water jet into a well of spray without reducing the 300 pounds pressure.

This would enable firemen to use the same nozzle for entering a burning room, whereas they often have to attach a new one.

Fire Chief Donne Vossy also had on hand the latest type of fire pumper, which he said the company had decided to send at the last minute instead of a portable pumper.

The result of the demonstration was that King Street outside the fire hall received a thorough washing as representative of King Seagrave Limited of Woodstock, distributors of the nozzle, and its capabilities.

Fire Chief Jack Caffey of Wellington, vice-president of the association, presided in the absence of the president.

Fire Chief Foskey introduced Gordon K. Hughes, sales representative for King Seagrave, R. Hedley Hooper, sales representative for Canadian Motorola Electronics Company, and David Hoare, representing Safety Supply Company, who demonstrated their safety equipment.

REQUESTS SPACE

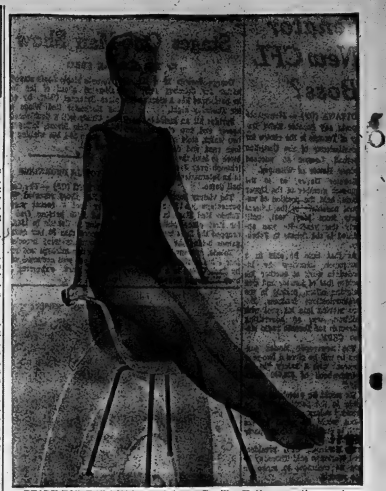
Angus Duffy, co-ordinator of the Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization asked the fire chiefs present to inform him if they would let the St. John Ambulance Corps use their fire halls for training in mouth to mouth respiration. "There are always about six drownings in this area every year," he said. "We are particularly interested in training adults, scout leaders and we can to respond in an emergency."

Laurance Burford and Ed. Dustin, who retired from the Picton brigade recently after 30 and 31 years service respectively, were applauded when they were presented with new bobic fire helmets.

It was announced that the annual mutual aid field day will be held in Marmora June 28, Departments from Rawdon Township, Frankford, Stirling, Tweed, Deseronto and Belleville said they will join Marmora for the event.

Fire Chief Ted Post of Belleville, co ordinator of the association, said that C. H. Pope has been appointed to become an inspector with the Ontario Fire Marshal's office, working out of Belleville. He duties will commence in August.

Councillor Andrew Jarvis was on hand to meeting on behalf of town council.



Bloomfield fire department will be host to the July meeting.

Centennial Project for Hillier Approved

PICTON (Staff) — Hillier Township's Centennial project has now been approved, the project includes an addition to the township hall and renovations.

The total cost of the project will be $5,000 with the Federal and Provincial Centennial grants, plus an Ontario Department of Agriculture grant under the Community Centres Act, leaving but $2,000 as the township's local share." The addition to the hall will be 24 x 36 feet and there will be a new entrance to the hall, a new kitchen, cloak room and wash rooms. The former kitchen will become a council chamber and clerks office.

An addition was made to the hall in 1962 and the new project last will give township and vollage an attractive and useful community centre.

READY FOR THE BEACH — Actress Gunilla Hutton practices a tense-release movement that exercises muscles from shoulder to fingertip.

Strengthening Exercises For the Surf 'n' Sail Set

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

The surf 'n' sail set need the advantage of strong, supple arms that immediately respond to the sudden roll and surge of a wave. That's why the more athletic perform a series of lifts and presses to build endurance and keep arms toned and strong. A favorite exercise begins by sitting on a tip-proof chair, firmly grasping its arms. Pull knees arced, straighten arms and legs. Now elevate body from chair seat. How long and how steady can you maintain position? For beginners, three seconds is considered good. Perfom two times; slowly work up to five.

When practicing the former routine, did you notice wrists were wobbly? If so, you may need a booster workout. This overwhelming action was first demonstrated for us by a group of midshipmen. While still seated, grip a rope or cord, so that knuckles face upward and arms are fully extended. Without moving torso, rotate arms in a semi-circular pattern, as if steering a giant ship's wheel. Be sure it is set to slacken hold. As actress Gunilla Hutton, seen in the CBS-TV series, "Petticoat Junction," discovered; the more limber you become, the larger the arc you can make. Practice 30 seconds.

Next here's a tense-release movement that exercises muscles from shoulders to fingertips. Sit erect, arms extended before you, hands overlapped. Draw in abdominal muscles, so stomach is flat, then gradually lean forward at the waist. Extend hands, gently pushing with the entire arm until fingers are taut and stretched. Hold position three seconds; release. Repeat four times; increase to five seconds. Now lower arms to sides and vigorously shake each hand.

Need a W-cut? Take more pin-up than pocky proportions? Then send for our "most requested", photo - illustrated booklet, "Exercises For a Pin-up." Send 30c and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Reba and Bonnie Churchill, c/o The Intelligencer, P.O. Box 66,181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

Mock Helicopter Assault To Feature Forces Day

PICTON (Staff) — National Armed Forces Day will be observed at Camp Picton with a mock helicopter assault. All being well the helicopters will appear over the Fair Grounds on Sat. June 11. Inside the "Choppers" in combat uniform, carrying rifles and sub-machine guns, will be a full company of between 60 and 70 guardsmen from Camp Picton. The guardsmen on landing will leave the aircraft and take their positions in the field. What spectators will be seeing will be a simulated helicopter landing and infantry assault; and will be one of the highlights of Armed Forces Day in Picton.

The assault is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m. and the soldiers will be members of the 1st Battalion Canadian Guards and the helicopters will be from Canadian Armed Forces Base, Trenton. It may be that the Air Force will have a helicopter on hand so that spectators may see through the aircraft.

Other highlights: The display, including the helicopter will be open to the public at 2 p.m. There will be a radio broadcast from the scene of the field, perhaps a direct link with Camp Picton so that the public may speak to persons there. There will be demonstrations of field telephones and field kitchens and free refreshments for the kiddies. Also there will be displays of weapons and ammunitions, Guardsmen will be on hand to explain the use of the various equipment on display.

The grand finale will be at 4:30 p.m. when the corps of Canadian Guards will present a 30 man guard of honor outside the Main Street Armouries. The Guard of Honor accompanied by the Corps of Drums will then parade along Main Street to the fairgrounds.

The Armed Forces Day activities will begin when Mayor H. J. McFarland accompanied by Lt. Col. J. G. W. Haynes, Commanding Officer of the 1st Canadian Guards will inspect a 30 man guard of honor outside the Main Street Armouries. The Guard of Honor accompanied by the Corps of Drums will then parade along Main Street to the fairgrounds.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — Ingrid Bergman relaxes on Omar Sharif from the trunk of her Rolls-Royce, in which he has smuggled himself across the Yugoslavian border, in this scene from "The Yellow Rolls-Royce." Written by Terence Rattigan, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture depicts the adventure of a Rolls-Royce and its various owners and occupants over a period of years. Also in the all-star cast are Rex Harrison, Alain Delon, George C. Scott, Jeanne Moreau and Shirley MacLaine. The drama was filmed in Panavision and color in England and on locations in Italy and Austria and opens Saturday at the Belleville Drive-In Theatre. Companion feature attraction, also in color, the gay comedy-romance "Honeymoon Hotel" stars Robert Goulet, Nancy Kwan, Robert Morse and Jill St. John.

AT THE BELLE — Although he calls himself an ordinary man, he's quite an extraordinary one. No one but Ben Harrison could have portrayed Professor Higgins, the witty, tyrannical phonetics expert, in "My Fair Lady." It was inevitable that Harrison, who personified Higgins 1,006 times on the musical stage of New York and London, should appear for the 1,007th, and last, time in the famous role in Warner Bros. Academy Award-winning screen version, showing tonight at 8.00 p.m. and on Saturday and Sunday at 2.00 and 8.00 p.m. at the Belle Theatre. Harrison also stars with Audrey Hepburn and the Technicolor-Panavision musical, which was directed by George Cukor.

AT THE PARK — Martha Hyer centre, bitterly watches as her husband, Richard Greenleaf, and his mistress, played by James Dunn, enjoy a Saturday night party at the Chateau Continental in "Bachelor in Paradise," now showing at the Park Theatre. Co-starring with Miss Hyer is Bob Hope, who plays a divorcé who moves into a beach cottage in the Beverly Hills area and finds himself the toast of the town as he mingles with the bored-and-lonely wives of the local husbands. Also in the cast are Lana Turner and Jim Hutton. The big attraction is now playing at the Park Theatre for an extended engagement. Tonight at 8.00 p.m. and Saturday continuous show from 1.45 p.m.

Picking Winners of New TV Shows Becomes a Science

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Selecting popular television shows, some months before they are much more than an idea, once was considered to be a special sort of even a gift.

But now picking winners is becoming a science, with computers able to toss out predictions of future hits and misses six months in advance of their premieres.

One of the large advertising agencies, Kenyon and Eckhardt, has been experimenting with computer predictions for the last two years, with an estimated 87-per-cent success.

In its third run, gauging the popularity of next fall's new programs, the machine pronounced, among many other things, that T.H.E. Cat, Tarzan and Hey, Landlord on NBC and It's About Time on CBS were to be the biggest hits among three dozen new programs.

"But, remember," cautioned the agency's executive vice-president, Stephen Dietz, "if the computer has been 87-per-cent correct, it has also been 13-per-cent wrong."

MAKES PREDICTIONS

The electronic crystal ball works with national Nielsen ratings taken during January and February, peak viewing months, to predict future popularity of programs already in existence.

These are augmented by statistics of audience ratings on action, which attempts to measure not audience size but the degree to which audiences enjoy certain programs. To measure future interest in new shows the agency uses a series of questions to find out what it calls "concepts testing." An audience sample is given an idea described to them, and notes down whether it appeals or not.

In addition, the computer input includes information on a program's time period and its competition.

Dietz said that in past seasons, computer predictions have been used as one of his agency's guides in buying advertising spots in assorted programs.

But while an advertising agency's very well use has computer to help find hit programs for its clients, it is not likely to be too useful to network executives. Popularity cannot be their sole guide.

If it were, few documentaries and public service programs—often attracting small audiences would find air time.

ABC's Wide World of Sports Saturday will show the running of Memorial Day's Indianapolis 500 in which seven of the original 33 automobile series finished. ABC has broadcast the race, on a delayed basis, for the last four years.

DIPLOMATS ORGANIZE

OTTAWA (CP) — A newly-formed organization, already being termed the striped-trousers school of unionism, has notified the government it will seek certification as bargaining agent for foreign service officers. The Professional Association of Foreign Service Officers, which came into being quietly earlier this year, has some 230 members signed up in both the external affairs and trade departments.

Many U.S. Actors Star In European Westerns

By BOB THOMAS

ROME (AP)—A funny thing happened on my way to Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport.

I stopped to visit a place called Hiwatá del West. The translation is Boothill of the West, and that is precisely what has been translated to a Roman suburb. It is a long bar, complete with swinging doors, all done in the western motif.

Hiwatá del West is evidence of Italy's passion for things western.

The western movie always has been popular in Europe, where old-fashioned film-goers have enjoyed the westerns' vast scenery as well as the elemental, easily-translated action. Now more home spaces are being filmed in Europe than in Hollywood.

The trend started three years ago, principally in Yugoslavia and Spain, where horses and scenery were readily available. Now the films are being made plentifully in France, Germany and especially in Italy.

Among American actors starring in European westerns have been Austin Murphy, Broderick Crawford, Guy Madison, Cameron Mitchell, Jeffrey Hunter, Dan Duryea, Lex Barker.

Even Stewart Granger and Brian Aherne, who made some westerns at MGM, HE shared in the trend; his latest film is entitled Old Surehand.

Biggest of the western stars here is Clint Eastwood, late of the Rawhide TV series. His For A Fistful of Dollars was one of the biggest moneymakers in recent history; United Artists recently paid $800,000 for an American release. Clint now earns $250,000 a film.

Before returning to Hollywood I visited the set of one of the Italian westerns. This one was called River of Dollars.

The director was an Italian named Carlo Lizzani, but he will be billed as Lee W. Beaver, following the tradition to Americanize the names of western directors.

Henry Silva, who plays a Mexican bandit, figured in a stage-coach holdup. The only horses were on the lush green of the Italian countryside; the west seldom looked like that.

"I make all my westerns here," Silva remarked. "Everything is the same as in Hollywood, except that here they take more time. That can make a lot of difference in quality."

STOP —LOOK — READ
THEN STEAL, BEG OR BORROW

After you have stopped looking, stop borrowing, but get out the cash in your hands, you can, then come and buy this home from me and save yourself a lot of money. Here is a real nice 3 bedroom home in Western Ontario where you have room to move around, and it can be transferred to most marks, so why not move out of the city and enjoy country living. REALLY! Don't fret, but even if it did well I certainly wouldn't. Why pay $12,000 and more money for my property when you can get this for $11,500 and pay $1,000 down.

HERE IS WHAT I AM SELLING AND I MEAN SELLING

THIS PROPERTY IS NOT DEVALUATED but just a real good buy for some one. It is a 3 bedroom brick bungalow, a size not over 36,000 square feet, with a garage, and a lot 100 x 200 feet. It is not in the city, but nearly one acre in all, plus a good sized garden. Now I understand you don't have to pay for city water, but you can have it for $100.00 extra. It has a nice kitchen, 3 nice sized bedrooms, an extra large kitchen cupboard, a nice bright living room, a full basement containing electric furnace, and a laundry tub. Also a nice sized garage, with a real good work drive-way for 4 cars, and a good garden, with a drilled well, septic tank, with exceptionally good water pressure, and all for only $11,500 cash. Don't buy a new roof, furnace, bath, pressure system, or septic tank, but buy a real good home that you can be proud of, but remember that maybe some new buyer will be in the city and will want to pay cash for it, so don't be fooled by a house building contractor who will tell you he can build you one for $12,000 or $13,000 for this entire property and home.

It is clear of any debt or mortgage, and I will be glad to show you through it. Remember, I am not a Government surveyor's reviser's clerk, so don't expect me to say you can have immediate possession. Maybe you can, maybe you can't, but I am sure you will like it. Only $75. or less per year, cellar full of coal, and the cheapest entrance to the electric wiring is heavy duty. Only $11,500 cash, and I am sure you will be glad for it only cost you $600. to the full down payment. Phone me at 962-6476, or 962-6465, Belleville, or which I will take back and say I am sorry I called you. Remember I am not a real estate agent of 25 years standing. Only 2 months of 999 monthly contracts left to run. Possession arranged.

YOU ARE INTERESTED!

You bet you are.... no real fuss or bother, just $1,000 down and only $2150. to full down payment. Let's look at it. Only $11,500 and I will sell this property for $4500. down, the balance secured by a first mortgage at 6% interest for 5 years, or the balance secured by a second mortgage at 6% interest for 5 years, # Coincidence, Providence?

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

"Barak won victory as Sisera's army gets stuck in mud." So a modern editor might have headlined Israel's victory over Canaan. But the poet who celebrated this victory in song was not thinking about mud. He thought about stars, about the forces of heaven that seemed to fight on the side of Israel that day. So he wrote, "From heaven fought the stars, from their courses they fought against Sisera." (Judges 5:20 RSV)

What happened was certainly providential for Israel. Barak's foot-soldiers faced Sisera's army equipped with 900 chariots of iron. The odds were against them. Then it began to rain. "The clouds dropped water." (Judges 5:4) The battlefield became a sea of mud. The heavy iron chariots sank and were stuck. Sisera's army was routed.

Was the storm coincidence or providence? An incident that seemed even more providential happened in Judah during Hezekiah's reign. The Assyrian army under Sennacherib besieged Jerusalem. Partly due to a spring providing water within the city, the defenders managed to hold off what seemed like inevitable defeat. (Psalm 46:4) Then the amazing thing happened. Sudden and mysterious death struck the Assyrian army. Its soldiers died by the thousands. (Isaiah 37:46) Plague or miracle? Whichever it was, it was providential for Hezekiah and his people. The Psalmist, undoubtedly referring to this event, said "Come, behold the works of the Lord." (Psalm 46:8)

MOST DESERVING KING

If any king deserved such a deliverance, it was Hezekiah. "He did what was right in the eyes of the Lord." (II Kings 18:3 RSV) He wasted no time restoring the worship of Jehovah. In the first month of his reign, he "opened the doors of the house of the Lord and repaired them." (II Chron. 29:3 RSV) He made a covenant with the Lord, and set about to cleanse the temple of all ceremonial uncleanness.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for June 5: "Reformation under Hezekiah," is based on Isaiah 36 through 39; Isaiah 30:15; 31:1-3.

Instead of imposing heavy taxes, as his ancestor Solomon had done, he inspired the people to give generously of the people's resources. "All who were of a willing heart" brought offerings in abundance. At the command of the king, the nation gathered for a great observance of the Passover "because of love Him. (Romans 8:28)

Mrs. Earl Marvin spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Branscombe in Kingston.

The Royal Canadian Legion Branch 160 entertained the Boy Scouts and Cubs last Tuesday night at the Legion Hall. Several films were shown. After the films the boys were treated to hot dogs and soft drinks.

Mrs. Tom Rea has returned home from Flint, Michigan where she was the guest of her son-and-his family, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Boyle.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bailey of Lake Pier, Michigan are spending several weeks at one of the Macdonald cottages and are visiting relatives in the district.

Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Gibson of Trenton spent a few days with their daughter, Mrs. Sam Tripp and Mr. Tripp.

Mr. Murray Smith and Miss Judith Smith of Cobourg spent Sunday with Mrs. Dayton Murphy. Mrs. Smith, who had spent a few days with her mother, returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Allen spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Than Kellar at Downsview. Their grandson Darryle Kellar, was celebrating his 3rd birthday.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate

"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Suppose you bought a small sunchasing television set and disassembled it attempting to find the trouble? The manufacturer is ill-likelihood would consider the guarantee compromised. In a more subtle way, the owner of a new home often jeopardizes its guarantee or warrantee, too.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'm quite happy with my new home except for two complaints: The heating system appears incapable of keeping the house warm and the electrical fuses are a constantly blowing. I've complained many times, but the builder says that he is too busy. He suggests that I bring in my own mechanic to make the corrections and send him the bill. The builder's offer appears reasonable. Do you agree? — N. H. O.

ANSWER: The builder's suggestion may appear reasonable to our correspondent, and it would to most people, but it is one of the best dodges I know for avoiding responsibility.

In this instance we are concerned with poorly designed and inadequate heating and electrical systems. It is not a question of minor repairs or adjustment. Also, if the homeowner brings in his own mechanic to take over, the builder can in righteous indignation say, "I installed a good system, your man messed it up." This deception works, I know from experience.

Demand in writing that the builder make the necessary corrections. If you are ignored, seek legal advice. Don't voluntarily call the plumber or implied warrantee that goes with your new home.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: About a dozen asphalt tile blocks in my basement room are chipped and stained so I bought replacement tiles.

My problem is how to remove the old tile without damaging the floor. I've tried heat, chemicals and special solvents. At the rate I'm going, I'll have to replace the whole floor. — A. A.

ANSWER: A very effective method of taking up individual blocks of tile is with dry ice. Allow a cake of dry ice to be placed on the tile to be removed for about 10 or 15 minutes. Such intense cold makes the tile and adhesive brittle enough so that it can be taken up with a putty knife. Be sure to use heavy gloves when handling dry ice.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Is it best to put a concrete walk directly on the ground or to lay it on a gravel base? This is a simple question, but getting a straight answer is difficult. I've read the books, the magazines, and I've asked the experts, but I'm still confused. How about a direct answer to my question? — T. L.

ANSWER: If the ground has excellent drainage, lay the concrete directly on the soil. In all other cases use a four- or six-inch gravel or cinder base. The extra cost is small — about 20 cents per square foot, so it is best to play it safe. Ground on which concrete can be laid directly is the exception, rather than the general rule.

WHY NOT INSULATE YOUR HOME NOW AGAINST SUMMER HEAT AND WINTER'S CHILLY BLAST?

When Spring arrives, you put away the muffler and fur cap, pay your fuel bill and try to forget that winter never happened. So when some guy comes up to you and says, "Hey, why don't you insulate your home right now", you are likely to belt him in the nose for reminding you of cold weather.

But wait! Don't hit him yet! He claims he has a good idea. Why not listen?

The guys with the idea are Beaver Lumber and the idea is that this is really a great time to do that insulating job you've probably been thinking about for a couple of years.

Why? Well, first of all, this is a good season for working on the house. And second, your insulated home can stay as much as 15 degrees cooler when things really get hot this summer. Third, of course, is the fact that if you insulate now, you'll be all ready for new comfort and lower fuel bills next winter, when the chilly winds start to blow.

Beaver Lumber points out that of all the home improvements you can make, a good insulation job — whether you do it yourself or have someone do it for you — is the one most likely to pay for itself, through savings in fuel bills and, if you have air conditioning, in lower cooling costs.

Non-op Demands Said High

MONTREAL (CP) — Basic wage demands alone, served by the non - operating unions on the CPR, would amount to 10 per cent more than the company's net rail earnings for 1965, a conciliation board was told Friday.

Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe of Vancouver is heading the conciliation board in the contract dispute between eight railway companies, including the CPR and the CNR, which represent 97 per cent of trackage in Canada, and a group of eight "non-op" unions representing about 49,000 employees.

Keith Campbell, CPR vice-president in charge of railway personnel, was called Friday as a witness for the railway. He said the total cost of demands by all unions to all railways would be about $350,000,000. The combined cost of all demands by the shop craft group and the residual group to the CPR would be $54,508,000 or 210 per cent of the CPR's net railway earnings of $40,000,000 last year he said.

In a breakdown of estimated costs of the full demands, Mr. Campbell said the residual group's demands would cost Canadian Pacific $54,211,000 and Canadian National $46,424,000 for a total of $101,833,000.

ESTIMATES COST

He said the cost of the demands, in terms of dollar cost per employee, would be approximately $2,400 per employee in a year for both CNR and CPR. Since the current average annual cost per non-op employee is $3,477.76, the new demands represent an increase of about 44 per cent in average annual cost per employee, bringing it to $7,800.

Postpone Space-walk, Astronauts 'Bushed' By Fighting Shroud

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Hard luck plagued the Gemini 9 astronauts again today as they abandoned their satellite and had Eugene A. Cernan's space walk postponed 24 hours until Sunday.

The fatigue of the astronauts and excessive use of fuel during a tricky rendezvous with the satellite early today contributed to the latest troubles.

"We're pretty well bushed," command pilot Thomas P. Stafford reported after the exhausting chase of the satellite.

"It raises a question in my own mind whether and when the Eva space walk should be done. Perhaps we should wait until tomorrow Sunday morning."

The mission control centre in Houston, Tex., agreed and ordered the walk off until Sunday morning. The 24-hour walk, longest ever attempted, had been scheduled for 10:30 a.m. EDT today.

SHROUD HANGS ON

Ground controllers then made an effort to shake loose the hung-up shroud on the target satellite by firing its control thrusters.

That started the satellite bucking and pitching, but it failed to dislodge the jaw-like clamshells of the shroud, which covers the docking collar.

With all hope of linking up with the satellite — called an ATDA for Augmented Target Docking Adapter — gone, the ground told Stafford and Cernan to fire their thrusters and gradually pull away from it.

"There is no further chance that we can dock," mission director William C. Schneider said.

The Gemini 9 flight has been jinxed since May 17 when the original Agena target satellite failed to reach orbit because its Atlas booster failed.

CHANGE FLIGHT PLAN

Two postponements later, the astronauts finally got off the ground Thursday in pursuit of the substitute ATDA. But it caught it in record time—and learned to their disappointment that the shroud was still on, hung up by a few wires.

Because they were unable to dock, the flight plan was modified to give the ground crew a chance to perhaps figure out a way to shake the shroud loose.

The main change was to move up...late...a manoeuvre that had been planned for after Cernan's space walk.

The first was effectively executed without the use of radar. Then, during the night, Gemini 9 moved about 60 miles in front of the ATDA while Stafford and Cernan got

Vancouver Clean-up
Strikers Fail To Guard Trash From Students

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bizarre battle for control of rain-sodden garbage was waged in dirty downtown Vancouver Friday night between the city's striking outside workers and student clean-up squads.

Members of the Civic Employees' Union (outside workers), on strike against the city for four weeks, rushed to defend jam-packed refuse containers when 100 high school students swooped in to empty them.

Union members were too late in most cases. The students, working on a voluntary, non-profit basis, loaded hundreds of pounds of litter into rear trunks and trailers.

At the city dump, the students were met by 30+ pickets who lined up across the road and blocked it completely. The pickets cleared away slowly as the first vehicle edged slowly toward the side of the dump.

There were no serious incidents, though the pickets called the students "hoodlums" and "scabs" and attempted to snatch garbage out of the cars.

Two of the half-dozen girls in the garbage squads said the campaign started spontaneously.

The 1,500 outside workers are seeking a 70-cent-an-hour increase over three years on their basic wage of $2.28½. The city has offered 28½ cents, over two years.

PAY FOR WOLF SCALPS

Truscott Review In Fall

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada will hold its review of the Steven Truscott murder case next October, it was announced Friday.

Four lawyers involved in the case reached the decision after a conference with Chief Justice Robert Taschereau.

They issued this statement:

"It was found that because of the difficulties surrounding investigation of events seven years ago, which have required more time and exploration than was previously contemplated. It will not be possible for further evidence to be submitted to the court in June.

"An application for the reception of further evidence will be made early in September for disposition that month. It is expected that the case itself will be heard in October after the printing of such further evidence as may be received."

REVIEW ORDERED

The court's review of the case was ordered by the cabinet after publication earlier this year of a book casting doubts on evidence used in Truscott's murder conviction at Goderich, Ont., in 1959 when he was 14.

The boy, who now is 21 and serving a life term in Collins Bay Penitentiary near Kingston, was convicted of strangling 12-year-old Lynne Harper near the RCAF station at Clinton, Ont.

He originally was sentenced to be hanged but the sentence was commuted by the cabinet.

Following publication of a book by Mrs. Isabel Lelliourtais of Toronto, the case was debated in the Commons.

Will Take Time To Decide on Twins' Future

By CAL HOLLOWAY

TORONTO (CP)—Doctors at the Hospital for Sick Children here say it may take as long as two weeks to determine feasibility of separating Siamese twins brought here after their birth in Guelph.

The girls, joined from the chest to the navel, were born Thursday to Mrs. Leonard McGee, 25.

Doctors said at a press conference Friday that the babies' general condition and breathing improved to the point where respirators to supply oxygen were removed. They were in critical condition when admitted to hospital.

Marchand Will Name Goals Of Immigration Policies

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Marchand said Friday he hopes to introduce some legislation on immigration before the end of the month to clear up some of the critical problems.

He told the Commons during debate on his department's 1966-67 spending estimates that a long-awaited white paper, setting out Canadian goals in immigration, will follow.

Mr. Marchand indicated that Ottawa likes sponsored immigration and deportation appeals will be the first to be cleared up.

Opposition MPs criticized a recent report that urged severe limits to sponsorship of immigrants by relatives in Canada.

At present, an immigration minister makes the final judgment on immigration appeals. Mr. Marchand has joined past ministers in criticizing this.

At the same time, he has indicated he doesn't favor strong limitations on sponsored immigration.

Former immigration minister Richard A. Bell (PC—Carleton) said the sponsorship recommendations by Toronto lawyer Joseph Sedgwick, who submitted a report to the government earlier this year, would cause havoc if implemented.

When spending estimates of the industry and defence production departments were studied, Conservative and NDP spokesmen focused criticism on the way the designated area program is being carried out. After a battle that began Thursday, they succeeded in having the program and its display by the standing committee on industry, research and development.

Under the program, an area in which chronic unemployment exists or threatens to become eligible for tax incentives aimed at attracting industry.

Opposition critics said chronic unemployment is being used as a rigid guideline. Conservatives argue that industry is being misplaced to bring temporary relief to unemployment.

Dynamite Fails To Disrupt Montreal Rally

MONTREAL (CP)—The Liberal party wound up its campaign for Quebec's June 5 provincial election with a rally in east-end Montreal Friday night, overshadowed in a men's washroom under the stands at Paul Sauve Arena.

The crowd which nearly filled the 6,000 - seat arena took it calmly. Welfare Minister Rene Levesque was speaking when the explosion was heard, and he said: "Never mind, ladies and gentlemen. The sabotage is beginning."

2 Nuns, Monk Burn-Selves To Death

SAIGON (AP)—Two Buddhist nuns and a novice monk burned themselves to death in Saigon bringing to nine the number of Buddhist self - immolations in protest South Viet Nam's military government.

Hundreds troops of the South Korean Tiger division reported killing 119 Viet Cong in a three - day search - and - destroy mission near the coastal city of Qui Nhon, 270 miles northeast of Saigon.

The Buddhist suicides in widely separated cities came after the militant wing of the divided Buddhist movement threatened to wreck the government's precarious truce with them after weeks of civil strife and violence. The wave of fiery suicides began Sunday.

Lucien Rivard Posed as Woman During His Evasion of Police

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP)—The unlikely image of narcotics kingpin Lucien Rivard in falsies lightened a coroner's inquest Friday as Andre Durocher, Rivard's jail-break buddy, was found criminally responsible for the deaths of Andre Paquette and Alice Ritsou.

Immediately after the decision, Crown prosecutor Charles Cliche announced that Durocher would be arraigned on two charges of capital murder Monday.

The bodies of Laquette, 43, and Miss Ritsou, 28, were found last month in a shallow lime-filled grave near Piedmont, Que., near this community 40 miles north of Montreal. They disappeared more than a year ago.

Durocher also awaits sentence June 10 in Montreal for conviction of 30 armed robberies to which he has pleaded guilty.

Durocher, who broke out of St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary in suburban Montreal in March, 1965, with Rivard, described to the inquest Friday how Rivard managed to elude recapture for five months.

He said Rivard had posed as a woman wearing girdle, falsies and shoulder-length hair.

He adopted the name of Bebe and drove through police roadblocks decked out in a tailored grey two-piece lady's suit, white lacy blouse, brown wig and rhinestone-edged glasses.

Durocher said they were stopped three times and when he was one group of officers seemed to weeks earlier than Rivard, was being hard at them, Rivard put "her" arms around him and kissed him on the mouth. The officers let them pass.

Rivard's customes also included nylons and medium-heel shoes. He made up his face meticulously with lipstick and other cosmetics.

Rivard was deported to the United States after his capture and now is serving a 20-year sentence in Atlanta, Ga., for trafficking in narcotics.

Fulton Opposes Diverting Water to U.S. Ere Study

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—There should be no diversion of water outside Canada until a complete study has been made of this country's future needs, Davie Fulton said Friday.

In a speech to the Young Progressive Conservative Association, the Conservative MP for Kamloops said fast action in the field is needed if Canada is to avoid "a crisis situation" like that now facing the United States.

"The present government is open to real criticism on this score. It is quite apparent that they are not aware of the urgency of the problem, let alone seized of their responsibility to plan the proper action to be taken."

The United States is paying the penalty now for "poor management and lack of forethought over a prolonged period of time" concerning water management, Mr. Fulton said. There was widespread pollution of its water supply, "which could have been adequate to serve expanding needs of most areas."

Canada should learn from this and not be "stampeded into prematurely formulating a policy on water diversion" to the U.S.

The answer to Canada's growing water problem should be: . . . We will avoid making the fast buck to be made by selling for immediate cash and rather take the long view and conserve for the future. . . ."

Says Pill Worse Than A-Bomb In Its Effect on Population

QUEBEC (CP) — A population expert in the Quebec department of health said Friday that the birth - control pill may eventually cause population reductions worse than the effects of an atomic bomb.

Dr. Paul Parent was speaking to the Canadian Association of Public Health, holding a congress here on the decline of the birth rate in Canada and in Quebec province.

In Canada and the U.S. the population explosion which began after the Second World War has ended, he said.

In 1965, there were 250,000 fewer births in the U.S. than in 1964 and in Canada there were 34,000 fewer births in the same period, he said.

Dr. Parent said the fall in the birth rate had not been sudden. It began in 1960 in Quebec, in 1961 in Ontario and the western provinces, and in 1962 in the Maritimes.

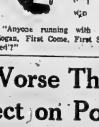
Dr. Parent said he believes the decline in the birth-rate is general and that it will continue.

He said there is a clear danger that the Canadian population will no longer multiply at an adequate rate.

Charges U.S. Is Shanghaiing Young Canadians for Draft

OTTAWA (CP) — Creditiste MP Raymond Langlois told the Commons Friday the United States draft is shanghaiing Canadian youths who cross the border on worker's visas.

Mr. Langlois (Megantic) said the government must do something about cases like that of a youth from Wolseley, Sask., recently sent to prison for two to five years and fined $10,000 for draft-dodging.



The youth worked in the U.S. for a few months under a visa, then returned to Canada immediately on getting a draft call.

He went back to the U.S. to visit a friend, was arrested at the border, charged and convicted.

The U.S. controlled everything of any value in Canada and "now it appeared it was going after our youth."

Mr. Langlois said he could understand drafting a Canadian who had worked in the U.S. for a year or more, but not one who had been there only a few months.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY,
Employer Relations Officer

Within the next three weeks examinations will be over, and many reasonably high school students, an estimated 800, will be seeking permanent employment. To make the most favourable impression during the personal interview with a prospective employer is of paramount importance. With this objective in mind, the following suggestions are made to those young people.

When an employer is considering hiring you, he is thinking only of your possible value to his business. He has to judge your value by your appearance, your general bearing and attitude, your qualifications and any previous work history and experience. Now, your appearance is the first impression an employer has of you. So, if you want to get your interview off to a good start, make sure your grooming, deportment and posture are the best you can make them. Neatly combed hair, well shined shoes, clean nails, well pressed clothes — these do many certain things. Girls should present the "business" rather than the "party" look, and go in lightly like a movie star at an "Oscar" award party. Wear a neat, quiet dress or costume, and appropriate accessories. Wear nylons and shoes with heels, not "fatties" or sandals. Go easy on make-up; a light touch is far more attractive.

Young men who go for an interview in T-shirts, jeans and sneakers, have a serious strike on them before they start. Wear a neat, quiet suit, or jacket and slacks, with a quiet shirt and a quiet tie. A "shave and a hair-cut" are necessary.

So much for appearance.

Your attitude will go far in making your job interview a success. Be keen for the situation, be conscious; be enthusiastic, and have confidence in your ability; be specific in your questions and answers; be alert all through the interview for if you only show signs of life when wages, benefits and vacations are mentioned, the impression on the employer will not be the one, you want. Speak carefully; sloppy grammar and poor diction could make the employer think that you are careless in your work habits.

Whether you are hired, or "put on file" can depend on how you answer the conditions for the job you are after. Be ready with the answers to questions about your background, work experience and extracurricular activities. Find out beforehand some basic facts about the firm. Be ready with a prompt and lucid reply if the employer who asks you: "Tell me something about yourself."

Finally, show your best side — smile.

STRONG DEMAND

There was a strong local labor demand during the past week. This was most noticeable in the construction field whose labor requirements represented 40 percent of the male job vacancies listed at the National Employment Office here. At mid-week, there was a scarcity of suitable construction labor, either skilled or unskilled. The demand for the female worker showed that 50 percent of the female employment were in the services field.

The following jobs are only a few of those now listed at the local National Employment Office.

In the female division locally, experienced sales women are required on either a part-time or full-time work. Required is a mature woman with an aptitude for sales work of a door-to-door nature.

There are numerous excellent job opportunities elsewhere in Canada. These cover office clerical positions and plant production work.

In the male division locally, a manufacturer of control panel equipment requires a sheet metal fabricator and a sheet metal cabinet experience.

Bearers were Gordon Grant, Gerald Haggerty, Len Reilly, Gerald Curry, Carl Grant and Jim Mondrusiak.

Mr. MacDonald died suddenly Wednesday, June 1st in Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 73rd year.

Born in Tiverton, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm MacDonald, he had lived in Western Canada before taking up residence in Frankford three years ago.

Survived by his wife, the former Evelyn Bayley, are two sons, Robert of Belleville and John of Toronto, and Mrs. Reece (Rosella) Dever, of British Columbia.

JOHN WILLIAM JOHNSTON

The funeral of John William Johnston of R.R. 1, Foxboro, was held Friday afternoon from the Grant Funeral Home to Belleville Cemetery. Rev. Roy Manthorpe officiated.

Bearers were Ronald Longwell, Thomas Bowers, Clifford Mattray, Glen Bradshaw, Clarence Shilvers and Edward Clark.

Order Airman Get New Trial

OTTAWA (CP) — The court martial appeal board has ordered a new trial for an airman convicted of non-capital murder and manslaughter in the strangling of his wife and two children last fall at Zweibrucken, West Germany, it was announced Friday.

The five judges decided that inadmissible evidence had been presented at the court martial of Leading Aircraftman Edward Zeisman, 28, of Emerson, Man., sentenced to life.

MONKEY MAN BURNS

CALCUTTA (AP) — An Indian folk dancer performing in a flaming monkey costume died to death Friday while 5,000 persons who thought it was all an act cheered and applauded. The dancer had set fire to the tail of his costume to give realism to his role as the monkey god, and the whole costume blazed.

Local Doctors Finish Course At Harvard

Two Belleville physicians are among 101 U.S. and Canadian doctors who today will complete an intensive five-day postgraduate course at the Harvard school of Harvard University in Boston, Mass.

Dr. R. Bruce Crook and Dr. James S. Loynes of this city have been enrolled in a postdoctoral course dealing with recent advances made in the field of cardiovascular disease.

Harvard Medical School instituted the graduate teaching program in 1972 to help practising physicians keep pace with the progress being made in various medical fields.

Group Home Parents Wanted

To assume full responsibility for the operation of a Society-owned home located in the City of Belleville, offering group living to approximately six teen-age girls. These will be local girls in attendance at city schools. The home will provide a family setting for which the Society will assume the cost of food, heat, light, etc. While the house mother will be a salaried employee of the Society, her husband, who will be expected to fulfil the responsibilities of the head of a home, may be gainfully employed elsewhere. Interested applicants should be between the ages of thirty and forty-five, enjoy good health, be secure in their personal and community relationships, and possess as a very minimum, secondary school education. Needless to say, they should be genuinely fond of young people and sympathetic to their problems. They will be expected to work as part of a team, take supervision and participate fully in staff training programs, complete with a maximum of two children will be considered.

The many advantages offered should make this position attractive to young professional people, for example; an elementary or secondary school teacher and his wife. The commencing salary (which includes full maintenance) will be dependent upon the academic qualification and/or experience, etc. of the applicants. Full staff benefits including medical, surgical, hospital care, group life insurance, OMERS pension plan, three weeks annual vacation will apply. Duties commence on or about the 1st of September, 1966.

No Room for Newcomers In Elite Business Group

OTTAWA (CP)—Are you an ambitious young executive who wants to break into Canada's elite business aristocracy?

Forget it, says Wilbur Brady, development officer at Carleton University. It's darn near impossible.

Mr. Roberts told the Canadian Public Relations Society's annual convention Friday aspirants to the elusive elite groups haven't a chance.

For one thing, he said, the top interlocked groups who control the country's wealth have inherited their positions and take only a few newcomers each generation.

Their personal wealth had been accumulated over several generations. They probably had been to one of three private schools and to one of five universities in Canada.

Aside from the office or home, they divided their time between their clubs, hotel dining rooms and semi - public meeting - places.

Their offices were determined by their type of occupation.

Financial executives' most luxurious offices would be occupied by financial businessmen. They would occupy large, widely scattered furniture, subdued color schemes and indirect lighting. Most would have air - conditioning, heavy draperies and soundproofing.

There is always a waiting room, and of course, pictures are shown, save for a portrait of the corporation founder, Mr. Roberts said.

"These men are the nucleus that has supreme authority in activating power and influencing leaders in the country."

Directly under the elite group is what Mr. Roberts calls the Tycoodinags-Thurlow township line.

Jeffrey was taken to Kingston General Hospital by City Ambulance and was declared dead-on-arrival there.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Jeffery of Cobourg and brother of Kenneth Jeffery, Ottawa.

He is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home for service in the chapel Tuesday at 3 p.m., with interment in White's Cemetery. Rev. Roy Vesney will officiate.

Harold Everett Jeffery Killed Near Shannonville

A young Belleville area man was killed early this morning when the car he was driving went out of control on a 5-curves just west of Shannonville and struck a hydro pole.

Dead is Harold Everett Jeffery, 23, of R. R. 6, Belleville. He was alone in the car at the time of the accident, proceeding west. The car left the road, going into the north ditch and hitting the hydro pole.

The accident occurred at 1.15 a.m. within 100 feet of the

Billy Graham Prepares For Two TV Appearances

LONDON (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham prepared today for the largest audiences of his ministry when he was to address eight appearances on television.

Graham will be interviewed by David Frost on the BBC program Meeting Point, a weekly discussion of religious and secular opinion.

Later Graham goes on the commercial network's Eamonn Andrews show, in recent months a centre of controversy over whether God should or should be said before the camera.

Before the television appearances, Graham has another packed meeting tonight at the Earls Court Arena, where he hopes to draw a capacity audience of 19,000.

At the arena Friday night, Graham said that sin could affect the mind.

He pointed to Britain's sensational moors murders, in which a man and woman were found guilty of killing 4 youth and two children.

With 17,000 listening he asked:

"What could cause people to act with such savagery and sadistic brutality?

"Or what compelves over and over again: What is the basic cause of this?

"The answer is to be found in the basic nature of man himself."

He added:

"You can have a good time going on living it up.

"Go ahead with your sex and drunkenness. It can be exciting.

"But remember—the day of reckoning comes."

The crusade organization said the sermon brought forward 484 "decisions for Christ" — bringing the total to 1,665 since the crusade began June 1.

School Training Inadequate For Homemaking Is Claim

TORONTO (CP) — School training in the day-to-day economics of running a home is inadequate, the Consumers' Association of Canada says in a report released this week.

The report, based on a nation-wide survey of high school girls, college heads and directors of home economics programs in 8 cities urged teaching in the field of consumer education be started at "9-11 knowledge which may, in any way contribute toward making the consumer's wise buyer and intelligent user of all goods and services and a prudent manager of his financial resources."

The report says consumers must understand the principles underlying the use of credit in order to keep a proper balance between debt and payments.

Recommendations follow that the study suggest that basic economic studies be started in elementary schools and other courses be worked into the secondary school programs. Such courses should also be part of adult education.

The report notes that the basic course should reach boys and girls before the heaviest drop - out period. It proposed that the curriculum include money management; laws dealing with instalment buying, mail orders, mortgages, and borrowing; laws dealing with food, drugs, weights and measures; and sources of information.

IN MEMORIAM

BUSH — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Frederick Bush, who passed away June 5, 1961.
Sweet memories are all I have left.
Inserted

BUSH — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Frederick Walter Bush, who passed away June 4, 1962.
Gone, but not a little space.
Left by those who loved his face.
But it would take the vast of our sorrow
To forget the day we lost you.
Sadly missed by daughter, son-in-law, son and grandchildren.

BAKER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Frederick Walter Baker, who passed away June 4, 1963.
Sad is the hour, our hearts are filled with pain,
And our hearts are filled with tears,
We miss you more as each day passes,
Three years have swiftly flown since you left us,
But still we don't forget,
For memory keeps you loved you never forget.
Your memory lingers yet.
—Lovingly remembered by son, Winston, daughter-in-law Mary, grandchildren Kathy and Heather.

BAKER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Walter Baker, who passed away 3 years ago, June 4, 1963.
Three years have passed since sorrow broke the heaviest grief of all,
Three years have passed since we watched you fade away,
Three years have passed since goodbyes, You fought so hard to stay,
You prayed to live, your family to be near you,
But God took you from us back, Dad, to be with Him for ever.
—Gone but not forgotten by daughter Mrs. Lorraine Mr. Mc-Ilson and grandchildren Kenny, Jeffrey and Lisa.

Economic Council Will Give Report

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada is expected to spell out economic and hopes to circulate its 1967 report by the middle of centennial year, according to a council source.

The council now is making a two-pronged study looking out its third annual review of the nation's economy for publication by the end of this year, and its fourth annual review to be published by the middle of next year.

This is an effort, officials say, to meet businessmen's requests for the council's views on the economic outlook be made public well in advance for the benefit of those planning businesses have to do for the year ahead. Most of them draw up their budgets and make plans in the autumn of one year for the next year ahead.

The council also is looking farther into the future than it has in its past reports.

RESTRICTED GROWTH

Its first annual review, published at mid-January, 1965, surveyed the economic goals Canada had set and reviewed the progress of the economy under the first 2½ years of the current Liberal regime. The second annual emphasis to a study of the impact of price, wage, employment, and other economic factors on the economy as a whole.

The fourth annual review, due this year, is expected to have a chapter on the effects of the pressures in little more than a year from now will start looking towards the next five years, from 1970 to 1975. Initially this will be a study of production potential.

The council, under the chairmanship of Dr. John J. Deutsch, former economist in the government services and professor of economics at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., was established as an independent advisory body consisting of representatives of various sectors of the economy, including management, labor, consumers, farmers, and the like.

Its job is to study the longer-term trends in the economy likely to face and recommend policies over a broader field than is normally covered by day - to - day government planning.

Officials say the council's reviews, at first looked upon with some suspicion by the business community as perhaps an effort at state planning in a socialistic sense, have been widely accepted as a basis for corporate planning.

Appointment of Kenneth G. MacLuckie as district manager for Bank of Montreal branches in the Belleville-Peterborough-Orillia area has been announced by Edward A. Royce, general manager for Ontario, in Toronto.

Mr. MacLuckie was formerly manager at the main Sault Ste. Marie branch.

Mr. MacLuckie, who will operate from a headquarters to be established in this area, is one of five new district managers under the direction of John B. Crawford, regional assistant general manager for branches in eastern, northern and northwestern Ontario.

Sukarno Balks At Peace Pact With Malaysia

JAKARTA (Reuters)—Hopes for a quick end to the three-year confrontation between Indonesia and Malaysia hit a snag Friday.

Indonesian President Sukarno, who started a "crush Malaysia" policy after Malaysia was formed in 1963, was apparently withholding his approval from Thursday's proposals for peace between the two countries.

MONTREAL (CP)—Two events were crashed together and then put out in Montreal City port area early today in a new outbreak of violence in the province's 27-day strike of longshoremen.

The Quebec City longshoremen who settled a court injunction a second time and refused to let firemen fight the blaze.

It was another fiery steel bar fought briefly with a Quebec City policeman near the burning dock area before the port area but was pulled back by his friends.

It was all ended by the longshoremen kept firemen out of the dock area for two hours late Friday night before allowing them to fight a blaze that destroyed two cars and a shipping pole.

HEADS HEALTH GROUPS

QUEBEC (CP)— Dr. Leonard Miller, deputy minister of health for Newfoundland, was elected president of the Canadian Association of Public Health Friday at the association's annual congress here. The association declared that existing patent medicine laws present dangers to the public. In a resolution, the association said the law tends to encourage self-medication and prevents doctors and pharmacists from judging the value of patent medicines.

Town Guilty Of Trespass In Opening Road

Ontario Supreme Court Justice Landreville has found against the town of Trenton in a trespass action brought by the R. W. Pyware and Son Ltd., and the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Company (Canada) Ltd.

In his verdict Mr. Justice Landreville awarded the plaintiffs damages amounting to $1,133.08 together with costs of the action.

In the court action the Trenton coal company claimed the Town of Trenton in 1964 had trespassed on the company's property in its decision to "open" a road allowance which the town claimed had never been officially closed. The road allowance had been used by the coal company for a number of years.

By re-opening the road, the town in effect opened the road to traffic but closed the coal company's easy egress onto the road.

In his verdict summary Mr. Justice Landreville was critical of the action of Trenton municipal officials. The action was heard in Belleville commencing May 11th with the decision being given May 30th.

OSD Open House Is Staged

The Ontario School for the Deaf held open house yesterday afternoon and evening and the invitation was answered by hundreds of guests who saw several different phases of student activities at the school.

Visitors saw students in classes and parents were able to follow their children throughout an afternoon. In the Junior School there was a rhythm demonstration by Mr. Angus McLeod and several audio-visual demonstrations.

The Advanced school went through its regular Friday afternoon timetable so that spectators saw the instruction was normally carried out.

Tours of the Boys' Vocational School were marked by displays of projects completed by students in the several shops.

In the auditorium of the Advanced School Mr. K. Graham gave a rhythm demonstration with classes from both the junior and advanced schools. A fashion show involving every girl in the Sewing Classes was next on the program under the supervision of Mrs. M. Vincent.

The evening program involved a gymnastic display of tumbling, apparatus, general activities, and folk dancing.

HAIR STYLING was an important part of the preparation for the visitors' day fashion show at OSD yesterday. Mrs. G. Lewis directed this phase of the show and here a model receives the finishing touches.

FASHION SHOW PREPARATION — Each girl in OSD's senior sewing classes modelled one of her projects in a fashion show at yesterday's open house. Mrs. M. Vincent, senior sewing teacher, supervised these last minute arrangements.

Space Success

With its successful first-attempt landing of Surveyor 1 on the moon, the United States has not only caught up with the Soviet Union in this sphere of space research, but is now probably ahead in the race to place a manned vehicle on the moon.

For one thing, the Russians made four unsuccessful attempts before placing its Luna 9 vehicle on the moon. Moreover the Soviet craft — a 200-pound shock-resistant ball containing a camera — is believed to have been ejected several hundred feet above the surface from a carrier vehicle. U.S. scientists say its impact would probably have killed a man.

Surveyor 1 on the other hand was equipped with retro-rockets enabling the entire 600-pound bedstead-like vehicle to land as scheduled on something like walking pace. Shock absorbers on the vehicle itself provided further cushioning.

The result has been what Dr. William Pickering, New Zealand-born director of the U.S. Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena describes as "the first time a truly soft landing has been made on the moon."

Much remains to be done however. It is one thing to place such a vehicle on the moon, but quite another to send a manned craft to the lunar service and bring it back again. However, the space race is quickening and it is clear that the world is on the threshold of great events in the realm of space exploration.

Another Security Issue

With the Munsinger probe barely over and Mr. Justice Spence's report pending, the House of Commons has launched into yet another security debate which is still lacking.

And in this affair, as in the case of Mrs. Gerda Munsinger the public is likely to remain in the dark unless someone like Eric Nielsen comes up with inside information that might make another inquiry necessary.

It concerns Arthur Vachon, president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association, who was fired from the QPF last month. Both Justice Minister Wagner and Premier Lesage have stated Vachon left "security risk."

"Vachon is a risk to the security of the state and the RCMP has a file on him," Premier Lesage said in a provincial election campaign speech in Drummondville the other day.

Questioning by Opposition leader John Diefenbaker and other spokesmen in the House of Commons seeking an explanation of the issue and alleging in effect that Mr. Vachon was being used as a political football in the current election, drew a non-committal reply from Prime Minister Pearson.

Specifically, Mr. Diefenbaker had asked to know the circumstances under which RCMP reports (about Mr. Vachon) came into the possession of the Quebec government, and Mr. Pearson replied in part: "It is essential for the enforcement of law and the maintenance of order and national security that there can be an exchange of information when deemed necessary between law enforcement agencies in Canada."

The prime minister's reply, of course, left unanswered the question of timing — whether the information came into the hands of the Quebec government at a time advantageous to itself in view of the election campaign then under way and which concludes with tomorrow's vote.

In effect, all we know is that Vachon has been fired from the provincial police and according to Premier Lesage is a "security risk." In the absence of information to prove it, this leaves Vachon generally in the same invidious position as the late George Victor Spencer, the Vancouver postal clerk who was said to have spied for the Russians.

Canadiana

Next year's Expo 67 exhibition and Centennial celebrations in Canada will focus attention not only on the achievements of this day and age, but also on those of earlier, pioneering times.

Upper Canada Village, between Morrisburg and Cornwall, is probably the finest example of Canadiana to be found. The village and its relics, assembled at the time of the building of the St. Lawrence Seaway, when many older homesteads had to be moved inland to escape flooding, is a living museum. Since its opening exactly five years ago it has attracted thousands of visitors.

Now other such projects reflecting Canada's heritage are springing up. One is Westfield Pioneer Village near Rocton, in the' Hamilton area. The village, which is gradually expanding into a farm museum, has just acquired an Oliver plow made in 1870 and used by a Mitchell district Mennonite farmer until two years ago.

Both Upper Canada, which flanks another interesting memorial of the last century and the war of 1812 — Crysler Battlefield Farm — and Westfield remind us of a past that is peculiarly Canadian. They remind us of courage and determination and family stability which in some degree are lacking today because of the artificialities of this modern age.

South Africa Imposes Ban

Vancouver Sun

South Africa's clumsy attempt to discredit the visit of Senator Robert Kennedy is certain to backfire. After failing to dissuade the senator from coming to South Africa, the government has put a five-year ban on the president of the National Union of South African Students, which issued the invitation.

Capetown law student Brian Robertson will be forbidden to leave the city, enter the university except for lectures or take part in any further student activities. Anti-Communist legislation was used to enforce the vicious ban.

The clear intent is to intimidate the student group which for years has defied Dr. Verwoerd's attempt to divide white and black students. The banning has brought protest demonstrations in all the English universities in South Africa.

The arrival of the tousled young senator bearing the magic Kennedy name will undoubtedly heighten the unrest, especially since the occasion of his address is Academic Freedom Day in Capetown. Bobby Kennedy is rapidly becoming a symbol of the aspirations of the young people around the world. Journeys such as this one — and his earlier visit to South America and Asia—give him valuable strength in his bid to corner the liberal support in the United States which Robert Humphrey is leading.

The action of the Verwoerd government in lashing out at a courageous student will only serve to draw more world attention to the senator's visit.

Prairies Eye U.S. Capital

Winnipeg Tribune

In his speech to the Canadian Club here last week Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher gave a frank answer to Walter Gordon, Mitchell Sharp and other economic nationalists in Ottawa.

Mr. Thatcher said, "If the Prairies are to expand and develop industrially — if they are to catch up with Central Canada — we require large amounts of new capital. Where shall we find these much needed funds? Of course most of us would like to find new capital on the domestic market.

"But the hard facts of life make it crystal clear that in a new developing country like Canada, adequate funds are simply not available. The people want good jobs, in new mines and industries. If, for the moments, foreign ownership is necessary to obtain these projects, I think few will object.

"There are some in Canada who are hostile to additional American investment. On this subject, I believe too many of our citizens are still below the old myths.

"For almost 100 years, there have been people in Canada who have considered the 49th parallel an economic abomination. At one time they feared military domination. In more recent times they have feared economic domination. Nevertheless it is obvious that after a century of such talk, the United States has no design upon us, either political or military."

Many Canadians on the prairies share the view expressed by the premier of Saskatchewan.

Highway Slaughter

Brantford Expositor

For some 320 Americans who took to the road last Memorial Day weekend it was the end of all their weekends. As usual the slaughter had been fairly accurately predicted, and as usual there had been the advance warning to drive with care. It is much the same story on holiday weekends in Canada.

One new, if macabre, feature that caught the eye in a U.S. newspaper was an oil company's advertisement headed "Please don't get killed this Sunday. We'd like to sell you gas on Monday." It made the point that though we all have to, and sometime, we don't have to die in our cars. There was sometime about unfit cars and tired and unfit drivers. "In one story, more than half the drivers who were killed had been drinking and there are more fatal accidents after midnight Saturday than at any other time." Weekends are "murder." it added, and we must agree.

To Your Good Health

Good Reason to Keep Child Quiet When Ill

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My grandson recently came down with whooping cough and I advised my daughter-in-law to keep him inside a dark room because some children's diseases can affect the heart and eyes.

Of course I am old-fashioned. Am I wrong in reminding a young mother of the dangers of children's diseases?—Mrs. J.M.

There's nothing old-fashioned about health protection. You are not wrong in advising that a child with an infectious disease be kept in and kept quiet. For one thing, it prevents spreading the disease.

There are other reasons, too, particularly relating to measles and mumps. The darkened room is for measles. The disease does not affect the eyes in a damaging sense, but it causes photophobia—abnormal sensitiveness to light. Subdued light (it does not need to be a totally dark room) is more comfortable.

A more serious matter is the possibility of encephalitis or other complications from measles. Keeping the child quietly in bed lets him muster his physical resources to throw off the infection and avoid complications which can be extremely serious and even cause death.

Now that effective measles vaccine is available, this disease and its dangerous complications can be prevented — if parents will see that their children have this vaccination.

With mumps, keeping a child quiet and in bed for a week is the same reason: To prevent complications, which are most likely to affect the ovaries, testicles and pancreas.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is valley fever caused by allergy? Is it a mental disorder? — V. G.

Valley fever (or San Joaquin Fever) is caused by a highly infectious fungus found naturally in the Southwestern United States and South America. It is not a mental disorder.

There are two major forms of the disease, primary, which involves the lung (the fungus is usually carried to death), and progressive, which can involve virtually every tissue in the body, including the bones.

The primary form usually is not serious; the progressive is a form is. For whatever reason, the disease is most common on the dry, alkaline, dark complexioned, and between the ages of 20 and 50.

Dear Dr. Molner: When a woman has a Pap smear and it shows no sign of cancer, does that mean she doesn't have cancer anywhere in her body? — Mrs. F. R.

No. It just means no cancer cells are present where the smear was taken. (The same type is being used to see whether abnormal cells are present in the system when lung X-rays are suspicious.)

Note to Mrs. C. H.: There are many types and strains of Salmonella germ, which is notorious for causing diarrhea, "food poisoning," and similar unpleasantnesses. Not knowing more of the case, I cannot answer all of your questions. However, in treatment, it is quite common to give repeated courses of antibiotics interrupted by periods of no medication.

Ottawa Offbeat

Doing Time on Parliament Hill Worse Than Siberia

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Tradition has it that the RCMP reserves its Parliament Hill beat for two quite special purposes:

1. As a punishment period for minor offenders against the Queen's Rules and Regulations doing their penance.

2. As a sort of preliminary proving ground for rookies in need of a crash course on the cares and handling of rubber-necks.

After two weeks on the Hill "Sorrow Squad," as they call it, the saving Mountie is prepared to return to the barracks, never to transgress again.

And more than ready to take a year on the Arctic Patrol out of Resolute rather than risk a return to the precincts of Parliament.

In summer they scorch in their Scanties under a copper sun, parboiling in the Capital's own sticky kind of humidity while standing there for those hundreds of daily souvenir photos.

And in winter, huddled down in their blue parkas, they stand against the winds that howl down from the Gatineau Hills and over the dazzling snows of Hull, they might just as well be in Resolute.

It was only some four or five years ago that the RCMP patrolled The Hill shorne.

The tradition would be trundled up from the Rockcliffe barracks in horse vans and spend the day moving all those barrel-bellied sports with the flowered shirts and big cigars.

Turned out the horses couldn't stand it and were put out to pasture again at Rockcliffe, leaving the Mounties to the pacing hordes of elderly - fingered kids and their slacks-splitting Moms alone.

While The Hill may be a mild punishment detail for troopers in need of a little discipline it is all new, interesting and perhaps even entertaining for the rookies.

Here they learn fast what a Parliamentary lobbyist is and spells go to make up the public.

They get to meet the pickets, the fringe-of-all-green protesters, the petitioners, the cranks, the crusaders and the crackpots representing from all corners of the country.

And they get to know the hoary-green oddballs.

Such as the "Senators" who work on the Commons chair and washing unit.

Up to the Senate door of Parliament every morning at 6:30 comes Bill a long black Cadillac driven by a young man in a navy blue suit and a chauffeur's cap.

If there is a new Mountie on patrol and he approaches the illegally parked Caddy to tell the owner for whom it might be waiting, he is told "Senator Gilchrist."

He is a man who also comes on a man in soiled dungarees and is properly ushered by the attendant driver into the limousine which continues waiting.

Approaching again and asking the driver for the driver as he was waiting, the rookie this time is informed "Senator Demers."

And out comes a second man, also in dirty dungarees, and gets into the car with the chauffeur standing at attention at the door and saluting "The Chateau Laurier, Senator."

With the answer, "No, Michael, the old Union Jack (as a client inn of Bytown vint a go) will do quite nicely, thank you."

Away they roll, the Mountie wondering why a couple of Senators, in their sun, should be clad in barnyard-blue coveralls and be off to a well-known Upper Town watering hole.

Later he learns that the two "Senators" are House of Commons cleaning staff members and Donzie Gilchrist, father of "chauffeur" Michael.

There are only two Cadillacs officials Privy

One is owned by Fort William Liberal MP Robert Badanai, the largest GM dealer between Toronto and Winnipeg.

The other is a well and lovingly-preserved 1961 model — still so impressively luxuriant that Ottawa Conservative MP Jack Pickersson — is the property of Commons Speaker Donald Gilchrist.

So how does the rookie Mountie that kind of "Caddy Money" by standing and stopping those miles of marbled Commons cadillacs?

He doesn't.

But he does haul in the kind of loot it takes for a Cadillac with his Parliamentary moonlighting with CBC as a clog and stepdancer on the Don Messer Show; Conservative MP Jack Jamboree, Carnival in Quebec and other folk and western programs.

The address was signed by Miss Edna Wallace, Mrs. Alex. Ray, Miss M. T. Stork, R. J. F. Stalker Town Clerk, H. LaVoie and Stephen Burrows.

New Morality In Spotlight

Ottawa Journal

The "new morality" or "situational ethics" — these slogans of the modern enlightment — do not look either so new or so ethical after Bishop E. S. Woods forthright discussion of their challenge to the traditional concepts of moral law.

Bishop Reed's charge to the Synod meeting of the Ottawa Anglican Diocese is not only an instructive message to members of his own church, but to all who may be disturbed by or influenced by the sophisticated plausibility of the arguments in favor of a kind of do-it-yourself morality.

At a time when some philosophers seem to be teaching that adherence to a moral code is a mere sterile legalism, it is reassuring to have Bishop Reed say, without qualification, that "personal relations outside of marriage are wrong."

The advocates of the "new morality" are certainly not hedonists. They are right in saying that there has been too much mere legalistic following the letter of moral laws. But because laws have been sometimes too narrowly interpreted does not mean that there are no laws to be observed and that we can take it on himself to decide when he will obey what laws.

The world has seen the tragic consequences of men putting themselves above moral law. When men play at being gods, they make a hell.

Eastview May Be "Laurier"

Hamilton Spectator

The Mayor of Eastview, a city enclosed by Ottawa's east end, thinks it would be a good idea if it were renamed Laurier in honor of one of Canada's great statesmen. He's right, if is a good idea.

It's amazing, but Canada has no cities of substantial size except Vancouver named after any of its historic figures. There is no Champlain, no Cabot, no Wolfe, no Montcalm, no Macdonald, no Laurier, no King, no Meighen, and no Borden.

R. B. Bennett had a buggy named after him, but nothing else. And even the buggy's now a part of history.

In the United States, how different things are. There's not only a Washington city, but a city in Nebraska is named Lincoln. There's also a Cleveland, a Jackson, a Jefferson City, and so many Kennedy and cartographers don't know what to do.

A fine Centennial project, as a matter of fact, might be the renaming of some communities. After all, if old Berlin, Ontario, could become Kitchener, and if Coal Banks, Alberta, could turn into Lethbridge, why shouldn't some cities circa 1966, willingly agree to turning into a Laurier, a Macdonald or a McGregor, July 1, 1967.

How about that Medicine Hat?

Rhodesian Situation

Letter to Ottawa Journal

Having recently returned from Salisbury, Rhodesia, I was interested to read Mr. Diefenbaker's topical prime minister criticizing Ian Smith and his gallant countrymen for their peaceful, and very friendly country. Perhaps Canada needs sanctions against itself in order to unite its separate native industries, and to become independent — or perhaps Mr. Diefenbaker is UDI of her own, and we can start sanctions against Quebec.

Canada should bar our house in order stopping the strikes, seal-slaughter, influx of Communists, racial and security scandals, and the parliamentary circus which make Canada a source of ridicule and criticism.

Why did not our brilliant politicians go to Rhodesia instead of stopping at Zambia? Why are they siding and abetting communism while Mr. Ian Smith bravely stands up against red, white, and black communism.

Richard Whitney,
Ottawa.

Readers' Saturday Column

LETTER:

I thought I would enclose some recipes for you, which my family enjoys very much. I enjoy your column very much.

Mrs. Harold H. W.

GINGER JUMBOS (big puffy gingerbread, soft, light and spicy) (courtesy Mrs. Harold H. W.):

2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking soda, ½ to 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup (¼ lb.) butter or 1/3 cup white sugar, 2/3 cup molasses, 1 large egg, ½ cup milk, 1½ teaspoons vinegar, walnut halves (for topping).

Measure sifted flour, soda, cinnamon, ginger and salt into sifter on wax paper. Cream margarine with sugar until fluffy in large bowl. Beat in molasses and egg. Combine milk and vinegar in a 1-cup measure. Sift dry ingredients, adding alternately with milk mixture, a third at a time, into molasses mixture, blending well after each. Batter is thin. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheets. Top each with a walnut half. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 8 minutes, or until centres spring back when lightly touched. Let stand 5 minutes before removing to wire racks. Makes about 2 dozen.

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon ground cloves, 1 cup (½ lb.) margarine, 1½ cups firmly packed brown sugar, 2 large eggs, 2 tablespoons milk, 1½ cups raisins.

Measure sifted flour, soda, nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves into sifter on wax paper. Cream butter or margarine with brown sugar until fluffy in large bowl; beat in eggs until well mixed and blended. Add in dry ingredients, one-third at a time, blending well to make a thick batter. Stir in raisins. Spread evenly in lightly greased jelly-roll pan, 15 x 10 x 1" or 11 x 7½ x 1½". Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 20 to 30 minutes, or until browned around edges and top springs back when lightly pressed with fingertips. Cool in pan on wire rack. Cut into bars on squares.

These are perfect, too, as a dessert topped with sweetened whipped cream or ice cream. They save time on busy days for they take no fancy shaping.

ANSWER:

We tried both and enjoyed them too. Thank you.

Bridesmaids' Original Job Was to Stop Theft of Bride By Groom and His Friends

By MARGARET NESS

TORONTO (CP) — Bridesmaids today add color to the wedding ceremony but that is their only function. There was a time when they played a more significant role.

In the old days when most men worked on the land, girls worked in the fields and were of economic value to their fathers. Parents weren't anxious to get free help get married and leave the farm.

The tradition then was for the groom to "steal" the bride. And the job of bridesmaids was to try to prevent this from happening.

Later, when custom decreed that girls worked only in the home and there were extra mouths to feed for little practical return, fathers were glad to pay a dowry to young men willing to take daughters off their hands. But it was still traditional to pretend the groom was carrying off his bride against their will and that of her parents.

Her best friends pretended, in spirited playfulness, to try to save her from the groom. The groom often bribed the bride's friends to let him through their ranks without too much interference. This custom is still observed, indirectly, today in the form of gifts by the groom to the bridesmaids.

RULES NOT RIGID

There are no set rules about what bridesmaids should wear at weddings. Only at the more formal ceremonies do their dresses need to be floor-length. Often bride and bridesmaids wear the same fabric for both brides and attendants.

The bridesmaids' costumes should complement the bridal gown in style and color. Should there be any conflict among the girls, the bride's wishes should prevail. Color schemes vary. Sometimes the whole bridal party, except for the white bride, is in one color. Often, if there are several bridesmaids, two or more harmonizing colors may be introduced.

If a really young sister of the bride is to be included among the bridesmaids, she too should conform to the style and colors chosen for the other attendants.

Canadian designer Elen Henderson has created several of these young brides maids' gowns. One, shown in a fashion show at Yorkdale Shopping Centre in Toronto, was floor-length pink chiffon over rose silk, with white lace banding the floor hemline and the short sleeves. A high - placed rose velvet sash and hair bows completed the costume.

For the older bridesmaids, Priscilla of Boston favors voile this spring. She included several gowns in Gayley and Lowly Swiss voile. A Victorian green voile over cancelle taffeta was accented by a wide leghorn hat with pink velvet ribbons. A high - waisted gown with bishop sleeves was in a clover-pink plaid voile. And another was in shocking pink, with a sash of green velvet.

Other spring - summer fabrics for the attendants include a pink linen gown with a capelet, to accompany a bride in vanilla linen with panelled front in Swiss organdy, and a raspberry - colored cotton studded in a moulded princess silhouette, with an illusion veil headpiece that could also be worn as a stole, to accompany a more formal summer bride in organdy.

Priscilla of Boston liked large tulle mulls, with rosebud detail, for attendants wearing these illusion headpieces. She also introduced fans, a lace fan to be carried by the bride and colored fans, with flowers added, for the bridesmaids. Most of her attendants in her showing in New York were kid ballet slippers.

Ann Landers
Hubbie's Mean Remark Made Her Fighting Mad

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married a man who took his sweet time about proposing because he always thought it was too young for him. Now I am and look every day of it, thanks to his rotten temper. Every dirty, mean thing that he has ever said to me has left its mark on my face.

Since you are so good with answers. What's your answer to this?

Yesterday my husband was driving me to the dentist. As I got out of the car he said, "Don't let the dentist sell you his most expensive work, Ethel. You're getting up in years and there's no sense putting a fortune into your mouth to lay around in the cemetery."

ANN LANDERS

I was so mad I couldn't speak. What should I have said?

MRS. MAD.

DEAR MRS.: You should have told him you plan to be living around in that cemetery a long time and you are going to get the most expensive work available because you want it to hold up.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our next door neighbor is a nice woman in her 70's.

Last week her brother became ill and she left for the coast very suddenly. She gave the key to her home to a 21-year-old grandson and asked him to keep an eye on her house.

We know for a fact that the boy has been using his grandmother's home for sex-purposes. The boy and his girl friend have been in the house four times since Monday. Last night the boy drove up at 10:30 p.m. The girl arrived at 10:45 p.m. in her own car. The girl left at 3:15 a.m. and the boy left at 3:25 a.m.

I am willing to spend the money on a long-distance telephone call if you advise phoning the grandmother. — CONCERNED.

DEAR CONCERNED: I do hope the grandmother returns soon so you folks can get some sleep.

The next time you see the boy enter the house, knock on the door and tell him you wanted to make sure it was a relative and not an intruder. He will then know you are hip.

Drop it there. If the woman has asked you to keep an eye on her place, you would be expected to report to her! Since she gave the key to her grandson, she placed — her I should say, she misplaced — her trust in him.

DEAR ANN: Recently a man in our office was hospitalized. I'm one of those nincompoops who has more heart than brains. I sent him a large bouquet of flowers out of pure friendship but it was misunderstood.

Since the man returned to work he has been very cool. We are both married and I wonder now if perhaps his wife objected. (My husband didn't. I asked him.)

Should I tell him I'm sorry if the flowers embarrassed him — or should I skip it? — DUMB ME.

DEAR YOU: It would have been better of course, if you had sent flowers to the group (eyesaver, too.)

Anything you say now would seem defensive and raise his eyebrows another inch — so skip it.

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

A CZECHOSLOVAKIAN CHAT

"To observe, to see and to discover, these are grand and rewarding things . . ." — Karel Capek, 1923.

* * *

"I loved every minute of our visit," says Ellen Smith, 6 Strathcona Drive, who accompanied her husband to Czechoslovakia where he, Mr. Bernard C. Smith read an invitation paper as a symposium on ophthalophagnosa. The symposium was sponsored by the Czechoslovakian Academy of Science, and held near Prague in September, 1965.

"While Mr. Smith was busily engaged, their Czechoslovakian hosts, upon learning of Ellen's deep interest in education (having taught prior to her marriage) provided permission for her, with an interpreter, to visit various Prague schools, where she was graciously welcomed by students and teachers alike.

"While there are of course, nursery schools," she continues, "the basic type of school I was informed, is the nine-or ten-year school (comparable to our grade or elementary school) organized since the Secondary Schools. (These High Schools are really equipped!), and it is hoped by 1970 that all children will receive a complete Secondary Education as against the 85 percent that do so at this time.

"One school I visited was for children whose (both) parents are employed. There is a waiting list to join the 1400 students, who are taught by 125 teachers and 43 educators. Their homework is done at school before they go home.

"All schools serve a mid-day meal; all text-books are provided; and returned at the end of the term. All students, well-behaved, courteous, stand as a visitor enters and leaves their classroom.

"At a school for the deaf, (my name was written on the blackboard: "Smithova") and the children asked me questions through their interpreter and my interpreter about myself and Canada. There were about 25 students divided into 3 groups according to the degree of deafness. They had headsets and read lips as well as finger language.

"They were such dear children, as were those of a nursery school, ages three to six, and I shall always remember their eyes; they being orphans, crowded about us, hungry for signs of love and affection.

"It truly was a privilege to visit the schools of Prague, for which I am grateful, as each of us to explore the city itself. I close my eyes and again we are wandering, retracing our steps, the streets filled with ancient wonders and the quaint, colorful churches; watching the 12 Apostles come out of the Town Hall Clock as it strikes the hour be-fore a never failing crowd; walking on stone-pattemed sidewalks, sitting on colorful park benches of red and yellow; sipping whipped-cream-topped hot chocolate instead of coffee (the coffee is very strong) at Dairy Bar that supply cheese and milk; observing teenagers dressed exactly like the Beatles in London; going into fascinating shops (which open at 10 until one on Sundays); enjoying rides on street - cars, for motor - cars are few and the streets shorn of heavy traffic problems.

"Prague is a city of cinemas, theatres, museums (historical objects everywhere are well preserved, especially of the 14th century), music and operas. We attended Smetana's "The Bartered Bride", a vision of beauty in choreography, costume and of such music. Though sung in the Czech language we could follow the thread of the story easily.

"Yes, both my husband and I shall long remember the charm of Czechoslovakia."

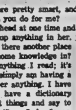
Gramps Is Advised To Concentrate Studies



DEAR DORIS: You are pretty smart, and as you seem to know everything, what can you do for me?

I am 74. I had a good head at one time and now I am having a heck of a time to load up anything in her.

She just won't open up. Is there another place in men's anatomy to put some knowledge in?

I cannot remember anything I read; it's just for the time being. I simply am having a heck of a time to remember anything. I have lots of reading matter. I have a dictionary handy. I look up different things and say to myself "This I must learn!" so I do. In an hour or less she is gone with the wind!

Is there such a thing as a smart doctor that can get to the bottom of it? — GRAND PA.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR GRAND PA: Are you scattering your fire? When you want to put some knowledge in, pick something akin to your most urgent, lifetime interest. You'll find that making agreeable connections will help memory. What's the good of a lot of miscellaneous facts, anyway?

One man of 70 who had never had time to travel, in spite of a great wanderlust, found fulfillment beyond his wildest dreams. From travelling? No! From seeing travelogues movies and reading geographic magazines.

He remembered every single place thus visited without bodging from his home town. And so could you. If your special bent is toward photography or cabinet making, try what you can do with a camera or a hammer and saw. Reinforced by a book or two.

DEAR DORIS: I am 30, but my husband will be 41 in December, and we are wondering if his age is likely to be a bar to adopting a child — also the fact that he was divorced?

If we do adopt, what qualifications are required of prospective parents? Also the acreage, how long do the formalities take? — LIVING IN HOPE.

DEAR HOPE: First and foremost, have you got a happy home to offer a child and plenty of love to give? This rates above a background of divorce, or husband's age, or worldly goods.

Each application receives individual appraisal, and the adoption home study will comprise several interviews. Waiting time varies with the supply of children — which, I am sorry to say at present, is decreased.

You don't have to be perfect. You do have to be healthy, normal, and steadily employed. And able to show proof of marriage.

DEAR DORIS: My daughter is planning to get married at 18. Her boy friend is 20 and unemployed, drinks a lot, and has no responsibility. He is likeable, but my daughter makes a small income and does not have good health. They both have a grade nine standing.

I am concerned over this and wish advice as to whether I should step in or leave it be. Do you see any future in this marriage? — ANXIOUS MOTHER.

DEAR ANXIOUS: Not if he is counting on you, or her, or public assistance to support them. I can see that first, bitter, disillusioning quarrel right now: probably two weeks after an alcohol-reinforced honeymoon. And the argument will be about money.

Don't forbid the marriage. This seldom works. Just make it clear that once a couple gets married they are on their own; and that this one will be no exception. Urge a postponement until they are in a better state to shoulder responsibility.

Know Your Antiques

Silver candlesticks engraved with Biblical scenes and Hebrew inscriptions were purchased in England in 1962. These rare religious antiques were made in Danzig about 1680.

Collectors Sometimes Miss Religious Aspect of Antique

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Religious antiques are always important to churches, temples, and private collectors. Occasionally a collector will purchase a fine piece of silver or porcelain and be completely unfamiliar with the religious significance of the object. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries Jewish families used a ceremonial spice box on the table. The silver box resembled a castle turret perched on a stand. Several of them have appeared in some shops as "hand warmers."

A beautiful pair of silver gilt candlesticks were found in England. They had been made in Danzig, about 1680. Each candlestick was decorated with scenes from the Bible and some Hebrew inscriptions. They must have been used as Sabbath candles in a seventeenth century Jewish household.

Q. What is a "morigage button?"

A. There was a tradition in the Eastern United States that has been attributed to the Quakers. After the mortgage on the house was paid, a round knob of whalesteeth ivory was secured to the stair railing as a newel post.

* * *

Q. When did G. Phillips make china? Mine is light blue with a castle, tree and lake on it.

A. Edward and George Phillips worked at Longport, England, from 1822 to 1834. George Phillips worked alone from 1834 to 1848.

Q. Why is "Holly Amber" so scarce?

A. "Holly Amber" is the new name for a glassware that was originally called "Golden Agate." It is an amber colored glass that was reheated to appear opalescent. It had a band of holly leaves as part of the pressed design.

The glass was made by the Indiana Tumbler and Goblet Company between 1904 and 1903, when the factory closed because of a fire. The same factory made chocolate glass. There were comparatively few pieces of Holly Amber made because the factory worked only a few years.

'Torture System' Currency Finally Coming to a Halt

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

LONDON — Ruffles and flourishes! There's good news at last from the Palace of Westminster. The chancellor of the Exchequer has told Commons that following the examples of Australia and New Zealand, Britain finally will go on the decimal system of currency.

It won't be done overnight; such things aren't, especially in Britain. And it will still be called the pound, but by 1971, the poor confused tourist will no longer require an illogical mind to convert dollars and cents to pounds, shillings, pence, and sense. (Of course, there's nothing less logical than our Anglo-Saxon system of measurements — 12 inches to the foot, 3 feet to the yard, 5,280 feet to the mile. But at least we're used to it.)

A veritable Alice-in-Wonderland quality has grown up over 8 centuries about British money. Half a shilling is not 5 pennies as you might expect, but sixpence. Thus 6 and 6 do not make 12, even though there are 12 pence to a shilling. They make 10, at least for the purpose of adding up a column of figures. Three pence ("thrrupence") is a quarter of a shilling, a "bob."

If you're adding a bill and it has 3 sixpences in the last line, you don't count them up and carry one. They total not 18 but a shilling and sixpence. You put down 6 and carry one.

Now, if you have 8 and 9 and 7 pence figures, it's not 24 but 2 shillings and 0 pence. You put down 0 and carry two.

FOLLOW?

When you have 8, and 7 pence total 15 pence, or exactly 2 shillings. Put down a zero and carry 2. Put 4 and carry 2. But 8, 8, and sixpence total 25, 1 shilling and 11 pence. So you put down 11 and carry 1, not 2 and carry 2. Follow?

When you finally work your way over to the shillings column, you have to remember that 20 — not 10 — shillings make a pound. And you carry 1 pound, so you deduct each multiple of 20 from your total and carry 1 for each 20 (or pounds column, putting down in the shilling column the odd number of shillings under 20 left over. Thus if you get 67 shillings, you don't put down 7 and carry 6, but put down 7 and carry 3 (for the 60 shillings, or 3 pounds).

You think modern math is tough? It has nothing on the torture devised by this ancient math.

If that bill were a restaurant check and you wanted to figure how to tip 10 percent, you've really got your work cut out for you. Quick now, what's 10 percent of 3 pounds 14 shillings and sixpence?

The simplest way is to convert everything to the most common denominator — shillings. With 20 shillings to the pound, the above bill toals just under 75 shillings, 10 percent of which would be 7½ shillings, or 7 shillings and sixpence (remember, sixpence is half a shilling).

Or stick out a fistful of currency and tell the waiter to take what's coming to him.

After all these mental gymnastics, it may occur to you to wonder how much money there is dollars, though you may be too tired to figure it out.

Knowing that a pound is about $2.80 isn't too much help because all those additional shillings cloud the picture. Of course, you can, again, convert to shillings and multiply by 56 (if a pound is $2.80 and there are 20 shillings — not 10 — to the pound, a shilling is worth 14 cents, or $2.80, or 56 cents) when was the last time you practised your 14-times table?

The pound is nicknamed quid, but never in the plural like our bucks. Shillings are bob. A two-shilling coin has "florin" engraved on it, but no one ever calls it that.

On the other hand, fancy shops and professional men quote charges in guineas, even though there is no such denomination. It's kind of a snob term, handy for packing the bill because it means a pound and 1 shilling. The best thing about the guinea is that it's a handy term for North Americans, because it's almost exactly 3 dollars.

There's also a half crown (2½ shillings)" coin, but no crown. How can you have half of something that doesn't exist?

The multiple styles of speaking or writing figures also go a long way towards not admitting the above situation in the slightest.

If you say "seven-and-six," you mean 7 shillings and sixpence. But seven-six (with out "and") is 7 pounds, 6 shillings.

Shillings in writing can be denoted either by a slant line, /) or the letter "s". Pence are abbreviated not by "p" but by "d." Denominations may be separated by either dashes, colons, or periods.

Sometimes signs are eliminated altogether, the salesman on the assumption that you know three figures must represent pounds, shillings and pence, or on the assumption that you can tell from the item whether it costs a few pounds-another-for-a-class or the shillings-and-pence class. And sometimes figures are left out, as in 5 shillings and pence, even when they total more than a pound.

Thus 1 pound, 5 shillings, may be written as £1.5.0, or £1-5-0, or £1.5/, or £1:5:0, or 35.s Od., or 20/- or 20 sh., or 35 shillings, among others. This is where the expression you pays-yer-money and you takes - yer - choice comes from.

The easiest way to get with all this, as with handling the currency of any country, is to think in the currency's own terms. The sixpence has about the standing of our nickel, almost enough for a newspaper or coffee cash, the solid - looking shilling is the handy all-purpose tipping coin for bellhops, porters, taxi drivers, and other minor service functionaries, almost as good as a quarter by the British standard of living. And the florin or half-crown will cover one person's lunch up. And so on.

But we can't wait until 1971.

Lines on Life

Have Churches Failed?

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Are we living in the post-Christian age? Have the churches and synagogues failed civilization?

Do churches, speaking as if they had power to change the world, keep missing the point? Do they provide only a frightened and absorbing concern for their own survival, instead of a grand commitment for mankind?

When they speak of brotherhood, when brothers do they have in mind?

Do the religious groups in our society offer the kind of friendship to those who are not of their own, without ulterior purposes?

These are questions which are relevant, urgent, immediate and crucial. The answers to these questions will determine, to a large extent, not only the future of religion in the twenty-first century and thereafter, but also the possibility of men to become human in an age of increasing callousness and indifference to humanity.

The history of organized religion can also be seen as a history of bloodshed and violence, of prejudice, delicate people have a right to wonder whether religion has not failed civilization. The Jew has a right to ask this question, the Negro has a right to ask this question and many others too numerous to name, who have been burned at the stake of religious zeal, still pose that haunting question from their numberless graves.

Does God need religion, if religious men act in an ungodly way?

Does God need a church or a synagogue and the power that such institutions which proclaim their own absolute sovereignty over all other peoples? God, it would rather seem, needs men who are human, not religious groups that are inhuman.

All of which is to suggest the most tremendous burden which rests upon those of us who are religious people. We have always thought that the true role of religion was to proclaim the truth, absolute truth, final truth — God's word spoken once and for all!

Perhaps the time has come when those who speak this way should speak with greater patience and with more penitent humiliation. Do we know it all? Have we kept the doors of our minds and hearts open to those who also may have heard God's word, but who have heard it differently.

Flindall - Baker

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD JAMES FLINDALL

Gloria Ila Diane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Baker of Belleville and Richard James Flindall, son of Mr. E. H. Flindall of R. R. 7, Belleville and the late Mrs. Flindall, were united in marriage by Rev. Harry Davis in Bridge Street United Church on Saturday, May 28, 1966, at 2:00 p.m. Mr. Alec Gordon played the wedding music and Miss Lillian Vincent was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white brocade gown enhanced by a fitted bodice, scoop neckline and sheath skirt. Appliques of lace and pearls enhanced the neckline and skirt and a detachable bouffant train flowed from the waistline. Her headdress was a pearl crown with a tiered scalloped veil and she carried a cascade bouquet of large white 'mums surrounded by smaller pink and white 'mums and ivy.

Mrs. Susan Way, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and Miss Wanda Baker, sister of the bride, and Miss Brenda Wynne, were bridesmaids. They were floor length dresses of pink peau de soie with Empire waistlines, lace bodices and sleeves. Their headpieces were rose crowns with scalloped tulle veils.

The flower-girl, Miss Shirley Flindall, sister of the bridegroom, was similar to the other attendants.

Mr. Ron Hotchkiss was the bridegroom's attendant and ushers were Mr. Gary Baker, brother of the bride, and Mr. Bob Elliot.

At the reception held at the Tops Motor Motel, Mr. Ray Bradshaw was master of ceremonies. The bride's mother received the guests, wearing an ice blue silk sheath dress with blue and white accessories and a corsage of coral carnations. For her daughter's wedding, for accent points, the bride chose a white wool dress and jacket ensemble with pink accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

On their return from a trip they will live at 157 Dundas Street West, Belleville.

ROSENPLOT — PAGE

Patricia Elizabeth Page, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard W. Page of Hamilton and David Wayne Rosenplot, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon D. Rosenplot, Belleville, were united in marriage by Rev. Murray Creal in St. Paul's Anglican Church, Hamilton, recently.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of peau de faille, trimmed with imported Priscilla lace, circling the neckline. Additional lace enhanced the flowing train and formed the headdress from which a floor-length veil extended. She carried a cascade bouquet of white Sweetheart roses, stephanotis, lily of the valley and ivy.

Miss Judy Page, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Joyce Collings, of Hamilton, Miss Chloe Chapman, of Scarborough, Miss Kathy Hart of St. Catharines, cousins of the bride, and niece of the bridegroom.

The three bridesmaids wore floor-length dresses of pink peau de soie, with a deep rose panel. The maid of honor's dress was deep rose with a side panel of pale rose panel. Their headdresses were of pale pink organza in the shape of petals. All carried white baskets with sprays of pale and deep pink carnations.

Mr. Gary Locke, of Rossmore, attended the bridegroom, while Larry Seeley, Gary Williams, and James Ingram, all of Belleville, were ushers.

At the reception held at the Thistle Club, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a dress and jacket ensemble of pale pink French silk, with matching accessories and a corsage of white orchids. The bridegroom's mother assisted, in a deep pink brocade dress and jacket with matching accessories and a corsage of white gardenias.

For her wedding trip through the Northern States, the bride chose a beige dress and coat of imported English wool, and a beige hat of straw and mohair, with a corsage of pink and white carnations.

The couple will reside in Trenton.

Too Much Security Can Be Dangerous Thing for Man

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

In these times of extension, personal, national and worldwide, there has been an upsurge of publications offering cheap and quick "security" for those suffering from strain. In America some books on this subject have become best - sellers, and for a reason: they are the world's most problem-conscious and anxiety-ridden people. (Someone has said, "America is no longer a melting pot; it is a pressure cooker!")

Religion has been debased and devoted to offering an earthly security to its followers. In our Age of Anxiety the "peace of mind" cults are enjoying a field day with propaganda which invites people to perfect happiness and complete freedom from tension and care. There has sprung up a whole new clergy, composed of ministers of the Gospel of Relaxation. They have summarized the Scriptures into "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall have normal blood pressure," and "Come up your tranquilizers and follow me."

They conveniently forget that the Christ who is the Central Figure of the Gospels was often disturbed, "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief." His disciples were problem-people who misunderstood Him, and some deserted Him. He wept at a friend's grave, and a cross, blood as He agonizingly prayed in Gethsemane. Far from dying peacefully, without a struggle, and "in His sleep," He died of the worst possible physical torture while praying compassionately for His enemies. There was nothing limp about Him!

CAN'T BE FOUND

The peace of mind books will continue to sell, and the peace of mind evangelists will continue to put an eager hearing, because our appetite for a tensionless existence is well-nigh insatiable. We shall continue to look for the "security" from life's problems, because there is no way of finding it. The publicists for peace of mind will always have a limitless market, for a craving for security has always been with us, and it will always remain. It is as much a part of this world as are atoms and molecules, earth and water, beasts and men.

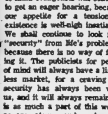
Too much peace of mind based upon security of the wrong kind is disastrous. Some scientists suspect that turtles have only a dull, primitive sort of a mind because their main ener of life calls for a minimum of intelligence and ingenuity for survival. In short, turtles are virtually as secure as a creature of earth can be. This is one reason they are so often crushed to death upon high ways. Feeling too secure in their protective shells, they have not developed the intelligence to deal with danger. They are foolhardy and much more fearful of automobiles than they are of other turtles. Their peace of mind often costs them their death.

Moreover, the human condition under which absolute security can be achieved are usually undesirable. There are people in our society who have achieved virtual perfect security. They have no anxieties about where their next meal, or next year's meals, will come from. They are certain of enough food, clothing, sufficient shelter and medical care for the rest of their days. Fuel, light and water bills will be paid, and they have no fear of inflation devouring their life's savings. Even their burial costs are assured. These secure people are our life-termed convicts. Still, we harshly envy them.

BELONG TO INNER CORE

The only security and peace of mind worth having are not dependent upon the absence of trouble. They belong to the inner core of stability that we can achieve in the midst of the world's turmoil.

Such security comes from accepting without resentment or rebellion the fact that life is not always rosy, and even where it is there are thorns among the roses as well as roses among the thorns.



Security arises from having no fear of being "found out," from one's attitudes and behavior are consistent with one's profession of creed and principle.

Security and peace come from a state of good will toward men, that banishes desire for revenge, that permits no greed for the things that belong to another.

Inner security and peace of mind arise from knowing we are doing all we can to correct the world's wrongs and to alleviate suffering.

Worthwhile security and peace of mind mean having inner, spiritual strength, courage and endurance more than sufficient to face life's stress and strain.

Security comes from doing one's best with one's knowledge, and then rest opportunities while leaving the results in God's loving care and competent hands.

GIRL REDUCES HER HEIGHT

From Oswestry in England, comes news of an unusual surgical operation. Miss Anne Rowston was exceedingly tall, standing 6 feet 7½ inches in height. She was constantly banging her head in doorways, and was going through life feeling like a freak. Recently, Anne decided to do something about it.

Surgeons in the Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital have performed four operations on Anne. They have cut two inches of bone from the ilbia and fibula of each leg, and four inches of bone from the right and left femurs. This has reduced Anne's height to about 6 feet one-inch.

Many of us go through life "banging our heads" and acting like freaks, because we think we're taller than we are. We are only inflated with a sense of our own importance. If we don't cut ourselves down to size, there is something or someone else will. The Bible speaks of spiritual surgery. Jesus tells us to cut off the hand, or pluck out the eye that offends us. Like Anne Rowston, we should do something about this.

Stocks Wander in Slow Trade On Canadian Marts This Week

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There was little price change on Canada's stock markets this week as stocks wandered in sluggish trading.

At Toronto, volume was 16,241,546 shares compared with 13,393,092 last week when the market was closed May 23, for Victoria Day. Volume at Montreal was 8,319,483 compared with 4,811,568.

Golds were the only major group to sustain an advance at Toronto. The gold index climbed 9.72 to 182.11.

Friday the gold index reached a 1966 high of 183 before falling back.

Campbell Red Lake gained 2½ to 25, Giant Yellowknife 3¼ at 134½, Kerr-Addison ¼ at 11¾ and Dome ½ at 47¾.

Banks, up 4.62 last week, fell 2.51 to 141.31 as expected changes to the Bank Act appear to be running into delay.

Montreal was down 2½ to 59¾, Royal 2¼ to 74¼, Imperial-Commerce ¾ to 65¾, Nova Scotia rose ½ to 71½ and Toronto-Dominion ¼ to 63½.

INDUSTRIALS EASE

Industrials eased .05 to 163.40.

Analysts say investors are starting to show concern about the possible effect on profits as a result of labor negotiations underway or coming up shortly in several key sectors of the economy, including steels, rails and B.C. forest producers.

Pressure on Toronto prices also increased when the New York market fell Tuesday following unconfirmed rumors of peace overtures to the U.S. by North Viet Nam.

In the industrial list, beverages showed good strength with Molson A ahead 1½ to 34½ following news of a proposed two-for-one split and an increase in the quarterly dividend to 32 cents from 25.

Distillers Seagrams advanced ¾ to 34 and Walker-Gooderham 1¼ to 23½ on reports that Distillers is increasing its prices it can in the United States.

Among other industrials, CPR increased 1½ to 49¼, Alberta Gas 1 to 33, Levy ⅞ to 13½ and Alcan Aluminium ¼ to 40¾.

GM DROPS 2¼

General Motors dropped 2¼ to 89, B.A. Oil ¼ to 32¾ and Massey-Ferguson and Interprovincial Pipe Line ½ to 35¾ and 79.

Base metals were higher with Hudson Bay Mining up ½ to 86½, Denison 1¼ to 49½, Hudson Bay ¼ to 78¼ and Cominco ½ to 41¾.

Noranda eased ¼ to 57¾ and Falconbridge 1¼ to 80¼.

Fractional gains were made in Steel of Canada. Sentry Rainbow made the largest, rising ½ to 8½. Husky, Pacific Petroleums and Central Del Rio added ¼ at 12¼, 12½ and 11. Home "A" was up ¼ to 17½.

In speculative mines, Jaye Explorations climbed 12 to 71 cents on volume of 270 shares and New Senator 6½ to 43 cents. Spooner dropped 26 to 84 cents in speculative oils.

On index, base metals were up .32 to 91.08, Western oils .42 to 104.49 and the TSE .18 to 135.08.

At Montreal, industrials were ahead .01 to 141.71, utilities .04 to 142.58, while papers were down .18 to 114.27.

divide the loot from the robbery. Miss Rioux was described as his housekeeper.

One of the last witnesses Friday was Staff Sergeant Roland Gilbert of the Sûreté Provincial Police homicide squad. He testified that Durocher had shown police last December the area where the bodies could be found.

However, attempts to locate them while the ground was frozen failed and they were not recovered until May of this year.

Earlier Friday, Vincent Bleau, 52, a former Montreal nightclub manager, testified that some greyhound elements he knew had nearly $50,000 hidden in a container in the Laurentian hills. He said he had seen the money because Paquette had been a close friend for many years.

He said he visited the cottage where Paquette and Miss Rioux were supposed to have been living in May, 1965, but that they were not there and he never saw them again. He testified there was no sign of a struggle in the cottage.

He went to a nearby cottage where Rivard was hiding out and asked him where Paquette was. He said Rivard told him "maybe he died of acute indigestion."

Earlier, a waitress who gave her name as Claudette Riopel, 24, testified that Durocher had told her how he killer Paquette and Miss Rioux.

She said Durocher had gone to Paquette's cottage, handcuffed Paquette and forced him to give up the money, then shot Paquette in the back of the head and Miss Rioux in the face.

eight hours of light, during sleep.

They were up about 2 a.m. EDT to begin the final rendezvous. They approached the AVDA from above, simulating a rescue of two astronauts who have started a descent to the moon and for some reason decide not to abort. Then, in such a case, a third astronaut in Kabir orbit in the main Apollo ship would have to drop down to pick them up.

GET WET, FEET

The rendezvous, which took them to within three feet of the 11-foot target, took more time and about 20 pounds more fuel than anticipated.

That left them with only about 30 pounds of their original 684.7 pounds of manoeuvring fuel.

Mission director Schneider said that for the remainder of the day the astronauts would mainly drift through space, conserving fuel for the space walk Sunday.

He said that ground tests showed that Gernan probably could have clipped the AVDA around knee with a pair of snippers during his stroll.

"I think we would have, given him a 'go' to snip them," he added.

With the decision to leave the ATDA behind, there no longer is a chance for Cernan to qualify as the world's first space mechanic.

The absence of the target satellite also will result in a modification of the space walk plan. Cernan had intended to play a celestial game of tag, flitting between the spacecraft and the AVDA on a 150-foot tether with a rocket-powered back pack.

Shortly after the space walk was called off for the day, sound stations reported the astronauts were resting and it appeared that both had fallen asleep.

Goverments Will Buy Uneconomic Farms

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal and Ontario governments have agreed on a program to buy up uneconomic farms in the province and turn them over to other farmers to produce economic units.

The far-reaching program under the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act was announced by Forestry Minister Sauve and federal and Ontario officials Friday.

It also involves rehabilitation, retraining and financial grants where necessary to farmers displaced under the program.

About half of Ontario's 90,000 commercial farms would be eligible for government purchase under the program, although the $7,200,000 set aside for this purpose until 1970 will involve a much smaller percentage.

The program is expected to have the greatest impact in the 11 eastern counties where studies have shown that 14,000 farms are inadequate as income producers. They could be turned into 8,000 economic units.

Mr. Sauve told a press conference that agreements to enlarge and consolidate farms had been signed earlier with New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, but they did not include the rehabilitation provisions of the Ontario agreement.

He said this is something new. The aim was to ensure that farmers taken off the land are looked after.

The rehabilitation section of the program comes under manpower use arrangements which are not in effect at the time of the earlier agreements.

Over-all, "the program is designed to make possible the enlargement of uneconomic farm units to a size that will give a satisfactory income to the operator," Mr. Sauve said.

REFERS TO STUDIES

He said studies have shown ...nificant increases in ... gross income will de... pen... rgely on farm enlargement.

Uneconomic farm units will be brought up by ARDA as they come on the market for sale. There would be no expropriation. The purchased land would be leased to a farm operator who wanted it on a long-term basis and the operator would have first option to purchase it.

BUGS FIGHT BACK

Moths can detect bats' radar squeaks up to 120 feet away and so avoid the predators.

"It came as a complete surprise. I hadn't the faintest hope that such an honor would be accorded me."

That was the modest statement made by Ken Carr-Brainf manager-coach of the Apollo Barbell Club of this city after he heard he had been selected to a high position on Canada's British Empire Games team.

The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada through its secretary Neil J. Farrell, has appointed Mr. Carr-Brainf as coach of Canada's weightlifting team which will compete in the B.E. Games in Kingston, Jamaica in August of this year.

KEN CARR-BRAINT
Caribbean and August 1st. heading the six-man Canadian team with its manager, Mr. Maurice Allan, chairman of the National Weightlifting Association.

Ken Carr-Brainf is a modest young man who does not shout his athletic abilities from the housetops. A year ago when he was appointed coach of the Canadian team which took part in the Asian Lifting Championship in Teheran, Iraq, it took a pair of pliers to prod it out of him.

He leaves with the team for the 72-temperatures of the Queen of the

The team consists of Chun Han Chu, Montreal and Marcel Jeanelle, Quebec City, bantams; A. Salter, Ottawa, feather; Marcel Bedard, Quebec City, lightweight; Pierre St. Jean, Montreal, middleweight; Earl Jack, Ottawa, light heavyweight and Paul Bjarson, British Columbia, middle heavyweight.

Ken is the Central Ontario representative of the NWA and is one of its best known judges. He acted in the test matches for the B.E. Games held at Winnipeg in late May.

It is noted that no heavyweight lifters are included on the team. "This" said this national coach" is regrettable and would not have happened only for certain circumstances."

He was keenly disappointed when Belleville's Price Morris, heavyweight champion of Canada failed to make the team. "He missed all his presses" he said.

But offsetting this to some extent was the fact the only other heavyweight aspirant, George Dean from British Columbia also missed all the presses.

"The tension was terrific" Carr-Brainf said. "The judges were book-perfect — and there was some excitement among the spectators. Both Dean and Morris were near-perfect in training and officials looked for a battle royal between the two heavyweights."

"Dean cleaned 400 pounds and Morris 380 in training so we expected to see the old record of 780 pounds go by the board. But the battle fizzled out when both missed all their presses, and Belleville's hope for a possible world champion went aglimmering."

Now, Carr-Brainf will concentrate on the national team and their chances at the British Empire Games. He likes the chances of three of his squad and the rest will give a good account of themselves, he said.

Carr-Brainf has come a long way since he inaugurated his Apollo Barbell Club some years ago. He has developed many fine youngsters, not a few of them British Empire and national title holders.

His ability as a coach brought the attention of national officials and he was at first named Ontario's top coach. Last year he was honored with the national title. This year he has reached the top.

Mets' Fisher Shackles Dodgers 6-2

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Jack Fisher is a 24-game loser who pitches for the lowly Mets and can't beat Los Angeles. Don Drysdale is a 23-game winner who pitches for the world-champion Dodgers and always beats New York.

Fisher took on Drysdale Friday night. It was a mismatch. Drysdale didn't have a prayer.

Fisher, 6-7 against Los Angeles in three National League seasons, shackled the Dodgers on three hits while the Mets 2-18 against Drysdale over a four-year period, cuffed him for five runs en route to a 6-2 victory.

The victory snapped a three-game losing streak for the eighth place Mets. The loss was only the second in the last 11 games for the second - place Dodgers.

Fisher, now 3-5 this season, gave up a single in the second inning and then set down 20 straight batters before yielding to another. Wes Parker homered for the Dodgers in the ninth.

The Mets knocked out Drysdale in the fifth, Ken Boyer's two-run homer capping a three-run rally that nailed the Dodger righthander with his fifth loss in nine decisions.

PHILLIES DROP DODGERS

Philadelphia Phillies whipped San Francisco Giants 6-1 behind Jim Bunning. Si Lonie Cardinals held off Atlanta Braves 3-2, Cincinnati Reds came from behind for an 8-6 victory over Chicago and Pittsburgh Pirates battered Houston Astros 7-2.

The Mets jumped on Drysdale for two runs in the first inning. Ed Kranepool delivering the first with a sacrifice fly and Al Luplow slugging the second across.

After the Dodgers scored an unearned run in the second on Lou Johnson's single, a two-base error by centre fielder Cleon Jones and a ground out, the Mets sewed it up in the fifth on Jones' RBI single and Boyer's fourth homer.

Bunning won his seventh in a row, scattering six hits, as the Phils snapped the Giants' five-game winning streak and extended their own victory string to five. Bob Uecker drove in three runs with a homer and squeeze bunt while Rich Allen and Cookie Rojas hit bases-empty homers.

Bunning, 7-1, was hit in the back by Leo Gabrielson's line drive in the eighth but remained in the game after being treated in the Phils' dugout.

ENDED THE THREAT

Bob Gibson held Atlanta to two hits until the ninth, when Hank Aaron's 18th homer and a single by Felipe Alou drove him from the mound. Joe Hoerner came on and struck out Mack Jones, ending the threat.

Curt Flood had four hits for the Cardinals but was retired the first three times when Orlando Cepeda bounced into double plays, tying the league record. Flood's fourth hit, a triple in the eighth, knocked in Tim McCarver with what proved to be the winning run.

The loss was the seventh straight for the staggering Braves.

Don Pavletich's two-run double was the big blow in a five-run eighth inning rally that lifted Cincinnati past the Cubs, ending a six-game losing streak for the Reds.

The Cubs scored six runs in the sixth inning, two on Byrne Browne's homer.

Jim Pagliaroni and Bill Mazeroski ripped successive homers in a five-run sixth inning burst that won for the Pirates. Woody Fryman, Pittsburgh's unbeaten rookie pitcher, scattered nine hits for his fourth victory.

Percival Drug Charges

Don Mills A.C. Requests Probe

TORONTO (CP) — The Central Ontario Track and Field Association was asked in a letter Friday to investigate charges that the track coach at Don Mills Track and Field Club gave his athletes drugs.

The letter followed written allegations by Bill Crothers of Markham, Ont., that Lloyd Percival, Don Mills track coach, gave his athletes stimulants and sedatives and that the athletes had taken them.

Percival has denied giving the athletes drugs.

Crothers, considered the world's top - half miler, made his charges to the COTFA in a letter March 31. The letter came to light May 27.

The Don Mills club letter to the COTFA Friday, signed by W. O. Lake, honorary secretary of the club, on behalf of the Don Mills Club executives, says that rules governing amateur athletics state competitors may be suspended if they have been found to use drugs to improve their performances.

The letter said several of the Don Mills athletes hope to participate in the British Empire Games trials, scheduled for Edmonton July 15-16, and "possibly the B. E. G. themselves," which will be held in Kingston, Jamaica Aug. 4-14.

"It is imperative that their chances of selection are not jeopardized by thedelinquency on the part of the COFTA."

Meanwhile, a letter, signed by David Arnold, a 17-year-old athlete at the Don Mills club on behalf of 20 athletes, was sent to Crothers.

The letter said:

"We, members of the Don Mills Track and Field Club categorically state that none of us is requesting or being offered, let alone accepting, as you state, the drugs dexedrin and luinal or any other illegal drug. Nor have we accepted or been offered illegal drugs in the past."

Dexedrine is a stimulant and luinal is a sedative.

Senior Hockey Expands

OAKVILLE (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League grew to eight from five teams Friday night when entries from Toronto, Barrie and Orillia were voted in at a meeting here.

Now in the league are Woodstock Athletics, Guelph Regals, Kingston Aces, Galt Terriers and Oakville Oaks.

The meeting also decided that the schedule would run from mid-October through March with six of the teams moving into playoffs.

Money Not The Reason

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ernie Terrell, World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, said Friday money was not the reason he withdrew from a fight with Cassius Clay originally scheduled last March 29 in Chicago.

"The real reason is because I had to sign an agreement that the Clay group would handle all my future fights," Terrell said in a television interview.

Money had nothing to do with it."

At the time the bout was cancelled it was reported that the action was taken because of unacceptable financial arrangements.

Terrell, scheduled to meet WBA's second - ranked Doug Jones in a title fight June 28 in Houston, Texas, said he still would like to fight Clay.

DEMAND FINES

UTRECHT, Netherlands (Reuters)—A prosecutor has demanded heavy fines against members of a secret society of Dutch aristocrats allegedly responsible for the death of a 20-year-old student in initiation rites. The student died last year stifled by a bag of soot, which was tied round his neck with a cord.

Two In Row

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Boston Red Sox should have known better than to walk a .138 hitter to get to a .158 hitter, but how were Washington Senators supposed to know about Jack Lamabe?

Sure, Lamabe pitched a one-hitter last Monday against the Red Sox. But that was the first shutout in his five-year major league career, and it came in his first start of the season.

So how were they supposed to know that he would come back four days later and pitch another shutout, this time on a three-hitter? That's what Lamabe did Friday night as Chicago White Sox whipped the Senators 8-0.

In Boston's case, the intentional pass to batty Petrocelli and Dowing cleared the bases with a triple.

That gave the 34 - year - old Lamabe five runs batted in for the game and nearly enough support to gain his sixth straight triumph by himself.

In other American League games, Cleveland Indians edged Minnesota Twins 6-5, Baltimore Orioles sapped Kansas City Athletics 3-2 and Detroit Tigers trimmed California Angels 1-0.

In posting his first complete game, Downing scattered eight hits, including Boston homers by George Scott, George Smith and Joe Foy. Besides his own, the floundering lefthander received support from Tom Tresh, who drove in five runs with a single a double and a homer.

Lamabe, now 3-4, faced the minimum number of batters in the first five innings and didn't allow a Senator to reach third the entire game. J. C. Martin drove in three Chicago runs with two singles and a sacrifice fly while Floyd Robinson added two RBI with a single and a double.

Fred Whitfield collected three singles and a homer, driving in five runs for Cleveland. His three-run homer in the seventh inning wiped out Minnesota's 4-3 lead. Dick Radatz muffed out a Minnesota rally in the eighth after the Twins had cut the Indians' lead to 6-5.

Frank Robinson returned to the Baltimore line-up and hit a two-run homer in the fifth that carried the Orioles past Kansas City. Jim Palmer allowed the Athletics five hits, including Ken Harrelson's two-run homer in the second.

Willie Horton's seventh inning homer ended a scoreless duel between Detroit's Hank Aguirre and California's Marcelino Lopez. Aguirre five runs batted in and coped a blister on his pitching hand, and Larry Sherry pitched the last two innings for the Tigers.

Banquet At Royal York, Toronto

NOW A "CITIZEN" — Mayor H. J. McFarland presents Bobby Hull with framed scroll making him a citizen of Picton and Prince Edward County.

Picton Mayor Honors Hull

By GEORGE H. CARVER
Sports Editor

TORONTO — Throw in politicians, federal and provincial, city slickers, country guys, municipal magnates and top with a famous athlete, and you've got yourself a dinner gathering par excellence.

That's what happened here in the ball room of the Royal Hotel last night.

The icing on this banquet cake was Bobby Hull, and the gentleman who cooked up the deal was His Worship Mayor H. J. McFarland of Picton.

Politically it looked like a mixed caucus. Social - wise the country crossroads mingled with the metropolitan "don't walks." Gift-wise it resembled a male bridal shower.

The genial mayor of Picton, county seat of "Little Spain," hauled the bill to give "my boy Bobby" another jewel in his crown.

Bobby's personality again beamed over and at a gathering of over 300 federal and provincial parliamentarians, prominent businessmen, and guys like me of the rural districts.

Outside the city the "on-the-house" party was highlighted by a special Canadian National Railways special coach, which took some 45 Prince Edward - Hastings county guests to the party.

The highlight of the dinner was the presentation of a scroll by Mayor McFarland to Bobby Hull, making him an honorary citizen of Picton and Prince Edward County.

Mayor Philip Givens of Toronto was not to be dismayed by this show of georgosity by a fellow chief magistrate.

He almost brought down the "house" when he extricated his gold cufflinks from his shirt-sleeves and presented them to the guest of honor.

This gift was probably prompted by the action of Mayor Vic Oeppe of Hamilton who presented Mayor McFarland with a cuff-links and because his city was booming with building gave Bobby a construction helmet.

The apple king of Prince Edward County, Warden Harold Hooker, also gave the guest of honor an appropriate gift of his favorite fruit, or is that effect. Other gifts were also added to the "load" of tangible appreciation for the Chicago Black Hawks' star.

The Hon. George Hees P.C., M.P., was the chairman of the dinner.

Others at the head table included the Rev. A. W. Downey, MP Dufferin-Simcoe; Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox; Lee Z. Gib M.P.; Charles Rollins, MPP, while Mr. William Allen, chairm a n of Metro Toronto brought this city's greetings.

Also at the head table were the Hon. W. A. Stewart, MPP, Ontario Minister of Agriculture; The Hon. E. J. Benson P.C. MP, Minister of National Revenue; Aubrey Moodie, Reeve of Nepean township; Steven D. Roman, President of Denison Mines; Col. J. G. W. Haynes, Commanding 1st Canadian Guards; the Hon. David J. Walker; Messrs. Carl Cannon and W. R. Shaw, Royal Order of Jesters, and Mr. Robert Hull, senior.

Hull's three brothers, Garry, Dennis and Ron, sat at a table near their famous brother.

The well-known televis i on hockey commentator, Jack Dennett, introduced the head table guests.

Incidentally, the food served at the dinner was produced in its entirety in Prince Edward County.

Bobby received a standing ovation before and after making a brief address.

Montez, Juan Steal Show

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

If it's true blondes have more fun, Terry Garvin and Golden Boy Dupree failed to prove it in the main bout of last night's opening wrestling card at Memorial Arena.

A couple of preliminary performers, Tito Montez and Don Juan stole the show as far as a crowd estimated at 400 was concerned.

Don Juan lived up to his name in appearance, a showman first class, with long locks, pinkish trunks, white sox and boots to match and the ability to drive fans up the walls. Montez, from Puerto Rico, was the idol of the fans, flashing speed and science and wearing the "All Canadian Boy" rest to perfection.

The pair battled to a draw over three falls in 45 minutes. Don Juan took the first after 20 heated minutes with the aid of several well-placed knees in Montez's stomach. Tito used his speed to the utmost in evening the match after five minutes. A series of flying head scissors and drop kicks turned the trick.

The lively set was completed with lurid action to the bell and the crowd disagreed with referee Harry Barry's draw decision.

In the main go, it was strictly a battle of the blondes with both wrestlers grabbing fistfuls of tresses. Villian Terry Garvin won the opening heat in eight minutes but Dupree won a bit rilled. He came out flying for the second. Failing to wait for the bell, yet, the "good guy" used a head scissors and a couple of slams to tie the score in just 25 seconds.

Garvin went for the throat early in the third but Golden Boy fought back and they stunned each other in a slam-bang brawl off the ropes. Both tried drop kicks at the same time (and mixed, naturally) to knock each other wonky again. Garvin had the bout won when he pinned his man for the count.

However, Terry decided to add a few jumps on the failed victim and Barry disqualified him and gave the bout to Dupree.

Midgets Roger Littlebrook and Frenchy Lamonte also put on a good show with Roger's judo chops and a toss off the ropes winning the decision.

Littlebrook was as agile as ever while Lamonte, the comic villain, kept the crowd in stitches with his grimaces and aions during the acrobatics. Lamonte tipped the scales at 80 pounds and Littlebrook, who promotes the bouts here, at 95.

Billy Cash "cashed in" Bill Williams after ten minutes in the opener.

A war-bonneted Indian wrestler, Johnny Littledog, was introduced as one of the coming attractions. All bouts from now on will start at 9.00 each Friday.

Crothers To Race In Kenya

TORONTO (CP)—Bill Crothers, Markham, Ont. pharmacist rated the top half - miler in the world, will compete in Kenya this summer, it was announced Friday.

Fred Foot, coach of the Olympic 800-metre silver medalist, said Crothers would compete in provincial ch a m pionships in Kenya June 25, and then meet high - ranking Wilson Kipriguat Kenya, in the Kenya national championships July 2. Foot said both races would be over 880 yards.

Crothers will leave Canada by plane June 22.

Crothers, Kipriguat and George Kerr of Jamaica likely will meet again in the Aug. 4-13 British Empire Games at Kingston, Jamaica.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — Nancy Kwan watches Jill St. John's attentions to Robert Goulet with a cold eye in this scene from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Honeymoon Hotel." Goulet makes his screen debut in the Panavision and color romantic comedy, following his stage success in "Camelot," and the film also stars Robert Morse, comedy star of Broadway's "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying." Henry Levin directed. "Honeymoon Hotel" opens tonight at the Belleville Drive-In Theatre for a 6 day run along with the year's most luxurious love story also filmed in color. "The Yellow Rolls Royce", starring Ingrid Bergman, Rex Harrison, Alain Delon and Jeanne Moreau.

David Niven Not Cut Out For Duties of TV Tycoon

By BOB THOMAS

LONDON (AP)—David Niven was never cut out to be a television tycoon.

Heaven knows he tried. He had an office and a secretary and he tried to play the executive, as his puffpuce Dirty Dozen did so well. Together with Charles Boyer they comprised the thriving concern of Four Star Productions.

Niven's saddle as an executive came one day at the studio when he was attending to business before leaving to make The Pink Panther on location in Switzerland. He was trying to maneuver in a gorilla suit, and he had been making film tests of the costume in the morning.

He was expecting a luncheon interview with an old newspaper chum, so he decided on a gag to keep the monkey suit on until the interviewer arrived.

Niven sat behind his desk awaiting the arrival. As the door swung open, he rose in the furry suit, drinking glass in hand, and uttered a jungle-like roar. He was greeted not by the reporter, but a Four Star sponsor, his wife and daughter. The staid manufacturer had just dropped in to say hello.

"I had a bit of trouble getting out of that one," Niven confessed in his dressing room at Pinewood Studio. He now is playing Sir James Bond in the Sean Connery — Ian Casino Royale for Columbia.

Despite his absence, Niven keeps track of activities back in For Star, in which he remains a partner. The latest project he starred with Boyer and Gig Young in The Rogues, which started with great promise but did not survive.

"Lucky for us it didn't," commented Niven. "Four Star didn't afford it any more. The show was costing us $30,000 more per segment than we were getting for it. Another season—might have proved a financial disaster.

"Something must be done about television economics. It is becoming increasingly difficult for an independent producer to survive, in today's market. Only the major studios can afford to lose so much on a series, hoping to make it up in re-runs and syndication."

Minor Baseball Results

A ten-run first inning powered the Jaycees to an 18-6 Bellleville Minor Baseball tykes victory over the CN Firemen last night.

The winners scored in every inning and the Firemen opened the game with three runs.

Tim Whelan and Ron Wood pitched several balls for the win, fanning ten and walking eight.

Norm Sweet and Larry Enright had control trouble in defeat, lasting no less than 18 walks. They gave up ten hits and struck out four.

Dave Flesch sparked the Jaycee hitters with three singles. Dave Sullivan had a triple and a single and Bob Woodcock also hit a double. Mike Watt, Ron Wood, Bruce Clarke and Peter Stephenson had a hit each.

Grant Goegan paced the CN crew with a double and two other base hits. David Buckles singled twice, Terry Ray and Norm Sweet once each.

Yesterday's Fights

Los Angeles—Raul Rojas, 129, San Pedro, Calif., knocked out Richard Moreno, 129, Mexico, 2.
Manuel Ramos, 130, Mexico City, decisioned Eddie Machen, 132, Cleveland, 10.
Madrid — Sugar Boy Nando, Dominican Republic, stopped Luis Folledo, Spain, 6, Middleweights.

Temptation Remains Strong Why Not Retire to Italy?

By THOMAS COLLINS

Maybe, after all, you had better go pack your things and plan to move to Italy after you retire.

A gracious lady who has been living there is quite sure you'll be missing a great adventure if you don't. She is Mrs. Charles Matt, who lived in Italy a long time after the war, and who is now going back her husband and three children, and a dog, to settle back in Venice.

"We know dozens of retired North Americans living there," she says. "Some in Venice, some in Rome, Perugia, and Naples . . . and all doing nicely on budgets well below what would be needed here."

Pointing out that the average Italian college professor with a string of titles lives on about $250 a month, Mrs. Matt and her couple with $400 a month would do fine.

"Rents in cities run from $50 to $150 a month for an unfurnished one-bedroom or five to six rooms," she explains. "For about $300 one can furnish such an apartment with second-hand furniture or with things from the 1830-1850 era which is handsome and very cheap.

"Housing in the resort cities runs higher, of course. So does living generally, but you try to keep up with the Jet set."

FOOD PRICES

Mrs. Matt found that $90 a month was usually adequate for food for her family of five (including her — $20 a week a quart). "To spend $130 a month would be to splurge."

Dressed is about 50 cents an hour in cities like Venice and Milan, and cheaper in the south of Italy, she says. Dry cleaning, books, stamps and telephone are about the same as in the States.

"Rail transportation is a bargain, and one can see the whole countryside by rides in the first-class (and on many trains second-class is overcrowded). Rates in second-class hotels are low, and some first-class chain hotels run from $7 per night, double in the off-season.

"This is the country of the $1.80 office call," she adds. "The doctor lives humbly and is not concerned with material possessions. The country people are natives, rich in good humor and Christian charity, are free

Sunken Piers to Be Cleared From Harbor in Deseronto

DESERONTO — Clearing away of the sunken piers in Deseronto Harbor will proceed this summer, according to a letter received by Mr. H. Rowman, secretary of the Boat Club.

Two years ago Mr. Newman spoke Robert Temple, then a member of the House of Commons, requesting that the job be done. Mr. Temple agreed to approach the Department of Public Works on the subject, and advised Mr. Newman to write him again if the work had not been started by April of this year.

A letter from Mr. Newman to say that no action had yet been taken brought an early reply from Mr. Temple, stating that he had brought the matter to the attention of the Department once more, and enclosing a copy of the letter, which he himself had received. The enclosure stated that "the removal of the piers in the Deseronto Harbor has been approved for this year's public works program. It is anticipated that tenders for this project will be called early in the summer."

The letter was signed by Mr. Langlois, special assistant.

ONCE RATHBUN DOCKS

The piers in question are the remains of the docks built by the Rathbun Company when Deseronto was a thriving lumbering town. The finished products from the mills were piled here, waiting to be transported by water to various lake ports. When they were no longer needed the docks were not removed and eventually fell into ruin. Water has washed away the tops of the piers which supported them. Some are no longer gone that they are no longer a hazard to boats, but some are still only a foot or so below the surface. Members of the Boat Club know where they are, but strangers do not.

The last remnants of the coal carrier "Bayanna," which ran aground in the harbor three years ago, are still on the Boat Club property, but are being taken away gradually. The Bayanna was not wrecked by the piers, however. She ran aground in a fog and was so badly damaged by the rocks that she had to be scrapped.

New Additions Will Absorb Many Construction Workers

NAPANEE — The applicants registered for work with the Napanee National Employment Office at the end of May, which is usually the busiest month of April this year, shows an increase over last May, states T. W. Cox, local office manager.

There were 203 males registered at the end of May compared to 164 at the end of April and 183 last May, and 106 females compared to 164 in April and 97 last May.

The increase in female applicants was expected because of the increased number entering the construction field, and because the weather has reduced the need for workers in the hotel and restaurant so far this season.

The slow down in general business during the past year has reduced the need for men in this field and the local office has 21 skilled men available this year including 13 carpenters and three plumbers, compared to six skilled men last year.

The addition and increased production at Napanee Industries Limited has helped the area tremendously with approximately 80 men taken on last month, and the Bell Telephone is having difficulty supplying welders because of the demand throughout the province.

"We do not anticipate a difficult season in general because of the anticipated high school addition and the new Regional Detention Centre, which should absorb many of our skilled and semi-skilled construction workers," Manager Cox remarked.

Foster Places Second

(COP-AP)—Billy Foster of Victoria placed second Friday in a 100-lap United States Automobile Club race won by Jim Nelson, the club's 1965 stock car champion.

Nelson won over the 50-mile course in 41:32.9 with a 1965 Plymouth Belvedere. Foster was in a 1965 Dodge Coronet. J. C. Kloiz of Fort Wayne, Ind., placed third.

Foster was involved in a spectacular 16-car pileup that almost shut out nearly half of the starting field on the first lap of last Monday's Indianapolis 500-mile auto race.

The first Canadian to qualify for the 500 last year, Foster was blamed by some of the 200 drivers for the wreck that caused the pileup.

Foster is scheduled to race Sunday in the Milwaukee 200.

H.S. Exams Start Monday

NAPANEE — Pupils of the Napanee District Secondary School received the good luck and the bad, this week. Wednesday a slip was given to each pupil in grades eleven and twelve telling him with which subjects he was exempted from writing, and the ones for which he must write an examination. Thursday it was the turn of grades ten and nine.

Over all the province school will close next Friday for Grade 13, as far as classes were concerned. Some have been coming back for help in weak subjects.

Examinations for all grades begin Monday.

Approximately 100 pupils from Tamworth and Amherst Island will attend N.D.S.S. next year for the first time. Tuesday evening the parents of these boys and girls visited the school to see for themselves what things are like here. Principal Charles Pruod, vice-principal A. B. Medd, assistant vice-principal John Wheeler, John Donohue, technical director, and L. Somers, head of the guidance department, were on hand to acquaint them with the curriculum and the buildings, and to answer questions. They were taken on a tour of the school.

Saturday, June 17 all grade eight pupils from the area will visit the school and be shown around so that they will not feel strange when they enter as pupils in September.

Principal Proud, meanwhile, is lining up the staff for next year. Six new teachers must be hired for the new classrooms in the addition, and there have been several resignations.

Last Year's Corn Still in Good Condition

DESERONTO — Robert Bell of R.R. 1 Selby, has a peculiar situation in one of his fields. Last Saturday, a corn picker salvaged several loads of ears of corn on land too wet to harvest last fall. On the other side of the field this year's corn was up well.

The salvaged corn is of exceptional quality, Mr. Bell says. It is firm, dry and grinds up well for feed. It is like found money, as they had given it up for lost, he adds.

It is reported that several farmers in the Napanee area are having the same experience.

UNION NATIONALE HAS LEAD

First Count Gives UN 2-Seat Edge

QUEBEC (CP) — The Union Nationale emerged as victor Sunday in a tight Quebec election charged with the drama of upset.

The party, led by Daniel Johnson, won 55 of the legislative assembly's 108 seats, although a victory credited to it in one constituency was uncertain.

The Liberals, who knocked the UN into the political wilderness by taking power six years ago, found their representation slashed to 31. The remaining two seats went to independents—one an independent Liberal.

Thirteen new seats were added to the assembly for the first time this election.

But Sunday night the final outcome of the election was still uncertain. The night's last report to The Canadian Press from the Ste. Hyacinthe constituency indicated that Denis Bousquet, Union Nationale candidate, had defeated Rene St. Pierre, minister of public works.

Later, however, returning officer Richard Bousquet said the result will not be known until this afternoon or Tuesday.

The count had been given as 10,941 for Mr. Bousquet, 10,870 for Mr. St. Pierre, and 1,250 for Claude Riendeau of le Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale.

The returning officer said that while counting was in progress

Expect Canada to Block Showdown With France

Strikers Suspend Picketing

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec City police reported the city's waterfront was quiet Sunday night after striking longshoremen agreed to suspend picketing until 8 a.m. today.

Jean Paul Walsh of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) said the suspension would allow farmers to pick up grain for their livestock from grain elevators in Quebec city's port.

The longshoremen realize that farmers have almost exhausted their supply of feed, he said.

Police said no farmers came

BRUSSELS (CP) — Opposition led by Canada and Italy makes it appear unlikely the United States, West Germany and Britain will be able to provoke any sort of showdown with France over the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

It was evident France's 14 NATO-partners were deeply divided as they began a foreign ministers' meeting today over ways of countering President de Gaulle's military withdrawal from the alliance.

An American informant said Canada, Italy, Denmark, and Portugal are not "as positively attuned to the present difficulty" as U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk would like them to be.

This means those four countries don't care to support any action hostile to the French government and they all want the NATO council, the alliance's political headquarters, to remain in Paris if this is acceptable to de Gaulle. Their general position was reported to have the support of Turkey, Greece and Norway.

One U.S. source said he thinks the Canadian, Italian and Por-

Municipal Leaders to Study Report on Water Pollution

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mayors and municipal leaders from communities across Canada started study today of a report calling for senior government grants to encourage provincial and municipal control of water pollution.

The report, prepared for the 59th annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, says a long-term financial scheme is needed to overcome water problems.

The report was prepared by Dr. Eric Beecroft, professor of political science, University of Western Ontario. It will be presented in amended form to the national conference on pollution sponsored by the Canadian Council of Resources Ministers in Montreal Oct. 31-Nov. 4.

The report says federal and provincial governments have left municipalities a heavy burden in controlling water pollution. It suggests grants by federal-provincial agreement to encourage provinces and municipalities to survey local water pollution problems, prepare at

After Troubles Flight Ends With Perfect Descent

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Gemini 9 astronauts rode their tiny spaceship to a near-perfect safe landing in the Atlantic Ocean today, climaxing a sensational often-troublesome flight highlighted by Eugene A. Cernan's record space "walk."

Astronauts Thomas P. Stafford and Cernan made the most accurate landing in the U.S. man-in-space program. They parked Gemini 9 less than two miles from the aiming point and only about three miles from the main recovery ship, the aircraft carrier Wasp.

The "one-in-the-money" splashdown came at 10 a.m. after a flight of three days, 21 minutes during which Gemini 9 circled the globe 45 times and travelled nearly 1,200,000 miles.

With thousands of sailors cheering, the Wasp manoeuvred alongside and retrieved the pilots and space craft from the sea 50 minutes later.

Stafford and Cernan acknowledged the cheers with waves and "thumbs-up" signals. Both appeared relaxed and in excellent physical condition.

ON LIVE T.V.

Command pilot Stafford, whose cool, on-the-spot decisions played a key role in the mission, described the splashdown to a touchdown within sight of the carrier and on-deck television cameras, which relayed the dramatic picture via the Early Bird satellite to viewers in North America and Europe.

On the deck, the hatches were reopened and the smiling space twins stood up, waved at the sailors and the TV cameras and shook hands with navy - and space agency officials.

They then shook hands with one another and Stafford rubbed his three-day growth of beard and laughed.

The 17 - piece ship's band struck up Anchors Aweigh as the astronauts headed for a two-hour examination.

A large banner on the deck read: "Welcome Stafford (again) and Cernan."

The Wasp also retrieved Stafford and Walter M. Schirra Jr. after the Gemini 6 flight in December.

Capt. Gordon F. Hartley, the civilian included one representative of the Roman Catholic and the influential Cao Dai and Hoa Hao Buddhist sects.

Foreign Minister Tran Van Do was also among those taken into the enlarged junta.

The move to enlarge the junta by the inclusion of civilians to balance the 10 generals who have ruled South Viet Nam for the last year came after a top-level meeting between the government and Buddhist leaders here last week.

However, although some of the newly - appointed civilians were Buddhists, the enlarged junta had no official representatives of the unified Buddhist church which has been organizing the anti - government campaign.

Generals Invite 10 Into Junta

By MICHAEL NEALE

SAIGON (Reuters) — South Viet Nam's ruling generals today made a bid to appease militant Buddhist leaders by asking 10 civilians to join the government.

But the generals were rebuffed with a tough threat of intensified opposition from the Buddhist leaders who renewed their demand for the resignation of head of state Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu and Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky.

The Unified Buddhist Church issued a statement calling for the resignations and said other leaders should be appointed to establish an interim government pending the formation of a popularly elected government.

"The situation can be restored to normal only if this process takes place," the statement said, adding that if Thieu and Ky were not replaced the people's opposition would only be strengthened.

Informed sources said the 10 civilians included one representative of the Roman Catholic and the influential Cao Dai and Hoa Hao Buddhist sects.

Foreign Minister Tran Van Do was also among those taken into the enlarged junta.

Durocher Commits Suicide

MONTREAL (CP) — Andre Durocher banged himself in a steerad the spaceship to a touch- provincial police jail cell early Sunday while awaiting arraignment on two charges of capital murder.

Durocher, who broke out of a Montreal penitentiary in March, 1965 with Lucien Rivard, was found criminally responsible Friday for the deaths of a Montreal underworld figure and his girlfriend by a coroner's inquest.

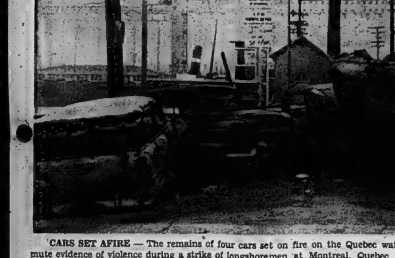
He was to have been arraigned today.

Durocher banged himself with his belt from a shower pipe in his cell.

He had been brought back to QPP headquarters here after the inquest reached its decision Friday in St. Jerome, 40 miles north of Montreal.

He heard the verdict without visible emotion.

Sgt. Roland Gilbert of the QPP homicide squad said "as far as I'm concerned, it's a suicide. There'll be an investigation of the police work involved."



He said Durocher had left no note explaining the suicide.

Another police spokesman said Durocher arranged his bed to look as if he was sleeping in it, before he went into the cell bathroom to "hang himself."

"The body was found at 1 a.m., when Durocher had been dead about 10 or 15 minutes. It was taken to the city morgue.

Rivard was to have been arraigned today on charges of killing Andre Paquette, 43, and Alice Blour, 38, whose bodies were found last month in a shallow, fire-filled grave near Piedmont, Que., about 40 miles north of Montreal. They disappeared more than a year ago. A preliminary hearing into

Communist Party Gets Bad Licking in Indonesian Coup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The abortive coup in Indonesia last fall virtually wiped out the large Communist party there and dramatically reduced the overall number of Communists in non-Communist countries, a U.S. government survey reports.

The survey by the state department's bureau of intelligence and research says also the Indonesian coup deprived Communist China of its strongest party probably marked the end of a period in which Peking was making deep inroads into the Soviet Union's sphere of influence.

The report makes those additional assertions:

—In 1964 there were an estimated 4,500,000 card - carrying Communist party members in countries not under Communist rule.

—Two million of them were in Indonesia but reaction to the coup attempt was so harsh that only 100,000 Indonesian Communists remained active by January this year. Perhaps as many as 300,000 were killed, while the remainder dropped all party activity.

—The world figure, accordingly, now is 2,600,000, a drop of 42 per cent. On a world basis, including Communist nations, the loss was largely offset by membership increases claimed by countries such as China, North Viet Nam, North Korea and Poland.

—Total membership of all Communist parties, including splinter groups, was around 43,900,000 by the end of 1965. A year earlier the figure was 44,500,000, and 43,000,000 at the end of 1963.

—Membership figures for three non-Communist countries showed these sharp drops: West Germany to 10,000 in 1965 from 30,000 at the end of 1964; Mexico to 5,000 from 50,000; and Iraq to 2,000 from 15,000.

—As a result of the Moscow-Peking dispute, the Communist parties of 18 countries are badly split, in India, for instance, there are two Communist parties, with the pro-Peking party slightly stronger (70,000 members) than the pro-Moscow one (50,000 members).

—Not counting those internal factions and open splits, China can count on only nine natural Communist parties. They are Albania, North Korea, North Viet Nam, South Viet Nam (with 31,000 Communists listed), the remnants of the disbanded Communist party, Japan, Laos, Malaysia, and the small, but vocal New Zealand party.

Banquet, Dance, Service Feature Battery Reunion

Members of the 34th Battery RCA, one of the "fighting units" of this city in World War II show no signs of adherence to military cliches.

Old soldiers may never die but fade away but this hasn't applied too much to the gunner unit.

This was evidenced at the annual reunion of the battery held here over the weekend.

Some 60 members of the battery association were reunited at a banquet, dance and church service.

Jack Londsberg, ANAF Dominion Command president, chaired the Saturday night banquet held in the ANAF auditorium.

Major Austin Walters M.D. was the guest speaker and gave a serio - humorous address on "Characters in the Army".

The toast to the battery was given by Gunner Bob Harper of Cannington with the response made by RSM "Stick" Hoskin of Bowmanville, Gunner Newell.

RSM Eddie Lee proposed the toast to the regiment with the response made by RSM Lee Vallee of Camp Petawawa.

The gunners paraded to St. Mary Magdalene Sunday morning where Ven. Archdeacon A. S. McConnell MBE officiated at the service.

The dance was held in the ANAF auditorium Saturday evening following the banquet.

At a battery association meeting plans were formulated to hold a regimental reunion in Montreal on June 3rd, 1967.

Members of the 14th Field Regiment RCA are the 32nd and 34th batteries from Ontario and the 69th-81st battery from Montreal.

The plans included travel by special railway coaches with the Pipe Band of the ANAF as special guests.

Gunners attending the reunion came from all parts of Ontario, New Brunswick and Montreal.

Bicycle Rider, F.R. Sills, 11, Fatally Hurt

An 11 year-old Belleville area boy was killed early Saturday evening when he was struck by a car while riding his bicycle on Wallbridge Rd. near the second concession of Sidney.

Police believe that Franklin Richard Sills, 11, R.R. 3, Belleville suddenly pulled out into the path of an oncoming car driven by Frank Podmilschak of Batawa.

The boy had been riding along behind his father, Keith Sills, when the accident occurred. Mr. Sills was towing a seed drill with a tractor at the time.

He was given mouth-to-mouth resuscitation at the accident scene, then taken to Belleville General Hospital by City Ambulance where he died after transferred to Kingston General Hospital where he died.

500 Students Start Writing Grade 13 Exams

The moment of truth has arrived for the approximately 500 Grade 13 students who this morning commenced final exams at Belleville high schools.

This year there are approximately 34,000 Grade 13 students in Ontario and although some will continue writing exams until late in the month, exam time will be over for most on June 17th.

Belleville Collegiate with 136 students has the largest Grade 13 class, followed closely by Moira Secondary School with 126 under their figure. Quinte Secondary School has 113, Nicholson Catholic College about 60 and Albert College 45.

Two Officials Finish Courses

Two Belleville municipal officials, one with the city and the other with the county organization, have successfully completed the third and final year of the municipal clerk's and treasurer's training course through the Queen's University extension department.

The two officials to pass their final year are Hastings county clerk treasurer Carl G. Bateman and J. Allan Johnston, recently appointed as acting deputy treasurer for the city of Belleville.

Poppy Fund Award By Belleville Group

The Poppy Fund Award, presented to Squadron 606, Belleville Air Cadets, at their annual inspection, was made by the Belleville Poppy Committee and not by Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion as reported by The Intelligencer.

The presentation was made by E. H. Liddle and C. A. Chapman. The Poppy Fund Committee is composed of members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit of the Navy, Army and Air Force Veterans in Canada, Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion, and 418 Wing of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association.

The success of the Poppy Fund Committee is due to the combined efforts of these Veterans' organizations.

Alert Youth Saves Boy From Drowning

An alert 15-year-old Belleville youth stopped what could have been a tragedy near Lasler's Dam Saturday afternoon about 3 p.m.

Eddie Seriven, 15, of 161 Church St., was down by the dam when he saw an unidentified boy about five or six years old fall into the water. The boy fell over the dam and was carried down the rapids.

Eddie ran along the bank near the rapids then jumped in and pulled the boy out.

The boy suffered a cut on his head and abrasions to his body, but escaped for swallowing a quantity of water, he was all right.

Eddie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Seriven.

Four Presumed Dead as Boats Collide

DETROIT (AP) — Four persons were thrown overboard and were missing and presumed drowned when an excursion boat collided with a 26 - foot cabin cruiser on the Detroit River Sunday night.

Police said Mrs. Peggy Durdin, 32, of Detroit, was one of 10 persons a board the cruiser 10 G's, owned by Max Moore of Detroit. U.S. Coast Guard and other vessels searched for her.

The collision occurred about 10 yards off shore from Belle Isle Hall in the heart of Detroit's downtown area.

Series of Accidents Gives City Police Busy Weekend

Belleville City Police experienced one of its busiest weekends of the year, investigating a total of eight accidents.

A two-car accident at 4.40 a.m. Sunday on Dundas St. East near the Avondale Rd. resulted in $3,350 damage and eastbound lanes to two persons.

Lyle Winfred Weese, 19, R.R. 3 Consecon, driver of one car, and Miss Joan Carol Johnson, Box 14 Hillier, were treated at Belleville General Hospital for minor injuries and released.

Police say the Weese car, owned by Naomi Weese, R.R. 3 Consecon, was proceeding east on Dundas when it was in collision with a car driven by Robert Gordon Jay, 20, of 62 Holmes Rd.

Police say that Roe had been proceeding east on Dundas and was attempting to make a u-turn at the time of the accident.

Passengers in the Roe car were Paul Booth Fralick, 272 Dundas St. W., owner of the car, and Howard Siddall, 12 Applewood Dr.

Weese's car ended up on a lawn. Damage to his car was estimated at $3,000. The complete right side was damaged and it is considered a write-off. Damage to the Roe car was listed as a write-off. Damage to it was estimated at $350.

Roe has been charged with careless driving.

DRIVER CHARGED

Frederick Dougald Smith, 47, of 115 Bridge St. W., has been charged with failing to yield following an accident Saturday afternoon about 2.15 p.m. at the intersection of Catherine and Cedar.

Police say that Smith was proceeding south on Cedar St. when he came to a stop at the corner of Catherine. When he was crossing the intersection he was in collision with a motorcycle driven by John David Walker, 23, R. R. 2, Tweed.

Walker suffered lacerations to both ankles and to his side.

Damage to the motorcycle $450 and to the car $45.

A motorcycle was involved in an accident at 7.41 p.m. Friday in front of 18 Leslie Dr. John Thomas Dolan, 20, of 26 Fisherhill Rd., was driving his motorcycle west on Leslie, when he apparently lost control of the vehicle on a curve and struck the ride side of a parked car owned by Ron Davidson, 16 Leslie Dr. There was $70 damage to each vehicle.

One and one - half year-old Scott Alexander MacDonald, 34 Pine St., was hospitalized Friday night with concussions he suffered after running into the side of a car driven by Ralph Douglas Stewart, 50, of Centreton.

Police say that Stewart was driving at a low rate of speed along Albion St. when two children who had been playing on the west side of the road suddenly ran out in front of him. Stewart applied the brakes and was almost stopped when the boy Donald boy ran into the left front of the car.

MINOR ACCIDENT

A minor accident at 7:30 p.m. Friday on Church St. resulted in $60 damage to two vehicles.

Police say that a car driven by Murray William Cornsel, 36, of R. R. 1 Belleville, was stopped at the corner of Church and Dundas when a car driven by Robert Douglas Atkins, 23, of R. R. 6 Belleville pulled up behind him. Cornsel went to cross the road and apparently backed into the Atkins vehicle.

A two-car accident at 10:40 p.m. Friday on Bleecker Ave. resulted in $75 damage. Police say that a car driven by Norman Ingram Meldrum, 50, of 117 Hastings Dr., was pulling into the traffic after being parked on the west side of Bleecker when it was in collision with a car driven by Michael Gerald Thibeau, 19, of R. R. 7 Belleville. There was $50 damage to the Meldrum car and $25 to the Thibeau car.

A motorcycle driven by Front of the Don Har Parking Lot on Front St., resulted in $50 damage driven by Kenneth Finley at 8 p.m. Police say a car driven by David Allen Lake, 21, of R. R. 1 Harold, had been stopped behind a line of traffic. The traffic started to move again, and Lake was forced to come to a sudden stop. He was struck from behind by a car driven by Kenneth James Ross, 22, of 14 Green St.

City police also reported charges laid against one speeding, one alleged drunk driver, one alleged impaired driver and one person alleged to be driving while under suspension, all on the weekend.

IN MEMORIAM

MARACLE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Clarence Maracle who passed away June 6, 1964.

Sweet memories are a treasure,
Sweetest rest that follows pain.
We miss you more and more dear,
But trust in God to meet again.
Sadly missed and forgotten by wife Ian and family.

JEFFERY — In loving memory of my dear mother (Mrs. L. E. Jeffery) who passed away June 6th, 1965.

Mother dear, you left us one year ago today,
No one knows the pain we have had to bear,
We loved you dearly,
We still miss you dearly,
But God loved you best,
So He took you home to rest.
Lovingly remembered by daughter Hilda, husband Charles and family.

FRY — In loving memory of my dear mother (Mrs. L. E. Fry) who passed away June 6th, 1965.

Mother dear, you left us one year ago today,
Sweet memories are a treasure,
Sweetest rest that follows pain,
We miss you more and more dear,
But trust in God to meet again.
Sadly missed and forgotten by wife Ian and family.

CARTER — In memory of our son Ray who passed away June 6th, 1964.

Ray was a good son,
He was a kind son,
But now he is gone,
Sweet memories will linger always.
Lovingly remembered by Mother Lethbridge, Dady and Ann.

MARACLE — In loving memory of a dear father, Clarence Maracle, who passed away June 6, 1964.

Dad, you left us one year ago today,
Sweet is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for memory to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And now, though absent, is just as dear.
Lovingly remembered by daughter Audrey and Dilly, son-in-law Ken and grandchildren Ricky and Kathy.

within seconds and U.S. Navy frogmen leaped into the water to attach a flotation collar.

The divers reported Stafford and Cernan gave the "thumbs up" signal through their spacecraft window as it bobbed in the four- to five-foot waves.

They appeared in excellent condition, the divers reported.

The astronauts elected to stay in the spacecraft until the Wasp came alongside.

The spacecraft hatch was opened also inside after both down and Stafford and Cernan stood up and waved at the Stafford aboard and with the swimmers.

It was a successful and dramatic end to a flight which had its ups and downs, with one problem after another plaguing the mission before and after the launching.

During 72 hours and 20 minutes in orbit around the Earth, Gord circled the globe 45 times and travelled nearly 1,200,000 miles.

The fiery descent started 160 miles above the Pacific Ocean near the international dateline when the craft's four retro-rockets fired at 1:38 a.m. EDT.

"Your good retros," Cernan shouted to the Canton Island tracking station.

SLOW DOWN SPEED

The orbiting slowed the 17,-460-mile-an-hour speed by 300 miles and Gemini 9, caught in the grip of the Earth's pull, began the meteoric plunge back through the best barrier of the earth's atmosphere.

Only during a four-minute period when 2,000 - degree heat shrouded the craft in a ball of ionization curtain was contact lost with the pilots.

"How you got us incsight," Stafford asked as Gemini 9 drifted down on its 84-foot chute.

The carrier advised that it did and added:

"The whole world has you in sight."

The sailors on the Wasp crowded the deck as the big aircraft carrier turned to approach the spacecraft in the water and haul it aboard. They were cheering the astronauts riding in the tilted cage.

and eliminating lead 53, which superseded.

Stafford and Cernan were to fly to Cape Kennedy in the afternoon.

OFFICIALS ANXIOUS

Gemini officials were anxious to start questioning them about the numerous problems that plagued them in space, primarily the fogged helmet visor that cut Cernan's space walk short after two hours, five minutes—half an hour earlier than intended.

The frosted visor, combined with garbled radio communications, prevented Cernan from making a rocket-powered back pack to manoeuvre in space.

Still, the walk was considered a remarkable success. Cernan was outside the orbiting Gemini 9 six times longer than U.S. astronaut Edward H. White II and 32 times longer than Russian cosmonaut Alexei Leonov—the two other men to venture into the alien weightless world.

"This represents a major milestone," said Gemini Program Manager Charles Mathews. "We've learned a lot more on how hard EVA (extra-vehicular activity) is. We've learned man can go out and become disoriented, not become excited and conduct it with a very rational approach."

The walk overshadowed earlier disappointments in the hard-luck flight where troubles date back to last Feb. 28 when the original crew was killed in a plane crash.

Earlier, the failure of an Atlas - Agena target rocket caused one of three purposes—Isenia and the "angry alligator," a target satellite whose docking collar could not be cleared, prevented a space walk Rukun by Stafford and Cernan.

Stafford, 36, postponed the space walk 4 hours Saturday because he and Cernan were "pushed" after the lengthy pursuit of the target satellite—the third "completed" rendezvous they had executed successfully in 30 hours.

Then, as Cernan was preparing to shove out of an equipment section with the back pack, Stafford learned the fogged visor and communications problems and told a ground station in Hawaii:

"It's about four or five times more work than what we anticipated. And the helmet's long is completely fogged over. Communications are very poor. He sounds like a loud garble.

"If the situation doesn't improve—it's no go on the AMU (astronaut manoeuvring unit)."

IT'S NO GO'

Minutes later, Stafford reported:

"It is fogged over completely . . . It's no go for the AMU. The AMU transfer is far garbled. I can barely read it. I want him to switch back to the spacecraft electrical umbilical line.

Mission Control Centre in Houston, Tex., quickly agreed with the decision.

Cernan rested for a few minutes on his perch in the open equipment section at the rear of the spacecraft, then said the visor was clearing up a bit.

"I can see real good in front of my nose," he said. "But I can't see in front of my eyeballs."

When he could see well enough, Cernan returned to the cabin area of Gemini 9. Stafford asked him, before entering, to retrieve a rearview mirror attached to the nose because sunlight was reflecting from it into his eyes.

As Cernan removed the mirror his visor clouded up again.

Before the trouble, the slender 32-year-old navy lieutenant-commander had been a carefree, free-talking space somersaulter.

DRIFTS IN SPACE

Protected in a 32-pound, 30-layer space suit, Cernan shoved out into the weightless new world and drifted on the end of his 25-foot lifeline.

"It's a strange world out here," he commented.

For nearly an hour Cernan cavorted on the tether, learning how future astronauts might operate in space.

As a 36-minute darkness period moved in and dropped the temperature quickly 360 degrees to 150 degrees below zero, Cernan moved into the equipment bay to hook up with the back pack. Then the trouble began.

Experts on the ground were not certain what caused the fogging or the bad communications.

Mathews said it might have been caused by the excessive heat load that possibly could have prevented the suit temperature control system from operating efficiently.

No Comment From Pearson On Election

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson stayed up late Saturday night to take in the Quebec election results but a spokesman said he would have no immediate comment.

One government informant said a change in government in Quebec doesn't present questions about federal - provincial relations and the prime minister's "co-operative federalism."

Mark Season's Opening With Splendid Sailpast

News in Brief

TRENTON — On Saturday, a bantam on property owned by Howard Moran, York Road, destroyed a mower, a combine and other pieces of machinery as well as demolishing the frame barn. Mr. Moran was insured to the extent of $4,500, although an exact figure on his loss is not known at this time.

Randy Stark, 19, of Trenton was taken to Trenton hospital by Rushnell Ambulance Saturday, around 1 p.m. after his motorbike had been in collision with a car on Dundas Street East. Mr. Stark was treated for a cut foot and allowed to return home.

Lloyd Young, in his 30s, was removed to Kingston hospital Sunday after treatment in Trenton hospital for injuries suffered around 6.45 p.m. Saturday when his car rolled over in the median on 401 highway, five miles west of Trenton. Young is reported to have suffered a fractured pelvis, a punctured lung and a ruptured spleen.

More than 380 youngsters took part in the annual bicycle rodeo at the community parking area Saturday morning.

Vehicles were checked for safety features and the youthful drivers put through mock-ansical tests and oral tests by members of the sponsoring groups, the Trenton police department and the Trenton Kiwanis Club.

NINE ARRESTED

ANNECY, France (AP)—Police announced Sunday the arrest of nine persons implicated in the 1961 plastic-bomb murder of the mayor of Evian, France, where Algerian ceasefire talks were held. Police said one of the arrested, Pierre Fenoglio, 32, has admitted setting the bomb.

TRENTON — Sunday afternoon, 43 sailboats, cruisers and smaller power craft took part in the RCAF Yacht Club sailpast, to mark the opening of the sailing season. Taking the salute from the inland base was the commodore of the club, F/L "Chuck" Patrick.

The wind was 12 to 15 knots and the day was made for sailing, and this was the biggest sailpast at the local club ever. One tip over occurred but the operator, Bruce Dyer and his crew righted it and returned to sail past the saluting base in full sail.

Hundreds turned out to the yacht club's annual open house and applauded the hardy sailors from the island.

On hand to greet the guests were F/L Downey, past commodores, Group Captain E. M. Butcher, commanding officer at RCAF Station, and Wesley Bailey, rear commodore.

The RCAF club was formed in 1962.

Oust Govenor Of Sao Paulo

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP)—Brazil's military dictatorship has removed Adhemar de Barros, controversial governor of Sao Paulo, the country's richest state, apparently because he threatened the chances of the government candidate to succeed him.

President Humberto Castelo Branco also stripped de Barros of his political rights for 10 years and named Lieutenant-Governor Laudo Natel to govern the province until elections scheduled for Sept. 3.

De Barros had helped put Castelo Branco in power two years ago but had strongly opposed his policies in recent months.

be fair some of the figures from various polls may have been transposed.

Apart from Mr. St. Pierre four other Liberal cabinet ministers went under in the Union Nationale avalanche.

First to go down was Labor Minister Carrier Fortin in Sherbrooke. He was followed by Tourism Minister Alphonse Couturier in Riviere-du-Loup, and two ministers without portfolio, Gerard Cournoyer in Richelieu and Albert Morissette in Arthabaska.

Two other leading Liberals to lose their seats were the party's whip, Phil Lalonde in St. Henri and Jean Jacques Bedard, deputy Speaker of the legislative assembly. He was standing in the Quebec City riding of Chauveau.

On the strength of the returns, Mr. Johnson claimed victory for his party, while Premier Lesage said he would have to wait for official confirmation before deciding on the next move.

But observers it seemed clear another election may not be far away.

Based on returns from 15,565 polling stations, or 93.7 per cent, the poll was estimated at about 2,500,000 or just over 72 per cent of the 3,190,304 eligible voters. The percentage vote in 1962 was 79.1 per cent.

The separatist parties, le Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale and le Ralliement National, won no seats.

But between them they took 8.5 per cent of the votes returned by the 15,565 polling stations, apparently cutting into the Liberals.

Main gains for the Union National, long in rural constituencies which believe Montreal considered traditional stronghold of the party. They backed this up in traditionally-Liberal Montreal by winning two seats from the Liberals and capturing a new one, one of 13 added in the province since the last election.

In all, the party gained 25 seats from the Liberals and took two of the new seats.

The Liberals, on the other hand, won strongly in 10 of the 13 new seats, and in another, Robert Baldwin, an independent Liberal, was elected.

The Union Nationale will unquestionably give both of the independentists a special power in the Assembly.

Art Sequin, the independent Liberal elected in the new riding of Robert Laplante, is mayor of the Montreal suburb of Pointe Claire.

He said after the election:

"I was elected as an independent and that's the way I'll go to the Assembly. I'll vote on issues, not by party."

However, he said he would provide some support for the Liberals as "I agree with 85 per cent of their proposed legislation."

The other independent elected was Frank Hanley who has represented the Montreal riding of LONDON (CP)—Britain's Labor government faces a strong attack at home and abroad for its decision to withdraw from the initial project of the European space organization.

The foreign office Saturday told its partners in the European launcher development organization Britain was dropping out of the Blue Streak missile program for technical and economic reasons.

Conservatives here served notice they will challenge the government on the decision.

Officially Britain is not withdrawing from the organization, only from the Blue Streak program, for which it pays 40 per cent, £48,000,000 ($144,000,000) up to the end of this year.

But The Sunday Express said in an editorial British "has opted out of the space race altogether."

FUTURE DOUBTFUL

It is doubtful the Blue Streak project will continue without Britain.

Conservatives took Britain into the organization when they were in power in 1962, signing the first stage of a rocket that would put a one-ton research satellite into orbit by that year for an estimated £70,000,000.

Asked what position he will adopt, he replied:

"I will support the party which offers the best deal to my people in the riding I represent."

Three Police Cars Damaged, Beach Littered

LONG POINT, Ont. (CP)—Provincial police arrested seven youths early Sunday after a brawl during a dance hall crowd of 200 damaged three police cars and littered a nearby beach with empty beer and pop bottles.

Five youths were charged with liquor offences, one with unlawful assembly and one with creating a disturbance and resisting arrest. All were freed on bail and will appear in Simcoe magistrate's court Thursday.

The near-riot started after police arrested George Creed, 20, of Tillsonburg, for creating a disturbance by fighting, and Robert LeRoy Smith, 17, of Woodstock, for being drunk in a public place.

As police led them away, a crowd threw beer bottles at the police cars, breaking the windshields in two and damaging a third. Then they started fighting among themselves, police said.

STAY ON EDGES

"We stayed on the edges and watched the fights one by one," a policeman said. "All the potential of a real explosive riot was there."

Nine police cruisers were called and reinforcements also were summoned from town police, Norfolk County police, Port Rowan town police and the Tillsonburg police department.

It took more than two hours to restore order in the Lake Erie resort town 20 miles south of Simcoe.

FIVE KNOCKED OUT

BREMEN, West Germany (Reuters)—Lightning struck a backyard during a soccer match here Sunday, knocking five players unconscious. One was taken to a hospital with shock but the others quickly recovered.

Tired of It All?

People are getting fed up with working. This is the strange suggestion of a contemporary which quotes Professor John Crispo of the Centre for Industrial Relations of the University of Toronto on the subject of wildcat strikes.

Said Professor Crispo: "They (union members) have had lots of overtime and may simply have wanted to let off steam and get away from it all."

What a way to get away from it all — walking up and down on a picket line. Admittedly, it is often the only way employees can achieve their ends with regard to working conditions and wages. But suggest the Canadian work force is ready to down tools en masse and become like the lotus-eaters of old is to misjudge human nature.

Whatever automation brings about ultimately and it is clear already that many are idle because of it) the desire to acquire knowledge and skills that may be put to work is basic in human nature.

Even allowing for the fact that work may be a routine business, humdrum and often uncongenial, it is infinitely more preferable to idleness. Leisure time, too, is all the more enjoyable with participation in creative activity of one kind or another.

To take seriously the premise that Canadian workers are striking simply to "let off steam and get away from it all," would be to credit them with less intelligence than they have. Granted there is a degree of irresponsibility in many wildcat strikes, but in most cases the causes of such walkouts are the basic ones of wages and working conditions.

And judging by the amount of bargaining on the Canadian labor scene this year there are good grounds for believing that the majority are merely getting a proper share of the prosperity the country is said to be enjoying.

Like the railroaders for example, and the seaway and airline employees, woodworkers in British Columbia, stevedores and hospital employees in Quebec, civic employees in Toronto and Vancouver, and Hydro employees, steelworkers and meatpackers. All have been in various stages of negotiation.

But fed up with work? We hope not. What the nation needs is a renewed dedication to work, even for its own sake. In labor-management circles a greater effort is required of all. Canadians must produce more and sell more Canadian products overseas. Only by such an effort can the scramble for higher wages be justified.

The Supersonic Age

For some, one of the pleasures of airline travel is the opportunity it affords to escape their earthly bonds — at least for a few hours. We are thinking of the longer flights, say from coast to coast in Canada, or across the Atlantic to Europe.

Five or six hours aloft, with the vast kaleidoscope of this country's scenery passing below — the Great Lakes and the prairies and the Rockies — or the other - wordliness of the great cloudbanks that hover over the Atlantic, can be very restful.

For others, such flights are an ordeal, a bore, and they cannot reach their destination soon enough. Some airlines cater to these folk with in-flight movies.

Whatever the passengers' tastes, flying remains the most personalized mode of transport of all. With food and refreshment included in the fare, and attractive stewardesses to serve them, air travellers are the most pampered people imaginable.

But air travel as we know it is on the verge of great changes. In a few years' time supersonic transports will streak across oceans and continents in a fraction of the time it now takes. Already Canadian planes are in the planning stage. They will carry as many as 500 passengers.

When that day comes flying will become more commonplace — rather impersonal, as it one were sitting in the lobby of a large hotel which suddenly acquires wings and a power plant like that of a moon rocket.

But then again, maybe there will be a feeling of greater kinship, with so many people brought together in a strange and unfamiliar environment. It will certainly be swifter and most important, less expensive and confining than air travel as afforded by the subsonic jets in use today.

Aid for Motorists

What with its space achievements, and the less admirable but dreadfully real anti-ground weapon devised to neutralize anti-aircraft positions in North Viet Nam, it is easy to overlook some other advances in United States technology.

One which will assist motorists for example, will be put into effect in September on the beltway in Maryland around the District of Columbia. To summon assistance from police, ambulance or fire stations the driver merely presses a button in a special call box. There is a button for each service. A fourth one will summon aid from a service station.

Acidity Is Not Cause Of Hair Turning Yellow

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes hair to turn gray? Mine was always very dark and I assumed that when it began to turn, it would be very white. Instead, it has a yellowish tinge. Several beautician told me this is caused by an acid condition. How can it be remedied? — Mrs. M.

* * *

Except for treating severe malnutrition, thyroid deficiency and various skin diseases attacking the scalp, there isn't much we can do about controlling the amount, quality and a natural color of the hair.

Diseases with high fever sometimes cause loss of hair, but all we can do is treat the disease and hope the hair will grow back. It usually does. Likewise the tight "pony-tail" hair - does cause some loss.

Other than that, heredity appears to be the most important governing factor. The original color is due to pigments. As a person grows older, the amount of pigments decline, principally because of diminished blood supply to the hair follicles, or to enzyme changes which govern the conversion of melanin into pigments.

In general, these are natural processes. When a person becomes gray very early, it is more likely due to some hereditary defect in the chemistry of pigment formation. People in the best of health become prematurely gray because of this.

Whether the hair then is white or yellowish, depends on the original color, because there can be a mixture of pigments; yellow among others. Darker pigments cover up the yellow; as they fade, the yellow tinge becomes visible.

It is not caused by "an acid condition," and beautician would do their clients a favor by discarding that old wheeze. In fact, acid condition has been used as an explanation for everything from hiccups to hangnails, and used so often that people take it for granted that it means something. Well, it doesn't. Incidentally healthy people maintain an average acidity or lack of it in various parts of the body at only time if varies much and means anything is when a person is seriously ill.

So, if hair, instead of being snowy white, has a yellowish tinge, it is natural.

The color doesn't mean you are sick or need vitamins or anything of that sort.

The yellow may remain, or it may, like the darker color, gradually fade out and leave the hair white or gray. Meantime there's nothing to do about it except to dye it or use a "touch-up." Its a cosmetic matter, not a diagnostic sign.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there a chance of damaging the heart by hitting the steering wheel in a car accident? I had severe pain afterwards. A month later an EGG showed damage to the heart. — L. J.

Yes, the heart muscle can be bruised in such an accident, but in such cases as I have seen it improved promptly and the readings returned to normal in a relatively short time.

A fracture of the sternum (breast bone) also can occur, and cause prolonged chest pain. One might question, therefore, whether after 30 days the damage shown in the EGG reading was the result of bumping of the steering wheel, or was present before the accident.

Why Penalize Good Drivers?

Saskatoon Star - Phoenix

"It isn't the way you drive, it's the way the other fellow drives."

How often have you heard that statement? It comes to mind every time we hear that insurance rates have been raised for a given age group. It pops into our thinking every time you hear theories about how the Government must devise ways and means of preventing accidents.

Unfortunately, those ways and means will never be very popular and governments are wary of eliminating possible voter affection.

If some motorists want to kill themselves on the highways, why knock our selves out worrying about it? The problem is, of course, that they are not the ones who, usually walk away from accidents while the bereavement of their casualties are carried off on stretchers.

The latest Saskatchewan Government Insurance Act figures show that younger drivers are involved in more accidents than older ones. They also show that married men under 25 are more careful.

One answer to the problem is an incentive system whereby men and women who drive carefully, regardless of their age, are given the lowest rates. They'll work to keep those rates down. While every conviction for infractions of driver safety rules, increase the rates for that individual. Don't mess with a few pennies, either. Make the fines stiff and uncompromising enough that if some of these characters loose on our streets and highways don't care about the lives of others, they'll start caring about their pocketbooks.

As things stand now, the biological anachronism of age grouping penalizes the good drivers for the bad. What kind of system is that?

Rugged tests before licensing; rugged requirements for a first probation of safe driving; rugged penalties without compromise when those requirements are breached, that's the formula.

We rely too heavily upon that word "accident" for leniency. At collisions are not accidents. Many are the direct result of stupidity, ignorance, exhibitionism and carelessness.

The cash surplus in the insurance fund may disappear in the first six months of the current motor licence year. We're not for putting the strong arm on everyone who drives a car just so you can have a surplus, but we are for penalizing severely all who are precipitating highway carnage.

Ambulance Services

The Globe and Mail

Help appears to be on the way at last. With green blazing and lights flashing, Ontario's Health Minister, Dr. Matthew Dymond, is coming to the rescue of the province's ailing ambulance system — and certainly not a moment before it was necessary.

First-aid treatment will be administered, to begin with, in the form of a bill authorizing the Government to pay up to half the cost of subsidies to ambulance operators now paid by municipalities, local boards of health and other organizations. Then must come a thorough diagnosis of the sickness and to that end Dr. Dymond will apply the resources of a task force of civil servants from his department.

Ontario's hodge-podge of ambulance services and their liveries have been studied on a number of other occasions but hasty investigations have failed to answer all of the many questions arising from the disconnected, and, from organization, the members of ambulances needed and the treatment in which they are trained. These services are too vital to be left in the disordered state in which they have grown. This may not be the study to end all studies, but we hope it is the last necessary about taking action.

Girl Watching No Crime

Kingston Whig-Standard

There are two rather puzzling things about the recent "girl watching" case in Toronto. The fact that the man was charged at all and the fact that he pleaded guilty to a charge of "prowling by night" in the form he did.

The truth of the matter is that a great deal of fuss was raised over nothing, and we can all thank the magistrate hearing the case for putting the whole matter in its proper perspective.

Police said they found the man seated in his car atop a parking garage and using binoculars to watch nurses in a nearby residence getting ready for bed. There was nothing unlawful about that, ruled the magistrate after a perusal of the Criminal Code. "He was not prowling unlawfully on other people's property if he was found sitting quietly in his own car, and he paid to get into the parking garage," he said. If everybody policed their blinds doors at night there would be nothing to look at."

The magistrate suggested that the charge be withdrawn and, while the Crown Counsel agreed, he said he felt he should be warned "not to do it again."

Warned not to break a law that he was not breaking in the first place? Quite properly the magistrate said that he couldn't be a party to that: "So long as he is not breaking the law, he can do it as often as he wants for all I care.

It seems a pity that cases such as this one should ever get as far as a court of law. (And, by the way, we wonder what the charge might have been under similar circumstances but during the hours of daylight). Common sense might have told the police that they had no case.

Girl-watching in one form or another has been going on for a long, long time and undoubtedly will continue so long as there are women to be watched and men to do the watching. As for women who object to being stared at as they disrobe at night, the solution, as the magistrate in this case put it, is simple: Pull the shades. The fact that some of them don't bother to do so suggests that they don't think it's at all that important. Neither do we.

Far Fields Look Green

Fort William Times-Journal

There are some curious anomalies to the organized search for what our economy is supposed to be distinctly Canadian artistic expression. No less an authority than the noted Canadian landscape painter, A. Y. Jackson, deplores one of the odd things we do for the development of painting.

The Canada Council, he complains, sends a lot of money to young Canadian artists to visit Europe while our Canadian landscape is neglected.

Possibly a tour of Europe is necessary to broaden and mature Canadian artists. On the other hand, one wonders if government-financed European art journeys consider a visit to North America essential to the maturity of European painters. What Mr. Jackson seems to be saying is that not enough Canadian artists are being encouraged to seek inspiration in their own homeland.

They'll work to keep those rates down. While every conviction for infractions of driver safety rules, increase the rates for that individual. Don't mess with a few pennies, either. Make the fines stiff and uncompromising enough that if some of these characters loose on our streets and highways don't care about the lives of others, they'll start caring about their pocketbooks.

As things stand now, the biological anachronism of age grouping penalizes the good drivers for the bad. What kind of system is that?

School Regimentation

Hamilton Spectator

In Cobourg a lively dispute has erupted about the suspension of a collegiate student because he went home for lunch. Collegiate board rules in the district say all students must stay on school property during the lunch period.

This is another example of school regimentation.

There does not seem to be any good reason why the student should not be allowed to go home. He lives just across the street and there is no question about him leaving for the re-sumption of afternoon classes.

Reports indicate the boy's parents had given their consent for wanting him to come home. The school board's reasons for making the rule are that it would "... help raise the level of academic achievement of the students."

There can be no objection to the Cobourg collegiate setting the lunch period at one hour, period is only 40 minutes. This is done in most high schools and both parents and students are delighted to have the students stay at school without the added hassle of coming home for a home and back in the limited time available. There are no frills between the 40 minutes of lectures that forbid a student from going home to lunch.

It is the immature truth that the young person concerned is the one who will benefit when his father has brought the matter to public attention. Whether it lives in the city or not, the boy will be marked by students and teachers alike. He is not attend-

Grand Canyon Dams Issue

St. Catharines Standard

The issue of constructing dams upstream and downstream from the Grand Canyon of Arizona is being debated in the United States by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. Before Congress at the present time is a bill authorizing the construction of the first of two dams as part of a plan to provide needed water for Arizona.

Opposed to the project are conservationists who point out that the sole purpose of the dams is not to store water, but to produce power, and this fact is not denied. "These dams are cash registers," says a U.S. department of interior spokesman. "They will ring up sales of electric power." And there is the suggestion that the power sale would pay Arizona's share in the water supply project.

The real issue, however, is not financial. It is that of retaining the fast diminishing wild beauty of the world, of which the Grand Canyon is a notable example.

Case for Educational TV

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Someone involved in educational television in my city recently asked me why I have not given editorial support to the educational television station we have had for 10 years.

I replied that while the project was a worthy one, and was performing a useful function, I didn't approve of the idea of separating "commercial" from "educational" television.

For one thing, starting such a station takes the commercial channels off the hook. Why should the public pay for special station to do what the highly prosperous commercial stations should be doing with a share of their profits?

The programming on national networks is dismal enough, but it only is the entertainment part largely moronic, but the "public service" segment is scrappy, grudging, superficial, and mostly tucked away in time slots that reach a minimum of viewers.

Running a television station—like operating a radio station—is a big business, and not a private venture But, despite their sanctimonious protestations, owners of TV channels pay only the most perfunctory lip-service to the public trust implicit in their stewardship. They put on just barely enough imitative programs to keep their franchise.

And their argument that it's the task of viewers to show more care for informative programs is shabby and irrelevant. Newspapers publish many things that the majority of readers are not interested in — shipping news, stock-market reports, all of it and book reviews, to name but a few — as a service to the community which they do care. This is the only way they can honestly discharge their obligation in the field of public communication.

If the "educational" aspect of television is separated from the "commercial," then the operators of commercial channels are being relieved of their explicit responsibility to offer well-balanced programming that appeals to the mature mind and is cultivated and not merely to those who want to be narcotized by music, comedy and drama.

There is certainly a place for an educational station that can do a specialized job for the classroom, or in handling topics with more depth and sophistication than the commercial channels. But, just as newspapers give much free space for charity and non-commercial causes, I can't see why the commercial channels should be permitted to shirk their obligation to provide much more time, talent and funds to sharing this load.

Commercial TV should learn from other groups in society, that the best way to avoid federal control of your activities is to do yourself what needs to be done, before the government steps in and does it for you.

Two Men Burned to Death When Motor Car Struck From Behind During Storm

A flaming two-car crash on Highway 401 late Saturday night east of the city killed two men.

Dead are airmen Frank Demers, 27, 95 Golden Dr., Belleville, and Joseph Henry Lantagne, 27, of Quebec City. They were killed instantly.

Police believe the compact car the two men were driving was either stopped or travelling slowly on the highway with its lights out when it was struck from behind by a car driven by Charles Tatham, 22 of Redmerville Rd.

Mr. Tatham had three passengers in his car, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown, Ville La Salle, Quebec and Louise Brown, 19, of Redmerville Rd. They were not injured.

The accident occurred during heavy rain about 10.30 p.m. Saturday near the Rupert Leeming side-road, about seven miles east of Belleville.

The compact car burst into flames when struck and the two men inside were burned to death.

The Belleville Fire Department was called to the scene to extinguish the flames.

The OPP investigated.

On Friday night police arrested eight men, four of them members of the ILA whose 4,200 members have been on strike in Montreal, Quebec City and Trois-Rivieres for four weeks.

The men were released on bail of $100 each and are expected to be charged later this week with disorderly conduct, damaging property and consuming alcoholic beverages in a public place.

The arrests were made after a fire was started in the ruins of four cars which were dynamited Friday night as some 75 policemen brandishing nightsticks patrolled the harbor area.

In Montreal, union lawyer Phil Cutler said Sunday the ILA will not negotiate with the Shipping Federation of Canada or any other group until it receives the federation's counter demands in writing.

He said the ILA submitted its contract demands to federal Labor Minister John Nicholson at his request. Mr. Cutler added he doesn't believe the federation has done the same because the ILA hasn't received them or heard about them.

the murder charges was to have begun June 13.

Durocher was also awaiting sentence June 10 for conviction of 30 armed robberies to which he had pleaded guilty.

He broke out of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary in suburban Montreal in March, 1963 with Rivard. Rivard now is serving a 20-year sentence in Atlanta, Ga. for trafficking in narcotics, after being recaptured five months after the escape.

Durocher, who was captured a few weeks earlier, was also mentioned in court testimony Friday as having been implicated in a $1,400,000 mail truck robbery in Montreal two years ago.

When Rivard was captured he (Rivard) had $18,000 in his possession. The Bank of Montreal is suing for possession of the money, claiming it is part of the mail truck haul.

Paquette was alleged to have been the man who undertook to divide the loot from the robbery and Miss Rioux was described as his housekeeper.

Good Crowds In Attendance At Horse Show

PICTON (STAFF) — Picton Kiwanis Club, this weekend held their annual Spring Horse Show and again good crowds were in attendance. The Saturday night performance was to a crowded arena, probably one of the best "gates" since the club has been sponsoring the show.

Starting off Friday night they continued the scintillating show through Saturday afternoon and evening. A club spokesman said that many were of the opinion the afternoon show, which was held out of doors in front of the grandstand, was a better showing than the events held indoors. It included a western show and also jumpers performed outside as footing was not too good on the dirt floor of the arena.

Many entries from throughout the area participated and provided great entertainment for old and young alike. As in years past, comedy acts were included and the crowds enjoyed watching the children's fancy dress turnouts. All in all it was splendid entertainment and many fine classes of horses were shown.

How come 3,850,000 Canadians are insured by Metropolitan Life -more than any other company?

Mostly, it's because our customers like the way we treat them—and their money.

With 2,160 full-time representatives across the country, Metropolitan always has someone nearby to give personal attention to every claim or question.

And, whether you need a thousand dollars of insurance or $5 million, Metropolitan has a complete range of life and health plans from which to tailor a program just for you.

Metropolitan pays policyholders and beneficiaries an average of more than two and a quarter million dollars a week. Nearly two-thirds of that money goes to living policyholders.

And one out of every two Metropolitan Life policies bought, is bought by one of our present policyholders. These are a few of the reasons why 3,850,000 Canadians have chosen Metropolitan.

Remember, the company you get your insurance from can make a difference—a very big difference in the security that you provide for your family.

Call your local Metropolitan adviser. He will be pleased to give you a Family Security Check-Up, which may turn up assets you never knew you had. There's no obligation . . . except to those you love.

In the graduating class of 1966, from Kingston General Hospital, there are several girls from Belleville and these include (left to right) Miss Linda Clare, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Clare; Miss Carolyn James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. James; Miss Sally MacKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. MacKenzie; Miss Esther Sato, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sato. All are graduates of B.C.I. and V.S. Graduating exercises are being held tonight in Grant Hall, Queen's University.

Women's Institutes

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The June meeting of the Plainfield Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Ray Sullivan with the president, Mrs. Art Wright in the chair.

It was decided to exhibit in the Institutes' booth at Belleville Fair in August.

It was decided that the branch send a petition to County Council recommending the improvements in the addition to Hastings Manor and the new County Home in Bancroft, as outlined in a letter received by all branches of the Institute from a resident of Hastings Manor.

The members will cater to a dinner on June 15th at Vanderwater Park.

The 4-H Club members were guests at this meeting. The ten girls modelled their clothes which they made in their last project. Cathy Sullivan gave her commentary on "the well-dressed girl." Each girl was presented with a crystal water glass. The leaders were also presented with a gift.

The program on citizenship was given by Mrs. Harrison. As her topic she used "How to bring your child up to be a good citizen."

Mrs. B., Emmerson gave a humorous reading on the laboratory, saturday dishwasher.

Mrs. Marshall conducted a contest on the flower emblems of the Canadian provinces, and on names of the largest Canadian cities.

Wants Benefits Applied to Home Service

EDMONTON (CP)—Insurance benefits available to a patient in hospital also should apply to home nursing service, says Constance Swinton, director of the Victorian Order of Nurses for the Province.

"It costs much less to care for a person in his own home than it does in hospital," says the Edmonton-born Miss Swinton.

"Some patients recovering from surgery or with certain medical conditions may require as many as three visits a day. However, not only is cost less than hospitalization, but many people are also happier being cared for in their own homes."

In Edmonton, it costs $3.25 a visit for a VON call.

Miss Swinton says she hopes to see more recognition of the value of home care services to the chronically ill and aged.

She says that the provincial hospitals, the auxiliary hospitals and the nursing homes are quite well established. "It's logical that in community health services home nursing will be the fourth type of care to aim for."

Visiting nursing service is provided by the VON nurses and staff of the public health units. The VONs provide treatment services and bedside care and the public health staff teach and counsel.

Miss Swinton says financing of home nursing could be established as an insurable service under existing hospital or medical care schemes.

The four Alberta VON branches serving 8 per cent of the province are paid for by provincial and municipal grants, united community funds and the patients' fees.

COMBATING MILDEW AND MUST

Dampness, darkness, humidity, poor ventilation, and soil are the ingredients that promote the growth of mildew molds and the musty odor that goes with them.

Whenever possible, keep closets, drawers, trunks and basements aired out periodically. Open the windows and let cool dry air blow through. It will oppose the dampness with it . . . Remember, cool air holds less moisture than warm air.

Hang garments in closets as loosely as possible so that air can circulate around them, and place any leather goods such as shoes and luggage on a shelf, rather than leaving them on the floor where they may become mildewed.

If you are having trouble with a slight musty odor in one particular closet, sometimes a small electric light left burning will be sufficient to provide enough dry heat to burn up any dampness.

Cedar oil diluted in water and sprayed along baseboards is a wonderful musty odor preventive.

A few pieces of charcoal wrapped loosely in a cloth and left in an offending chest or closet for a week or so will help absorb musty odors.

Occasionally, especially if a house has been closed up, turning on the furnace, or a heater, or lighting a stove for an hour or so will get rid of any dampness that might induce mildew. Along with this, of course, a good airing through by opening doors and windows will let out the moisture-laden air.

LUGGAGE AND LEATHERS

If mildewed, wipe off with vinegar, or with wood alcohol, diluted with water — about half and half. Just use a cloth dampened in either solution. Dry well in the sun. Apply a coat of clear self-polishing wax — or apply saddle soap to leather goods.

MILDEWED WHITE CLOTHES

Treat in any of the following ways:

A) Soak in sour milk overnight — then launder as usual.

B) Wash in very hot detergent solution.

C) Moisten with lemon juice and salt and dry in sun.

D) Bleach with laundry, starch in 3 parts peroxide bleach and rinse well.

Flower Arranging School Meets Success in Ottawa

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — "Watching someone make a Japanese flower arrangement is like watching a classical pianist perform," says Mrs. Maurice Jefferies.

"It looks easy, but it isn't."

The Japanese art represents the philosophical relationship of heaven, earth and man in three flowers or branches, say Mrs. Jefferies, president of Ottawa's newest school of flower arranging.

It takes up to 10 years of study to qualify to be a teacher."

She began studying two years ago after a trip to Japan with her husband, veteran parliamentary correspondent for the Windsor Star.

"We visited the Sogetsu school in Tokyo. There are many different schools of flower arranging in Japan but this one has adapted the traditional form to Western tastes."

In the strictest schools, only bare branches are used because the emphasis is always on the line of the whole arrangement rather than on the color and shape of flowers.

"We are not as inclined to see beauty in a branch. All of us used to think the designs weren't finished."

TRAINED AS NURSE

But under the instruction of a Japanese teacher, she and some others of her group have reached the first certificate level of the art. The certificates are awarded through the Tokyo school.

Mrs. Jefferies, a tall blonde, was born in Paris, Ont., and grew up in Chatham, Ont., where she trained as a nurse.

"I've always loved flowers—it almost killed me when I had to put the patients' bouquets in jam jars."

Her married daughter, Janet, 25, is also a nurse in Toronto, and son Stephen, 25, works for the department of external affairs. The newest member of the family is Mandy, a friendly black puppy.

"She's a spoodle—part spaniel and part poodle."

The Jefferies' home, a split-level overlooking the Rideau River, is filled with flowers—traditional Canadian and modern Japanese.

The Sogetsu school here boasts of the formation of a second Ikebana group, including the wives of foreign diplomats as well as Ottawa women.

KITCHENS BETTER

"Actually, Ikebana means a flower arranging, but this group is more concerned with understanding the cultures of different countries."

At the monthly meetings, members discuss their national customs and sometimes prepare a typical national diet.

"I think women need to know each other much better in each other's kitchens. It's not like going to a cocktail party or sitting around in the living room, where everybody is being terribly polite and distant."

The Sogetsu school meets every two weeks for a course of eight lessons costing $25. "That's not much when you consider you get eight flower arrangements to take home." The designs last for almost two weeks before the traditional method of cutting the flowers under water so air doesn't seal off the stems.

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD

FOXBORO — The June meeting of St. Andrew's Guild and W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Manthorpe on Wednesday with a good attendance. Miss Tena Watt presided and the devotional was taken by Mrs. Buskard and meditation by Mrs. Skinner. A reading was given by Mrs. Chappelle and Mrs. Manthorpe gave the topic on "Faith" taken from the Book of James. Collection was received and Mrs. Juby invited the Guild for the July meeting.

Mrs. Skinner spoke briefly and made the presentation of a tray to Mrs. Manthorpe, who is leaving for B.C. in the near future. Mrs. Chappelle made the presentation of a leather writing case to Mrs. Smith, who is leaving the end of June. Mrs. Manthorpe closed the meeting and refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Manthorpe.

Mrs. Skinner moved a vote of thanks to the hostess.

Deserves Spanking From Friend's Mom

DEAR DORIS: Several weeks ago I was summoned to court because of parking tickets I have never paid, but filed them away in a drawer.

When I found out how much all the fines were, I didn't have enough to cover them. So I asked one of my girl friends for the remainder until I get paid. She didn't have the money so she asked her mother for it. I got the money and paid the fine.

That same night I was invited to their house for dinner. After dinner my friend's mother lectured me on how lazy I was to drive a car when my work is only eight blocks away from my place. She went on to say that if a girl like me could get myself into as much trouble she deserved a good old-fashioned spanking. Then I told her that my parents had never spanked me in my life.

She then picked up a hairbrush and spanked me. I never knew how much it could hurt. When she finished she said that it was for my own good and that I should have had more.

Do you think that she was in the right to do this? — SURPRISED.

DEAR SURPRISED: Tell me, did the spanking help? Sooner or later you will be taking a beating of some sort for the things you neglect. Whether you would prefer a fine, or a spanking, for being rejected by other people you consider friends, it will come one way or another.

Right now could be a great big turning point for you. Will you allow yourself to be turned into becoming a respectable young woman? I hope so.

P.S.: No, the lady who walloped you did not have the right to do it. You took the law in her own hands — "for your own good."

* * *

DEAR DORIS: Did you ever hear of a woman middle aged forgetting about all cooking? It's not that I hate to do it; I'm getting so I don't know how!

I get so frightened. When I do the meal I forget how long to cook it. Has it happened to anyone before? — VERY FRIGHTENED.

DEAR FRIGHTENED: Oh, sure it has. People blank out sometimes when they have been jarred or had a shock or are just plain tired.

I'm sending you my leaflet "Facing Forty" in case your times of life has something to do with it. I'm also sending you to your doctor, if you haven't seen him lately. There's help to be had.

(Note to readers: "Facing Forty" can give information and comfort to the ladies who are experiencing unfamiliar symptoms which may be related to their age. It is available for ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

* * *

Confidential to DOUBLE STANDARD: Double is right. When you complain about your husband's all-day absences, he tells you that you're acting like a baby and that he is a big boy and can take care of himself! It ain't funny, McGee!

I see rocks ahead — apart from the ones in his head. Since you can't talk with him, talk with a counselor. Your resource in Belleville is the Family Counselling Service of Belleville and Hastings County, 63 West Moira Street.

* * *

Confidential to SONNY'S MOTHER: Your letter rambles, like your problems. A person can be well-nigh paralyzed when too many problems go round and round.

One overloaded mother's letter was prone to abdicate all responsibility at times and settle down to making a velvet pincushion. Not too good a solution, but at least it settled her nerves.

Best of all is what the social workers call fragmentation: making a list of problems, then tackling them one at a time. You select the easiest one first, simply refusing to give any thought or anxiety to the next on the list, until the first is finished.

Once you get the hang of it you can really get somewhere.

DEAR DORIS: This is in answer to "Mrs. S. Also Short." She shows great wisdom in determining a person by character, good deeds, and being able to rise above handicaps that some men or women. — ALSO MRS. S.

* * *

DEAR ALSO: Right. Yet this is the sort of idea that sounds simply corny to the young and uninitiated.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: Can anything be done to commit an alcoholic for treatment if he does not want to go?

How does one get a person admitted to an institution? — A.K.

DEA RA.K.: I have known of cases in which a wife has pressured her husband into taking treatment for alcoholism under threat of deserting him. But it didn't work a cure. Far better when the alcoholic himself has admitted his plight and sought help.

On the signature of two doctors, or on a court order, persons well addicted to alcoholism have been committed for limited periods and have received treatment.

The family doctor or county health unit will give you advice about any individual case. And since those close to such a one usually need to know more about the disease, it's a good practice to consult the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation, 34 Harbord Street, Toronto.

DEAR DORIS: At school our physical education teacher makes us run for the whole hour. He doesn't do it himself, but selects kids from our group to show us the exercise. Please tell me if six minutes could be dangerous if one is running on the spot for that length of time. — ALL TIRED OUT.

DEAR ALL TIRED OUT: Has your general health been checked by the school doctor? I don't expect he plays, ed. teacher would ask pupils to exercise beyond reasonable limits. Most of us need more exercise than we get.

By the time he teaches several classes he doubtless gets more than his share. No more need for him to keep pace with you than for your English teacher to write a composition on the topic she gives you.

Home and School News

HILLCREST SCHOOL

The final meeting of the year of the Hillcrest Home and School Association was held on Monday evening. The president, Mrs. Mildred McMechan opened the meeting by extending a warm welcome, to all.

A summary of the past year's Home and School meetings was given by the secretary, Mrs. Dorothy Schamerhorn. Mrs. McMechan discussed the year's achievements which included obtaining school crests for the students and receiving a bookmark membership from District Council for substantially increasing Home and School membership.

Mr. Dale, school principal expressed thanks on behalf of the teaching staff for the help received from the executive and for the good quality meetings presented during the year.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

Mr. J. Welch of District Council installed the new slate of officers, for 1966-67. They are president, Mr. Robert Schamerhorn; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Tilly Ward; 2nd vice-president, Mr. Clifford Belch; treasurer, Mrs. Muriel Gagne; recording secretary, Mrs. Marjorie Hughes; corresponding secretary Mrs. Dorothy Stoliker; membership chairman, Mrs. Dorothy Hudgins; room rep. chairman Mrs. Doreen Lucas; social chairman, Mrs. Jean McPeak; social committee, Mrs. Barbara Crain and Mrs. Shirley Ivy.

Mr. Schamerhorn assumed his new office of president and presented Mrs. McMechan with a tea for her past years of service.

Mrs. Dorothy Schamerhorn introduced the guest speaker for the evening, W/O/ J. Sword, who served in the Middle East during the war and later with the United Nations. Mr. Sword spoke briefly and presented slides of the Middle East and Holy Land. The slides were most enjoyable as well as informative.

Mr. Clifford Belch thanked W/O Sword.

The meeting adjourned and refreshments were served.

JUST LIKE HOME — Danielle Wattripont had no trouble with her job as a French Hansard reporter when she came to Canada from Paris in 1963. She had worked in a similar job for the municipal council of Paris where she heard many regional accents and Canadian French was just another one. An innovation of recent years for Hansard reporters is the stenotype machine she uses to take down the debate. (CP Photo)

Long Holidays Best Part Of Hansard Reporter's Job

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — One thing that keeps Danielle Wattripont in Ottawa is the amount of time she can spend away from it.

Her job as a reporter in the House of Commons for French Hansard gives her holidays as long as six months in a year—some years.

"Last year we had three months for the summer recess, and three months because of the election. But the year before it was very bad. We worked all through the summer."

Miss Wattripont, 34, is a fragile brunette, with a pixyish sprinkling of freckles and big brown eyes. She's worked on Parliament Hill since she came to Canada from Paris in 1963. Her job corresponds to that of a courtroom shorthand reporter.

She likes to go back to Paris —and London and Rome, and Athens. That's where the holidays come in.

"I like to live in a big city—it's a certain feeling, a style of life. You can enjoy things for themselves. But Ottawa is a city —well, a town — completely without atmosphere."

But the natives are friendly— "I must say I've met some very nice people here" — and Danielle will stay as long as she has her freedom a few weeks of the year.

SAME JOB AS BEFORE

She came to Canada "because I wanted to visit some country for a few weeks or months." Since her twin sister Micheline had travelled to Montreal a few months before, Danielle decided to start there.

"I was lucky, because right away I met the editor who is my boss now, and he offered me the job. It is exactly the same work as I had been doing in France."

She had been a reporter at the municipal council of Paris, an assembly with about 200 members. "I used to hear all kinds of regional accents there, so the Canadian accent just seemed like another new one."

The reporters of Hansard—the verbatim record of Commons debates—work when the House is sitting. Normally this is a 33-hour work week—2:30 to 10 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 2:30 to 6 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday.

There are at least two Hansard reporters on the floor of the House at a time, one English and one French. They work on a relay system.

FOND OF TRAVEL

Only in recent years have women occupied this role. Danielle takes down on a stenotype machine, another innovation of recent years, only the speeches made in French.

"I had hardly anything to do in the Munsinger debate, because not much French was spoken. But the capital punishment debate kept us busy."

She usually drives to work in the black - and - white Austin-Healey Sprite she bought on her trip to England last year.

She drove it all through France and Spain, then to Bulgaria with an Ottawa friend who was going to take up a posting there. The return trip took her through Greece and Italy.

"Travel is my hobby," she says, but she also likes to read modern French writers like Sartre and Camus.

This winter she started skiing, "I should have done it before," she reports enthusiastically.

She buys most of her size-five clothes in Europe. "All I've bought in Ottawa since I came was a pair of shoes. But that's probably just a habit."

STRIKE OUT ALONE

In West Germany, 736,000 women make up 12 per cent of the total of self-employed business and professional people.

Ann Landers
Hubby's Talking Jags By Phone Expensive

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a working man and has always made a modest salary. We have managed to raise and educate our four children by following my mother's rule. "Eat it all. Wear it out. Sew it up. Do without."

Now that the children are on their own, things could be a lot easier financially, except for one thing. My husband goes on a drinking spree every two or three weeks and places long-distance telephone calls to friends all over North America. He calls people he hasn't seen in years, like his old Marine buddies. I can tell by his end of the conversation that some of these people don't even remember him.

ANN LANDERS

Furthermore, I can't get it through his head about the different time zones. We live in Santa Barbara. Last night he called a buddy in Buffalo at 11:00 p.m. and wondered why he didn't get a big hello. He got mad and yelled, "How do you like that jerk — asleep at 11:00 o'clock?"

I tried to explain that while it is 11:00 o'clock in California it is 2:00 a.m. in New York. He said I was crazy.

It burns me up that I have to hunt for bargains to save a few pennies on canned goods while my husband squanders hundreds of dollars on drunken nonsense that he can't even remember the next day. Please tell me what to do. — VERY ANNOYED.

DEAR VERY: Ask around and determine if any of your local friends have husbands who are similarly afflicted. The boys could form a group known as Telephone Drunks Anonymous. Then they get stiff they can call each other up and talk their heads off. This would be a heckuva lot cheaper than calling Buffalo.

If you can't turn up anyone, try waving last month's phone bill before his bloodshot eyes when he begins to go off the deep end. It might help—depending on how smashed he is.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I had an appointment with my doctor today and something happened that upset me terribly.

When the nurse left the room I picked up the doctor's chart. I had read only a few sentences when the nurse rushed back into the room, snatched the chart from my hands and shouted, "You are not supposed to see this."

I said, "Why not? It's about me, isn't it? The nurse did not answer. She went to the doctor and told him that I had begun to read the chart and had got angry when she took it away.

The doctor sided with the nurse and I blew my top. I told him if I couldn't see the chart I didn't want to see him either. He said, "If that's the way you feel, good-bye."

Please tell me if this is a common practice or is my doctor just plain mean. — EAU CLAIRE, WIS.

DEAR EAU CLAIRE: I know of no physician who allows his patients to see the charts — and for very good reason.

A chart contains the doctor's impressions and suspicions. A patient might interpret these notations as a final diagnosis and be unduly concerned.

If you described the nurse's behaviour accurately she was unnecessarily rough with you. I think she owes you an apology — and you owe the doctor one.

Following the reception they were entertained at the home of Councillor and Mrs. Donald Reid Napanee.

Women's Institutes
SIDNEY SOUTH W.I.

The highlight of the public relations program of the June meeting of Sidney South Women's Institute was the tour of "The Intelligencer" and of C.J.B.Q.

Mr. Don Cameron conducted the group and explained the process of putting news the daily paper from the gathering of the news, and setting up of each column on the linotype machines, the mats, the press, and the labelling before The Intelligencer was ready for the street. Mr. Cameron and his helper demonstrated the process of sizing and developing pictures in the dark room and showed the library, where an issue of each paper is kept in volumes through the years, since printing began in Belleville.

In the C.J.B.Q. studio, Mr. Frank Murray and Mr. Hamlin MacDonald were co-hosts on the guided tour. Tapes of commercials were being prepared and programs on both A.M. and A.F. were being broadcast. The teletype was shown and also the Stedo library with its many recordings. Special references was made to the award won by the station by the "Canadian Broadcaster," a first in broadcasting for two consecutive years. There were many other awards on display.

Following the tour the members gathered at the home of Mrs. Wilmot Sherk for a short business meeting. It was decided to accept an invitation to begin a "Friendship Link" with an Institute in New Zealand. The local leaders of the 4-H Clubs announced that Katherine Mywaart won a two-week course in Guelph and Brenda Douglas, Wendy Windsor and Debbie Meddings also attained County honors at the recent achievement day. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ken Jones, Mrs. Gordon Wilman and Mrs. Carman Dafoe.

Mrs. Gordon Wilman is to be hostess for the July meeting on historical research.

We've enough track to orbit the earth. And then some. With 35,000 miles of track, we go to every big city. To most major towns. To thousands of communities along the way. To steel mills. And saw mills. And scores of mines - out of the way. In all ten provinces. We ran 145 freight trains along this track every day last year. And handled more freight than any other single carrier in Canada. Some 25% more. And we're bound to top that soon—Canada has a lot of resources no one's tracked down yet.

Winner in Que. Election Shows Quality as Fighter

MONTREAL (CP)—An uphill battle to pull together a party shattered by the death of an authoritarian leader and wrecked by political scandal ended today in a victory for Daniel Johnson, Union Nationale leader.

Mr. Johnson, dapper, quiet-spoken man who loves cars, fully at the world through horn-rimmed glasses, got direct sight of the prospect of government leadership Sunday night as results of the Quebec general election kicked in with their seemingly definite victory for his party.

The 51-year-old politician began his career in 1946, winning election as the Union Nationale member for Bagot, the riding he still holds.

The history 20 years ago brought him into the Union National government of the late Maurice Duplessis, who took the 35-year-old member under his wing and later advanced him through the ranks.

Mr. Johnson was made the premier's parliamentary assistant in 1944, Treasurer in 1955 and hydraulic resources minister in 1958.

BAD LUCK STRIKES PARTY

Then, suddenly, the following year the tightly-controlled party lost its guiding hand with the death of Mr. Duplessis. And that time on bad luck seemed to dog the party.

Paul Sauve, chosen leader died after barely five months as premier and the next party chief, Antonio Barrette, led the party into a defeat in the 1960 elections in which he now out-going Liberal government took power.

The Liberal government, which ended 16 consecutive years of power for the Union Nationale, ultimately fell victim to the Salves inquiry into government purchasing which revealed political corruption in the patronage under the Duplessis regime.

The mild-mannered man from Bagot then showed his quality as a fighter, wrestling leadership of the shrunken party from Mr. Barrette and setting into motion a program to "rejuvenate" and make more democratic the structure and membership of the Union Nationale.

In 1952, he led the party into the provincial elections and the Union Nationale again lost, with the Liberals increasing their majority in the legislature.

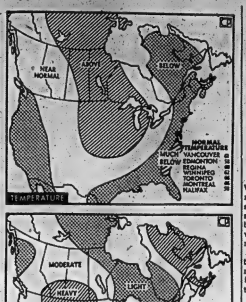
INTEGRATES YOUTH

Mr. Johnson immediately began preparing the party for its next campaign, increasing efforts to remove what has been called the "old guard" by measures such as integration of youths and women into the regular party, rather than having them belong to separate federations.

With these efforts, he was able to mount a state for Sunday's election which included only 10 persons who date back to the pre-1960 era.

The battle for this election called for an all-out effort. Mr. Johnson believed, as it was the "moment of truth" in which it would either win—or be wiped out. He fought the electoral campaign battle at every level, saying repeatedly that his party was against dehumanizing "big government which, he said, the Liberals had become.

He also attacked the Liberals for spending too much money. Whittle-stopping through the province he charged that Liberal spending policies were leading to debt and increased taxation which would bankrupt the province. He preferred the "pay as you go" policy of Mr. Duplessis.



FAVORS DISTINCTION

Mr. Johnson also adopted a strongly nationalistic line, saying that Canada and Quebec should be recognized as two distinct "nations" and that the province should receive 100 per cent of tax revenues originating in Quebec. Taxes which should come entirely under provincial jurisdiction included income tax, corporation taxes and the succession duties.

For Mr. Johnson, father of four children, the campaign strategy paid off.

Among the steps he has announced he will take are measures to safeguard the French language in the province. These include making French a "priority language" and the establishment of a French-language news service which could receive support from the government in indirect fashion.

Despite his partly Irish-sounding name, Mr. Johnson is a thorough - going French-speaking Canadian having studied entirely in that language.

Expect

bigness attitudes arise partly from "Latin ties" with France.

Among the issues facing the 16 foreign ministers here are several crucial questions:

1. Should NATO's council be shifted from Paris to be placed alongside Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers, Europe, which de Gaulle has ordered out of France?

2. Should the 14 insist that the command of 72,000 French troops in West Germany be linked politically, as well as militarily, with those of other NATO countries?

As the 14 foreign ministers gathered to repair the damaged alliance, French Premier Martin said he is convinced the NATO council will be left undisturbed in Paris.

Belgian Prime Minister Paul Van Den Boeynants has agreed to consider accepting SHAPE on Belgian soil, but without the military bases linked with it. SEES NO SURPRISE

That means Canada and the United States will have to look elsewhere for relocation of the two Canadian and nine U.S. bases that de Gaulle wants removed from France by next April. A Canadian official said there will be no difficulty.

Britain, West Germany and the United States are reported to want the ministerial council pulled out of Paris.

Canada and a number of other countries have been struggling to moderate the American view and Martin, after conferring with Dean Rusk and other foreign ministers, became more confident of victory.

While the most immediate issue is how to meet the challenge posed by de Gaulle's initiative and still maintain a surface display of Western unity, other pressures are building up, mainly among the smaller European powers, to find some way of breaking the East-West deadlock and launching fruitful negotiations with the Soviet Bloc.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko has proposed a European peace conference, attended by Europeans only.

Martin said Canada would want to participate, however, because a major issue in East-West negotiations would be the future of divided Germany.

A peace conference without the United States is regarded as unlikely.

Relocating the vast NATO military structure will involve huge outlays. The 14 NATO countries hope to persuade France to meet part of the costs as compensation.

One unofficial estimate is that the over-all cost could reach $500,000,000.

Martin noted Canada's total expenditures on two air bases in France, Metz and Marville, are about $50,000,000. Canada would want some compensation, Martin said, but this is not the time for such complex financial negotiations.

He acknowledged that Canada is "sott" on France, as some newspapers have speculated, but maintained that many of the other NATO countries feel the same way. In the interest of stability, France should be identified with NATO as closely as possible.

At the end of today's conference, Martin will confer with French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville. Martin said there is no connection between the meeting of the 14 and his private chat with the French diplomat.

Only Students, Teachers and Skilled Escape War Draft in North Viet Nam

An Australian Communist has travelled frequently to North Viet Nam. His views this article after returning to his Cambodian home from his latest trip. It gives his view of the war and its effects.

By HILFRED BURCHETT
Distributed by The AP

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia—Virtually all North Vietnamese men of military age, except students, teachers and certain skilled workers, have been mobilized for what Ho Chi Minh warns may be a war of 20 or more years.

Areas will not be laid down this time until the country is reunified. The national slogan is: "Defend the north, liberate the south, reunify the country."

A quarter of a million of those mobilized are building up new industrialized bases in the jungle and mountains of the northwest. Several hundred thousand more are building new highways and repairing bomb damage to the road and rail system.

Three million people aged 18 to 30 are drafted for 2,000 hours, do anything, accept any sacrifice." Up to 85 per cent of the labor force on co-operative farms I visited were women. They have also taken over many men's jobs in the factories.

President Ho Chi Minh, Prime Minister Pham Van Dong and Defence Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, the trio who launched the Vietnamese Independence struggle in the 1930s and who directed the war against the French, told me in separate interviews they were convinced they would win again this time "even if it takes five, ih, 30 or more years."

WANTS OWN TERMS

They consider that the United States does not want negotiations on any other terms than an American takeover in the south and the surrender of the Liberation Front. To this they will never agree. They are also convinced that U.S. policy is to expand the war to the whole of Indochina and perhaps further.

It is expected Hanoi and Haiphong will be bombed and attempts made to breach the dikes of the Red River on which North Viet Nam's rice crops largely depend. The cities will be well defended but their destruction, it is claimed, will make no difference to the war effort. They have been largely evacuated; industry has been gradually evacuated over the last 15 months. Some of it I saw working in natural grottos and man-made tunnels in the mountains.

The economy, including transport and communications, has been far less affected by the bombings than official statements in Saigon and Washington would lead one to expect. Rail and motor traffic was moving according to regular schedules.

Industrial production in 1959 was 8.4 per cent up on the previous year, according to officials at the state planning commission. The rice crop was an all-time record, 20 per cent it going into reserves.

AIM AT AUTONOMY

The plan is to make every province as far as possible economically and military autonomous to ease the strain of the transport system.

As for transport at present, Doan Trong Tuyen, one of the heads of the state planning commission told me: "From July, 1956, until now the volume of transport, even from Hanoi to the 17th parallel, is greater than ever before."

Apart from truck convoys on the main highways, the transport bicycle, famous during the Dien Bien Phu battle against the French, have been put into service again. One seen columns over a mile long, every bicycle loaded with an average of 300 pounds of supplies, wheeled an average of 30 miles a day—or night—mainly along the secondary roads.

Wherever I asked, I was assured that goods arrived on time in planned quantities; and that if it were necessary to increase the volume even by several times this would present no problem, the maximum delay that could be caused by bombings being taken into account by those who planned supply movements.

Prices in the state shops which control 85 per cent of the retail trade have not changed; no new taxes have been added to the list of goods rationed since 1957 — rice, sugar and pork. There has been no reduction in the rations. But prices on the free market have increased about 25 per cent in the past year.

Bombs fell on the outskirts of Hanoi twice during my visit, but there was no panic. People moved smartly into the shelters and others to their anti-aircraft positions.

When I asked Gen. Giap, the Tiger of Dien Bien Phu, the military effect of the bombing, he said:

"The Americans had hoped to break the morale of our people, destroy our military and economic potential and by this change the situation in South Viet Nam in their favor. . . . They have only affirmed our resolve to defend the Vietnamese people's will to fight. . . ."

Replying to a question on the effects of U.S. military activities in North and South Viet Nam, Giap said:

"Viet Nam is one and indivisible. . . . American intervention has caused an armed aggression in the south already constitutes a very grave violation of our country's sovereignty. . . ."

Premier Pham Van Dong on the question of arming the south said: "For the problems of South Viet Nam, it is necessary to call the Geneva Pact to talk with the National Liberation Front, the only authentic representative of our compatriots in the south."

A precondition for any larger negotiations would be acceptance of his former four-point proposals and "definite and unconditional halt to bombings and all other acts of war. . . ."

Of the recent events in Da Nang, Hue and elsewhere, and Pham Van Dong said: "What is inevitable has to happen. It is the reply of our people in the town to the American expeditionary corps. . . ."

50TH BIRTHDAY

MADOC — Mrs. Edmund Groves reached her 50th birthday last Monday. Throughout the afternoon and evening many relations and community friends dropped in for a friendly visit. Mrs. Groves received many gifts and flowers on this happy occasion.

LOWER MILL RATE

Subject to the approval of the Municipal Board, the 1960 mill rate for the Village of Madoc will be 120 mills for commercial properties and 110 mills for residential. This is a reduction from the 1959 rate of four mills on residential and six mills on commercial.

TOUR TORONTO

Madoc public school pupils in grade 6, 7 and 8 along with their teachers went on a bus trip to Toronto last Thursday. Places visited included Riverdale Zoo, Toronto City Hall and the Sobway.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEET

The executive meeting of the Madoc and District Chamber of Commerce was held in president Nickle's cottage at Moira Lake. Items were under discussion, including large highway signs, the installing immediately of a "Free Parking" lanner across Durham St. and Elgin Street intersection, and the establishing of yearly dues, which were set at $20 per-business. Non-business membership is $10. It was felt that with the Centennial of operation this was the minimum amount with which the Chamber could produce results.

The next meeting of the Chamber will be a buffet style luncheon to be held in Blair's Hotel on Tuesday, June 7, at 7 p.m. The meeting is open to everyone interested in promoting the Chamber of Commerce and business in the area.

A birdie on the 18th hole gave Davy Jones a 79 and the lead in the Bay of Quinte Country Club's men's championship qualifying round here yesterday.

Jones, in a three-way top finish tie, led a field of 79 entries in typical June golfing weather but whicheaded with rcners comparatively higher than those of preceding years. They ranged from 79's to 92's in the qualifying and consolation rounds.

The club's co-games captain Art Bridge, last year's men's champion, will retire "undefeated" this year since his company has transferred him to Victoria, B.C., where he takes over his duties July 1st. He will not defend his title here.

The scores dominated both qualifying and consolation rounds scenes. In the qualifying three tied for the lead with 79's; two had 81's; four shot 84's and six carded 87's the top two entering the qualifying rounds.

In the consolation, besides the four 8 remaining 87's, five tied with 88's, two had 89's, three turned in 90's and two 92's.

At McAllum and John Woodcroft each shot 78's best Jones 79ish birdie gave him the nod. McAllum and Woodcroft shot a three and four on this hole.

Bill Philp and Claire Hoy tied next with 81's but Philp had a much better score on the 18th. Terry McCabe had an 82 and George MacDonald an 83.

Peter Jones, five-time champion, Abe Tobe, Fred Fisher and D. Kerruish each had 84's but back nine scores gave Jones position. Irving Hilborn and John Gee shot 85's; Milan Deracka an 86 and S. Schreiber and Roger Ling 87's to round out the qualifying field.

Games captain Bridge conducted the "blind" draw for the ninth time each day, in the 18th. Davy Jones meets Abe Tobe; Clair Hoy meets John Gee; John Woodcroft is paired with D. Kerruish; George MacDonald with S. Schreiber; Al McAllum with Fred Fisher; Terry McCabe with Milan Deracka; Bill Philp with Ivan Milburn and Peter Jones with Roger Ling.

Those eligible for the consolation round are: S. Skinner, V. Kirby, G. Hamilton, J. Carroll all with 89's; D. Lamb, W. McCormick, R. Bridge, J. Valchar and J. Toth 88's; C. Jones, E. Pugh, each with 89; B. Melbourne, T. Bonsher and L. Lantz, 90's and A. Rota and C. Wood with 92's.

The consolation draw sees Skuce paired with Toth; Lamb with Bender; Plosker with Pugh; Bridge with Rath; Kirby with Carroll; McCormick with Lantz; Grant-with Melbourne and Valchar with Wood.

Some 18 country club golfers contributed to the National Golf Week promotion which got under way on Saturday. They will match their gross scores with that of Canadian champions Will Hemenuik and, Jocelyn Bourassa. The entry fee is the "match the Champion" round is a dollar and with a week to go, almost, club officials believe a substantial sum will be raised here.

The money goes to the Provincial Golf Association to help finance its junior golf program and is sponsored by the RCGA and the Pepsi-Cola Company. The golfers who "beat the champion" are presented with a medal. The Canadian champions will shoot their "special" rounds some time during the week.

The club's woman champion Betty Ingram believes she has a good chance to win a medal. "I played Miss Bourassa in the Women's Canadian Open three years ago and took her to the 17th hole before she defeated me one up. She shoots usually in the low eighties and that gives me a chance."

Cardenas Has 4 Homers In Twill Ball

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Leo Cardenas and Willie Stargell both fell one hit shy of a record. But while Cardenas won't get another chance with out starting over, Stargell will.

Cardenas, Chicagoland Reds' 100-pound shortstop, slammed four homers and drove in eight runs as the Reds split a doubleheader with Chicago Sunday, winning the opener 8-3 before the Cubs took the nightcap 4-2.

By hitting four homers in a twibill, Cardenas accomplished a feat that hadn't been done since the 1963 season. But he still fell one shy of the five Stan Musial of St. Louis Cardinals hit in a 1954 doubleheader.

Stargell still can match the Cardenas League and major league records for most consecutive innings.

The Pittsburgh slugger was interrupted by the end of the Pirates' 10-5 victory over Houston Astros after collecting five-straight hits — including two in the opener — to stretch his streak of nine consecutive hits.

AGAIN TUESDAY

When the Pirates meet St. Louis Tuesday night he'll get a shot at the league record of Ken Boyer of the St. Louis Cardinal's Woodie Williams in 1963— and the major league record of 12 recorded by Wee Willie Keeler of Detroit Tigers in 1892.

Elsewhere, Atlanta Braves crushed St. Louis Cardinals 14-4, San Francisco Giants edged Philadelphia Phillies 7-6 in 10 innings and Los Angeles Dodgers and New York split, the Dodgers cruising to a 16-3 victory before the Mets won the nightcap 3-2.

In Saturday's games, Los Angeles defeated New York 6-2, Chicago downed Cincinnati 5-3, lost 7-6 to Pittsburgh, and Atlanta took a doubleheader 2-1 and 4-1 from St. Louis and Philadelphia swept a twin bill from Pittsburgh 6-1.

Cardenas provided all the runs the Reds needed in the opener, driving in five runs with two homers and a single. Ron Santo and Randy Hundley homered for the Cubs.

In the nitecap, Ted Abernathy picked up his eighth save with 3 2/3 innings of relief after Jim Merritt had pitched a four-hitter for the victory. Merritt struck out seven batters and walked three.

Jim Perry of Oklahoma State won the invitational 880, with Bill Crothers, Markham, Ont., pharmacist running for East York, second. Perry's time was 1:48.1 rod Crothers finished in 1:48.2.

George Puce, 24, who grew up in Toronto but now is an economics student at University of Nevada, was fourth in the discus throw, won by Ludvik Danek of Czechoslovakia.

Leafs Take Two From Buffalo

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Columbus Jets hammered out 28 hits to take over first place in the International League baseball standings Sunday, but Richmond Braves moved closer on the top three.

Columbus moved two games ahead of second - place Toledo Mud Hens by sweeping a doubleheader from the Hens 1-0 and 9-2. Richmond dumped Jacksonville Suns 5-4 to move within five games of the Jets and 1½ games of the third-place Suns.

Turnoto Maple Leafs split a pair with Buffalo Bisons, winning the opener 6-0 but losing the second 5-4 when Rochester Red Wings split with Syracuse Chiefs, winning 11-10 in 10 innings but bowing 7-6 in the seven - inning second game.

On Saturday, Toronto defeated Buffalo 3-2 and Rochester edged Syracuse 3-2. Columbus downed Toledo 7-6 and Richmond and Jacksonville split a doubleheader, the Braves winning 4-0 in the first game and the Suns taking the second 4-3.

Crothers Beaten By Perry

LOS ANGELES (CP-AP) — Jim Ryun, a Kansas University freshman, ran the mile in 3:55.6 Saturday night—one-tenth of a second off the world record. He promptly declared he'll be back to meet the record holder, Michael Jazy of France.

Ryun, 19, defeated arch-rival Jim Grelle of Portland, Ore., in the mile run at the Compton Invitational track meet, with another American, Neil Dugan of Seattle, third. Jazy was fourth, third, and Dave Bailey, 21, of Toronto fourth.

Grelle was timed in 3:56.0 and Bailey, running for Toronto's East York Track Club, in 4:01.5. No Canadian has run the mile in less than four minutes.

Jim Perry of Oklahoma State won the invitational 880, with Bill Crothers, Markham, Ont., pharmacist running for East York, second. Perry's time was 1:48.1 rod Crothers finished in 1:48.2.

George Puce, 24, who grew up in Toronto but now is an economics student at University of Nevada, was fourth in the discus throw, won by Ludvik Danek of Czechoslovakia.

The King Ran Fourth
Amberoid Wins Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP)—The race for three - year - old championship is again a wide-open affair with Kauai King's defeat in the Belmont Stakes.

The 1¼ miles of the Travers Aug. 20 could be decisive race.

The championship first flighter had been a struggle between Graustark and Buckpasser. Then Kauai King took command and appeared to have it all but wrapped up.

The situation changed Saturday when Reginald Webster's Amberoid posted a 2½ length victory in the Belmont Stakes and Kentucky Derby - Preakness winner Kauai King ran fourth.

Buckpasser returned to competition on the same Aqueduct track with an authoritative decision over older horses in an allowance race.

BELMONT RACE

With Graustark retired Creme dela Creme, winner of the Jersey Derby and Preakness winner Kauai King ran fourth.

Buckpasser returned to competition on the same Aqueduct track with an authoritative decision over older horses in an allowance race.

BELMONT RACE

With Graustark retired Creme dela Creme, winner of the Jersey Derby and Preakness, only once, is the other member of the contending foursome, Amberoid, who stepped the 1½ miles of the Belmont in 2:28 2-5 and paid $13 as the second choice at a record of 36,011 came out of the race in fine shape.

Buffle came from off the pace to take second while Advocator had enough left to edge Kauai King for third.

Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., brought Rehabilitate home a winner, stepped his fourth on the same horse in the Preakness.

HERMAN HIT

BOSTON (AP) — Billy Herman, manager of Boston Red Sox, suffered a slight concussion Saturday night when hit on the head by a pitched ball before the Red Sox - New York Yankees game. Precautionary X-rays were negative. The ball was thrown by outfielder Joe Christopher working out at shortstop.

Ace Driver Burned In Test Run

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Bret Hanover squared matters with Cardigan Bay Saturday night as he turned in his 19th under-two-minute mile and won the $50,000 pace at Roosevelt Raceway.

Bret Hanover, a four-year-old owned by Richard Downing of Shaker Heights, Ohio, and driven by Frank Ervin, stepped the mile in 1:59. Ret Pick was runner-up, beaten by three-quarters of a length but finishing three-quarters of a length in front of 10-year-old, New Zealand-bred Cardigan Bay.

The victory evened the series between the two great pacers at one each as Cardigan Bay won at Yonkers Raceway two minutes flat two weeks ago.

Crowd Of 900

Showers Halt Track Meet

Two heavy showers during the evening forced Oscar Fenwick, presiding judge, to cancel the first meeting of the Quinte Driving Club at the Fairgrounds Saturday evening. The races were scrubbed out before the horses were called in to post for the seventh race and up to that time the 900 fans in attendance were treated to excellent racing. The fans also poured their money into the mutual machines and in all it was a most successful opening.

During the second storm passing over the grounds the flat tote board was torn from its moorings and tossed onto the track by the force of the wind and it was then that Mr. Fenwick called a halt to the proceedings.

President Gerald Vance and his energetic board of directors had the grounds in immaculate condition. Through the co-operation of the Parks Board a new set of lights has been installed. The harness fans now see where they are going and it is a break for the fans because there is a real clear view of every part of the mile being raced. The only complaint came from the fans who sought more action in the payoffs. Some were shut out betting on the first next race due to slowness of payoffs.

Earl Lake, owner of that great pacer, Early Lake John, of Elgin, brought a good trotter to the races and will be heard from later in the season. A surprise was sprung in the fourth race, when Atmic Stella took a field of good pacers into camp. Don Heath had the mare in great shape and after getting boxed in up the back stretch, had the speed to get out to win by a nose from Speed Ker.

Chico Hal, had the foot of the field in the fifth. Brackleff, owner-driver of the winner, had the pace. Leo Law and Magic Charm C beat Nida Dillard, driven by Al Vance, for eighth of a mile from home and combined for a quinella of $11.40.

Local horses made a good showing in the races. Al Vance's Don Comet, made every post a winning one in the first dash and ,rewarded the fans with a $11.80 payoff. Victorious Patch, the bet up in this race was a distant fifth.

A Chestnut Mare, April Linda, teamed by H. Wemp of Centreville was an easy winner of the second dash with a local horse, Heiland Herbie, a close second. Polaris Missile, thought to be the best in the field was third. Paul Ouellette of Kingston, produced a tartar in the third race. Davie's Wee Lad, with a race under his belt was much the best and combined with April Linda in the second for a $23.10 double.

1st Race.
Don Comet (Al Vance) $11.80, $5.20, $3.60.
Rebel Land Chief (D. Chatterton) $6.40, $4.40.
Chatic Up (J. Hambleton) $2.10.
Also started — Miss Happy Hal, Victorious Patch, Carlo Guy - Time 2.21.

2nd Race.

Mexicans Idolize That Spahn

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) — Warren Spahn returned to the pitcher's mound here Saturday night and received a standing ovation from Mexican baseball fans.

Spahn, who played more than 20 years in the National League started for Mexico City Tigers against Infancy Charros and allowed seven hits before he was relieved in the sixth inning.

The 45-year-old lefthander began shakily, showing a lack of control. But he quickly settled down and delighted Mexican fans with his fast ball and curve.

Peters Two-Hits Nats In 12-0 Rout

Chisox Sweep Bill

By MURRAY CHASE
Associated Press Sports Writer

Gary Peters is putting less kick into his work this season and getting more kicks out of it.

Peters — who isn't lifting his leg as high this year — brought his foot down on Washington Sunday, pitching a two - hitter as Chicago White Sox completed a sweep of a double-header with a 12-0 victory. They won the opener 4-1.

The start for Peters was his first since he strained the bicep in his left arm two weeks ago.

"It was the best game I've thrown in two years," said Pedro, who didn't allow the Senators's hit until the seventh inning. The performance brought his record to 3-3 and his earned run average to 2.18.

It also gave him two complete games, one more than he had all of last year, and one shut-out also one more than he had last year when he dipped from a 20-game season in 1964 to a 10-12 record and a 3.65 ERA.

The 29-year-old lefthander believes a combination of bad timing and incorrect kicking affected his pitching last year.

The shutout was the sixth in the last 10 games for Chicago, a period which has seen the pitching staff post an amazing ERA of 0.80. In that time the White Sox have won eight games and moved from seventh place, 10½ games back, to fourth place, 5½ out.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota Twins whopped Cleveland Indians 9-4, Baltimore Orioles edged Kansas City Athletics 6-5 in the 12th inning of a suspended game before losing the regular game 8-4, New York Yankees downed Boston Red Sox 5-3 and Detroit Tigers nipped California Angels 8-4 and 4-1.

In Saturday games California defeated Detroit 4-1, Cleveland downed Minnesota 7-4, Chicago blanked Washington 6-0, Baltimore whitewashed Kansas City 9-0 and Boston topped New York 6-2.

Tommie Agee supplied much of the White Sox power, driving in all four runs in the opener with a homer and a triple and scoring three runs in the second game. Pitcher McCraw threw in three runs in the nightcap while Don Buford and Smoky Burgess each knocked in two.

McLaren Sets 200-Record At Mosport

By JOHN TRACY

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP)—Bruce McLaren distinguished himself here Saturday by winning the Player's 200 - mile race for sports cars and barring three cars of his own design finish ahead of the field.

As 28-year-old New Zealander took the chequered flag after a record - breaking average of 100.6 miles an hour, his rear-vision mirror picked up Mc-Laren driver Lothar Motschenbacher pounding in for second place. McLaren's countryman and team - mate Chris Amon finished third in another McLaren.

It was the second time McLaren has won the 200 since 1964 and he clipped more than eight minutes off his mark of two years ago as well as bettering the record set last year by John Surtees of London, 1964 world champion driver.

McLaren's elapsed time for the two 40-lap heats around the 2.5-mile circuit was one hour, 39 minutes, 16.9 seconds, compared with Surtees' 1:07:17.4.

WAS 38 SECONDS SLOWER

Motschenbacher, from Mission Hills, Calif., was a shade more than 38 seconds slower than McLaren.

A crowd of 60,000 watched the race under sunny skies and most of them were unaware that a track official was killed early in the race.

Just as track marshal Gordon R. Harrison, 37, of Toronto stepped out with a blue flag to warn a driver that Jerry Grant of Seattle was about to pass the Canadian driver last control of his Lola T-70 at a turn. The car moving at 100 miles an hour hit the marshal and fatally injured him.

Top Canadian in the race was John Cordick of North Bay, Ont., who finished fifth in a McLaren Elva. Eppie Wietzes of Toronto finished sixth in a Ford GT40.

"CLEARED THE TRACK" — Eddie Shack, Bobby Hull and Mayor Jack Ellis talk things over after the stars' drag-race on Sunday. Mayor Ellis flew the Golden Jet to Toronto after the special feature held at Mohawk Raceway, Deseronto.

Shack Beats Hull

DESERONTO — With the notes of "Clear the Track, Here Comes Shack" almost drowned out the roar of racing engines, Toronto Maple Leaf's effervescent winger Eddie Shack took the measure of Chicago Black Hawk ace Bobby Hull in a special drag race yesterday at the Mohawk Dragway here.

As thousands of spectators looked on, Shack gunned his Chevrolet to three wins in four heats of the best of five 3-cars event. Hull, driving a Ford, won only one heat, the third. Shack's top speed for the quarter-mile was 103 m.p.h. Hull was clocked at 97 m.p.h. in his best effort. A track official dropped a pack to signal the start of each heat.

Following the meet, Hull and Mayor Jack Ellis of Belleville boarded the mayor's plane for a flight to Toronto where the hockey star was expected to begin a western Canada cattle buying trip.

CHAPPARAL WINS

NUERBURGRING (Reuters) A United States-designed Chapparal ostrich - the Italian Ferraris to win the 1,000-kilometre (360-mile) sports car race at this famous West German track Sunday. Phil Hill, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Swedish co-driver Joakim Bonnier piloted the 5.4-litre automatic-transmission Chevrolet-powered Chapparal to a 90-second victory.

Betty Ingram Wins RCAF Field Day

Betty Ingram, Bay of Quinte women's club champion, got off on the right foot in tournament play on Saturday.

Mrs. Ingram racked up her first tourney win of the season, taking the Trenton RCAF Women's Field Day title from a large field.

Eleven of 18 Bay of Quinte women golfers brought home prizes and awards.

These included Irene Belanger, Betty Weymark, Ana Ryan, Betty Walmsley, Eva Ketchason, Hilda Dolan, Win McKeen, Pate Wambolt, Peggy Hammel, Laura Batt and Pat Hopkins.

Several district golf clubs were represented at the tournament.

BRITISH BEATEN

TOWNSVILLE, Australia (Reuters)—In one of the biggest upsets in the history of British rugby league teams touring Australia, North Queensland Sunday came up from a 10-5 deficit at half-time to defeat Britain 17-15.

B.D. Softball "Washed Out"

Saturday night's rainfall forced the postponement of the Belleville and District Softball League game between Madoc and Ellis Juniors, at Alemite Park.

It was the second rained-out game of the week, Trudeaus and Bobcats involved in the other.

It is expected that postponed games will be played at the conclusion of the regular schedule, on July 18.

The next scheduled game has Madoc vs. Trudeau Motors tomorrow (Tuesday) at the Alemite at 8.30.

National Soccer

SUDBURY (CP)—A crowd of more than 4,000 Saturday night watched Sudbury Italia run his undefeated streak to four games in the National Soccer League with a 1-0 victory over Toronto Ukrainians.

Pat Smith scored at 21 minutes of the second half while the losers were playing a man short following ejection of Vittorio Fabbrio for kicking a Toronto player two minutes after the intermission.

Another John Le Carre spy thriller, The Deadly Affair, has been filmed in London with James Mason and Simone Signoret.

EOBA Results

City Minors Split Four

Belleville peewee teams were involved in three EOBA games and only city's bantam entry played one and had one washed out in a heavy weekend minor baseball action.

Peterborough dumped Belleville Holy Rosary 8-3 and topped the Lions Club 13-2 while Holy Rosary stopped Cobourg 5-4 in a peewee triple - header, at Park Dale, Saturday afternoon.

Ellis bantams were rained out in Peterborough Saturday at the end of the second inning.

Here at home yesterday, Belleville trounced Port Hope in a 20-2 affair.

PETERBOROUGH 3 HOLY ROSARY 2

The winners jumped ahead with four runs in the first and never looked back. Downs, Gilmour and McFadden gave up eight singles, struck out 13 and walked three on the winners' mound.

John Mulvihill and Art Wellesley allowed nine hits, fanned five but passed 11 on Belleville's hilltop.

Holy Rosary hits wrote to Art Wellesley, Gary Edwards, Wayne Andrews, Austin Wilson, Brian Garlepy, Rick Meagher, Stan Brooks and John Mulvihill. Leahy hit a home run and single and Scriver two singles to round out the club.

| Peterborough | 400 120 1 | 8-9-3 |
| Holy Rosary | 200 100 0 | 3-8-4 |

PETERBOROUGH 13 LIONS CLUB

A six-run third frame fattened a 2-1 Peterborough lead in this one and winning pitcher Hoey let the Lions Club down on four hits. He fanned eight and walked one.

Dennis Cone and David Wood gave up 10 hits; struck out nine and walked four in defeat. Seven errors also hurt their cause.

Dave Wood hit a double and single, Steve McDowell and Dick Griffin a single each for Belleville. Gibson and Beer paced Peterborough with two each.

Earl Marvin Retains Trap Title

HARROW, Ont. (CP)—Champions were toppled right and left in Saturday events of the two-day Ontario trap-shooting championships at the Harrow Gun Club.

A 20-year-old Toronto Stock Exchange floor trader, Bob Lea, won the 200-target 16-yard singles by smashing 194 of 200. He wrested the crown from last year's champion, Doug Norton of Cookeville, who scored 187.

Mrs. Marie Comfort, 37-year-old housewife from Oak Ridges, Ont., won the women's championship by breaking 82 targets out of 100. She defeated last year's winner, Frances Searle, a 16-year-old Burlington secretary, who scored 82.

Ed Whatcoat of Ancaster, Ont., 1965 high all-round champion, won the Class A singles with 183. New Class B champion is W. L. MacRae of Toronto, who scored 193. With a score of 192, Jim Anderson of Hensall, Ont., won the Class C title. Phil Valeolai of Burlington took Class D with 188.

Veterans champion was 64-year-old Chief Co.stable Earl Marvin of Wellington.

Yancey Wins Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Bert Yancey won the $100,000 Memphis open golf tournament Sunday with a record 15-under-par 265, lowest score on the 1966 PGA tour, to take $20,000 in first place prize money.

Yancey, trailing Gene Littler by one stroke going into the final round, fired a four-under-par 66 for a 265 total.

Littler, at 270, finished second and won $12,000.

"Knew My Father As Friend"

JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

How long is a footstep? We wear the same size shoes, shirts and socks. I could shoot a shade better, but not cost as well. He had a capacity for the subjunctive mood of people I will never possess . . . indeed, he was more erudite.

I hate eulogies, those nice things that we say about people after they are gone. But on April 8th of this year, my father, John Alden Knight, added his claim on the best pool of the river that makes glad the City of God. The best I can do now is to attempt to live up to him.

"I have him as a friend . . . dámn this Pappa, Father, Daddy bit. I knew this long, spare man with a touch of genius in fingers as a diminutive I could call on at any time. Give me not this "peter" routine . . . this guy was George. He ever represent arm when I needed an arm.

I sit here at the typewriter and watch the words flow out from under my fingers and say to myself, "This he did not teach me." He used to say that the best thing that could happen to me was to go back to college and take a refresher course in Freshman English . . . but he still liked the pieces I wrote. I found every column I have ever written in his files yesterday.

I knew him first as a boy of about two, when he built me a little flyrod about four feet long and started me casting in the front room of our apartment.

When I was a devil did the man come from who first put forth the rumor that outdoor writers must be rich? Admittedly, they go to the better parts of the globe. They do all manner of wonderful, romantic deeds that you, the reader, live vicariously. But they never get rich. They do leave a heritage, this breed of man I follow. They leave it in the value of the written word, the touch that was known well and remembered.

At four, I caught my first trout on a dry fly with Dad standing right at my elbow. He had manoeuvered me into the right spot to cast to the fish and told me what fly to use. He suffered through three of the worst casts in the history of the sport and then I caught the fish . . . alone, just me.

QUALITY OF PATIENCE

Dad was a curious man. He was like a dog with an old familiar bone that chewing could not reduce when a problem confronted him. He had the quality of patience that is so seldom found in the gifted, the knack of looking to the right place for the logical answer. This is how he perfected the fabodelled nymph we fish for granted today. He realized that fish tend to feeding on the natural insects, do not take round imitations.

His patience led him to the foundation of the Barometric Theory . . . that fish will feed on a high or a low phase, but not well on a fluctuating phase. This was how he probed out the principles of parabolic and semiparabolic rod tapers . . . this is how he came across the Mickey Finn bucktail. . . .

Two people on the face of this earth know how the Solunar Tables are computed . . . how one of them is gone. I learned the formula and its application at the elbow of a man who had the ability to put the pieces together and make them work. We decided that the minor period calculations could stand some correction, so we spent ten years in research. We sat on stream banks, along lake shores, rode chatter and bottom boats off shore. We waded bonefish flats, paced tidal canals, fished tide rips. We looked long and hard for the answer and we found it . . . together.

Ours could never be considered a collaboration . . . rather it was an area of controlled disagreement. Yet in this disagreement lay a harmony you could never find in the closest of friendships. Ours was an argument towards a mutual cause. People charge machine gun nests for the same reason.

We wrote a book together once. It either of us had to do it over again, I doubt if you could have paid either of us enough money to compensate for the seven months of constant conflict we went through . . . together. Yet, when the galleys were checked and the picture layouts approved, we knew that we had chosen our best.

MARK OF THE MASTER

Dad was a picture caster with a flyrod. When we talk of the casters that we know today . . . Joe Brooks (a pupil of Dad's in his early years at the outdoor game), Ted Williams and other great flyrod men . . . all of them could see the mark of the master, that only he seemed to be able to impart to this most trying of coordinated motions. I can see a man pick up a rod, handle it once, and tell you whether he had ever fished with John Alden Knight . . . the mark of the master leaves a lasting imprint.

This column will continue, as will the future publication of the Solunar Tables. I was trained well and prepared for the day when I would have to carry on.

I will miss this man, but I will never grieve him. Dad was not the kind of a man you mourn. So, when I hook a good fish, when I see a pretty girl swinging down the street, when I sip a highball at the end of a good day afield, when I make a triumph or a failure, I will feel his presence.

I still look for him along the banks of our favorite streams, as I will look for him in the woodcock covers and the dove fields he loved so well. I will miss him, but I will not mourn him.

He wasn't that kind of a guy.

498 Seek Open Crown At Frisco

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sectional qualifying for 123 remaining berths in next week's U.S. Open Golf championship begins today at six locations.

A total of 498 amateurs and professionals will shoot 36 holes each over the next two days, hoping to qualify for the field of 151 who will go after the Open crown at San Francisco's Olympic Country Club June 16-19.

Exempt from qualifying and ready for next week's tournament are defending champion Gary Player and the top finishers of last year's open. They include George Knudson of Toronto.

Corvair 500 Sport Coupe—believe it or not, Canada's lowest priced hardtop! Eight standard safety features include outside rearview mirror; always use it before passing.

Now you be the judge. Get a Corvair and test its easy cornering, its determination in tough going. Weight is concentrated over the driving wheels for better traction.

A sophisticated fully independent suspension like Corvair's gives firm control in a hard corner. Each wheel can move up and down without disturbing the other.

Try it. And all the while remember that its air-cooled engine requires neither water nor antifreeze, has no radiator, water pump or water hoses and clamps to replace—which is one of the reasons for Corvair's low, low operating cost.

Then decide for yourself. More than 1,500,000 owners already have voted for Corvair by buying one. You'll find you agree with all of them. Especially when you see the kind of buy you can get on a Corvair from your Chevrolet dealer right now!

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method

by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

ADJUST BALL POSITION ON HILLY PUTTS

It is very important that the clubface strike the ball squarely on putts. Therefore, I feel that a golfer should adjust his stance slightly to uphill and downhill putts, just as he would do to achieve square contact on uphill or downhill fairway shots.

Whenever you must address a shot with one foot higher than the other, the axis of your swing will change. You will not strike the ball squarely unless you position it in a manner to compensate for the change in arc.

I normally address my putts with my nose aligned over the ball (illustration No. 1). However, I find I achieve a more solid putt if, on an uphill putt, I play the ball a shade farther forward (illustration No. 2). Downhill putts I play slightly back in my stance (illustration No. 3).

I think you will feel more comfortable on hilly putts if you follow this procedure. And you should savvy no better golf-control as a result.

Great Lakes Undersea War

Splake Versus Lamprey

TORONTO (CP)—The splake, Canada's newest game fish, is being put to the use for which it was specifically bred—combatting the ravages of the sea lamprey in the Great Lakes.

The Ontario lands and forests department is sending 15,000 mature splake to the Codrington hatchery near Brighton, Ont., and to a similar fish production hatchery at Marquette in northern Michigan.

The young of the present stocks of the hybrid trout will be planted in the northwest corner of Lake Huron, coinciding with a lamprey control program to begin there later this year. U.S. authorities are participating in the program.

The splake is the result of a cross between lake trout and speckled trout. It represents 10 years of research by the department.

The splake was bred in an attempt to find a fish that could offset the effects of the sea lamprey, which has virtually eliminated lake trout from lakes Huron and Michigan, and severely reduced the stock in Lake Superior.

The lamprey attacks many species, but since the decline of the Great Lakes with construction of the Welland Canal system, the lake trout has proved particularly vulnerable. Lake trout are attacked when they are about 20 inches long but they do not reproduce until age seven. Then no trout survivors can take place and the lamprey attack gets severe again.

CHOSE TWO

The research branch used two species in the splake breeding experiment because it matures at the early age of two years. Because a speckled trout cannot swim deeply enough in Lake Superior for the cold water environment necessary to all trout, it was crossed with the lake trout, which can.

It is hoped that use of the new breed will be more successful in the deep sanctuary provided the original lake trout, although that too is being done from hatcheries in Lake Labelsad, because lamprey control methods still leave a considerable number of the predators in the lakes.

No special control over their capture by anglers or commercial fishermen has yet been outlined. Something similar to the legal quota on restocked lake trout in Lake Superior may be applied later.

The eel-shaped lamprey, lacking jaws and paired fins, is not a true fish but a primitive vertebrate. It has a large sucking disc at its snout which carries on a mouth armed with horny teeth. Capable of swimming fast, it fastens to the side of a victim, grinds its way through scales and skin and sucks out the life juices.

Control methods include the use of electrical weirs and water poisons placed in the lamprey's breeding streams.

TV-Radio Column

'Age of Kennedy', Memoir More Than Anything Else

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The title of NBC's White Paper programs implies that they have something special and important to say.

But what Sunday night's Age of Kennedy had to say about John F. Kennedy was already to have been stated clearly by the late Adlai Stevenson at the United Nations three days after the assassination.

"President Kennedy was so contemporary a man, so involved in the issues of our time, so immersed in our times, so responsive to its challenge. He owned the very symbol of vitality and the exuberance that is the essence of His Youth Now he's gone. Today we mourn him, tomorrow and tomorrow we shall miss him . . ."

Thus the second and final part of The Age of Kennedy, concentrating on the 1,000 days of the presidency was more a memoir than anything else.

The program moved more or less chronologically through the period, pausing for the Cuban missile crisis, the Berlin Peace Corps and the Khrushchev meeting. We heard again bits from many of his best speeches.

In recalling those years, the program was simply repetitious. But if it was designed, as stated at the outset, as a study of the style — or perhaps character called it "an unusual combination of informality, dignity and wit"—it never quite was able to pull it off.

NBC's London Palladium special Friday night—second in a series of six summer variety hours taped at the famous London musical hall—proved again a mildly tedious, unimaginative hour of British vaudeville.

Kate Smith, on her first trip abroad, served as the hostess and sole Yankee on stage. She brought on a team of wildly unfunny comedians, a rock 'n' roll singer named Tom Jones and a pretty girl named Millicent Martin.

The show was a bit brighter than the first one last week when Lorne Greene, dressed in his Bonanza outfit, tossed out some tired jokes about horses, cows and six shooters.

Robert Morse Soliloquizes About His Movie Career

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I hope I get a good picture. Why can't I get a good picture? I think I really deserve a good picture."

Robert Morse was soliloquizing about his movie career, which he believes has journeyed from one disaster to another.

Morse was making the comments on the set of How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying. He's playing the role he created with immense success on Broadway, that of a window-washer who ascends to presidency of a huge wicketa corporation.

I hazarded the possibility that this could be the good picture he so earnestly seeks.

WHO KNOWS?

You'd think so, but who knows?" he said.

Morse began his film career (except for a featured role in the 1958 Matchmaker) with Honeymoon Hotel. The film was supposed to be a triumphant debut for him and another Broadway star, Robert Goulet, raised in Edmonton. It was such a bomb that it was sold to television almost before the film print was dry.

Next came The Loved One, short which he said: "They made that one like they were carving the piano with their flints."

Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Bad, Morse's third starring film, has yet to be released.

At the Belle

THE PEBULTIMATE AND DRAMATIC MUSICAL PERFECTION

"My Fair Lady," which is now attracting large audiences at the Belle Theatre, for a special limited engagement represents a dazzling climax to a magical musical story. Never has the birth and evolution of a film been treated with such painstaking effort and loving care.

It was aimed at the achievement of perfection in every department and the results are evident in a visual, dramatic, musical and technical production never before believed possible on the screen.

Most of all, the Academy Award-winning film was created by Warner Bros. to bring rich entertainment to today's audiences throughout the world.

From its 1912 creation as "Pygmalion" by George Bernard Shaw, through its global success as a musical comedy on the stage, and now on the screen, "My Fair Lady", has never been anything less than a hit.

The $17,000,000, Technicolor and Panavision production adds to its dramatic stature to the most fantastic of success.

The motion picture was produced by Jack L. Warner, president of Warner Bros; a man willing to throw the full financial and talent resources of his company into making "My Fair Lady" a classic of the screen.

He showed this willingness by paying a never-before-heard-of $5,200,000 for the property and then backing up his investment with the talents of the finest artists and craftsmen to be found in the motion picture industry today.

The talents of Audrey Hepburn and Rex Harrison were employed for the starring roles of Eliza Doolittle, a flower girl in unknowing ignorances and ends in knowing splendor.

The music by Alan Jay Lerner and Frederic Loewe is perhaps the most known internationally and the best loved of any score ever created for the stage and screen.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 7

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): In trying to please friends . . . you may perform disservice to yourself. Know this — be aware, alert. Plainly not a day to overspend. Take conservative view . . . especially with budget.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your natural appreciation of beauty comes to forefront. You can get after what you desire. Many in authority become your allies . . . but you must display ability as a self-starter.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You may have to illustrate your beliefs. Do so in definite, dramatic manner. Be articulate. Explain views. If sincere, others will respond. Be receptive to constructive criticism.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Check assets, future possibilities. Don't be satisfied with superficial indications. Get to heart of matter. Probe deep . . . then answers will be forthcoming.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Obstacles can be transformed into assets. You do this by being meticulous. No time to permit details to slide. Be a shrewd observer. Your efforts pay dividends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 21): Day features ennui and change, variety. Refuse to be trapped into emotional lethargy. Express yourself — in writing, actions. Let others know you exist by dramatic manner!

LIBRA (Sept. 22 — Oct. 22): Romantic pursuits in spotlight. Day glows with excitement of discovery. Others are drawn to you. Personal magnetism rating soars. Sales ability rates very high!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Check legal aspects before becoming involved in any property disputes. Go with experience. Not wise to battle those who quote reliable references. Maintain sensible pace.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): If you apply "right touch" you gain. Otherwise, opposition is likely to build. Seek allies. Win points through charm, plausible explanations. Financial advantage shown.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Money, possessions command attention. Avoid extravagance. Member of opposite sex is impressed with sincere approach. Keep promises to youngster. Give your best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Cycle continues high. Circumstances favorable for major gain. Fine for dealing with real estate agents. Build on solid base. Don't commit your self beyond your means.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Great ally now is ability to laugh at your own foibles. If you do this . . . others are sympathetic. Applies especially in dealing with relatives, in-laws. Smile!

Labor Should Do Something About Unions Defying Law Says President of CMA

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Manufacturers' Association said today labor should do something about what it called numerous examples of unions defying the law.

Warning that such actions represent virtual crisis of authority, the CMA general manager, J. C. Whitelaw, said some unions seem to operate under the delusion that "the will of their members is the law."

Until this attitude is changed substantially, Canada will continue to face a crisis, he told the opening session of the association's 95th annual meeting.

The growing evidence of unrest and militancy on the part of labor, especially in Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia, has been a major worry for the manufacturers' industry during the last year, Mr. Whitelaw said.

Certainly we have seen numerous examples of the law being defied in one way or another.

OFFER VARIOUS EXCUSES

"Various excuses have been offered for the growing, prevalent and illegal behavior that after several years of relative harmony on the labor front.

"In essence, however, most of these excuses add up to a disinclination of some unionists to observe laws when they don't like—and let me emphasize the word some, because the criticism certainly doesn't apply to all."

Mr. Whitelaw said organized labor should be considerably more powerful than ever before.

Speaking in a city hit for the last four months with a crippling waterfront strike, he added that power should and must lead to responsibility.

. . . Exercise of that responsibility requires that the representatives of organized labor repudiate illegal or irresponsible conduct and make it plain unmistakably that it will not be tolerated, much less condoned."

He also said this situation carries special responsibilities for management and government.

SHOULD BE FAIR

Management should go out of its way to be fair in all its dealings and should demonstrate "constructive leadership on the broadest of fronts."

Governments had an obligation to enforce laws now on the books or, if wrongs existed, to introduce remedial legislation.

Of the Canadian economic picture, Mr. Whitelaw said the continued expansion presents a challenge to management, labor and government since public and private policy has to be aimed at keeping costs under control, eliminating production and distribution bottlenecks, improving productivity and "moderating or stretching out peaks of excessive demand without tipping the economic indicators into a downward trend."

"With the elimination of most of the earlier slack of underemployed capital and labor resources, the rate of expansion must be expected to level off —but the outlook is nevertheless, one of further substantial growth in the current year."

He said everyone hopes the anti-inflationary steps taken by Finance Minister Sharp in his recent budget will work and "flexibility in their application will be retained to the extent necessary to ensure that they do not retard out healthy growth."

In a report written by Mr. Whitelaw and submitted to delegates, he says it is hoped the recently-announced department of manpower will be able to keep the required number of skilled immigrants flowing into Canada.

IMMIGRATION INCREASES

It notes immigration in 1965 rose about 5,000 to 146,000, with half the total entering the labor force.

"Welcome as this increase is, Canada needs a steadily increasing flow of immigrants to fill the many positions where there are manpower shortages and to offset the annual emigration from Canada of thousands of persons with professional and technical skills."

The report also says the Kennedy round of trade negotiations at Geneva are entering a crucial period, with some break in the prolonged deadlock needed by this fall.

It expresses concern that, if the talks should fail in their aim of general easing of trade restrictions, the United States will bring considerable pressure on Canada for a new bilateral trade agreement.

Any such agreement would have to be extended to other countries under Canada's most-favored - nation trading policy without getting matching benefits from these countries, so the government should move carefully in that field.

Stirling

Ontario Hydro Plans To More Than Double Capacity in 10 Years

By GEOFFREY BINTCLIFFE

TORONTO (CP)—In the next 10 years, Ontario Hydro plans to more than double its present capacity, matching in that time the achievements of its first 60 years.

The Hydro - Electric Power Commission of Ontario celebrates its 60th anniversary Tuesday.

Chairman George H. Gathercole said in a weekend interview that the commission, which at the start of 1965 had total assets of $2,267,207,000, will spend an estimated $2,500,000,000 in its next 10 years of expansion.

The vigorous 56 - year - old chairman who took over Ontario Hydro's controls April 1, said the commission's biggest challenge is continually to build its capacity to match rapidly increasing electricity demands. "Demands are increasing at almost 10 per cent annually and it is a prodigious task to keep pace."

ADD POWER

In attempting to do so, Hydro plans to add 5,000,000 kilowatts to its power output by 1979 and between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 kilowatts by 1975. Estimated total demand for Hydro power this year is 8,387,000 kilowatts.

Mr. Gathercole said the commission's major developments are going to be in nuclear-powered generating.

The nuclear generating station at Douglas Point on Lake Huron, 35 miles southwest of Owen Sound, is expected to be in operation by December this year.

Douglas Point, the first full-scale nuclear power station in Canada, will herald a nuclear power development in the province that will "rule out like a Prairie fire in the 1970s and 1980s," the Hydro chairman predicted.

The second major step will be when the nuclear plant at Pickering, 20 miles east of Toronto, becomes operational in 1971.

Mr. Gathercole said that by 1975, Hydro will be producing about 3,500,000 kilowatts of electricity by nuclear means—more than the output now from coal-fired generators.

The massive switch to nuclear - produced electricity is seen in predicted figures for 1980 when nuclear energy will generate 8,200,000 kilowatts almost equivalent to this year's capacity from all sources. Total resources in 1980 are expected to be 23,000,000 kilowatts.

But hydro-powered and coal-fired generators will continue to play an important role in the commission's future.

This year 5,130,000 kilowatts are expected from hydro-powered generators, increasing to 7,409,000 in 1980 and 3,979,000 from coal generators, climbing to 7,830,000 in 1980.

Mr. Gathercole was asked about the likelihood of Hydro again experiencing a failure similar to that of the blackout last November that plunged an estimated 30,000,000 Canadians and Americans into darkness.

He replied that the commission's systems now are better co-ordinated and he doesn't anticipate that anything similar will again occur.

Ontario Hydro, one of the largest publicly - owned utility systems in the world, was formed in June, 1906, under the chairmanship of Adam Beck, later knighted.

It grew out of a hodge-podge of tiny municipal utility systems which in 1903 formed the Ontario Power Commission with representatives from Hamilton, Guelph, Ingersoll, London, Stratford, Toronto and Woodstock.

Mr. Gathercole is Hydro's 10th chairman. The Hamilton-born economist took over in succession to W. Ross Strike, under whom he had been first vice-chairman since he joined the commission in 1961.

Air Canada, faced with a labour dispute, pledges to do its best to fulfil its normal service obligations to the Canadian flying public

AIR CANADA'S OBLIGATION TO YOU.
In the national interest, Air Canada recognizes that it has an obligation to do everything in its power to ensure continuation of its services to the travelling public. Although the national airline is presently faced with the possibility of strike action by some of its sales personnel, this obligation of service to the nation will be honoured to the best of the Company's ability.

HERE IS THE BACKGROUND. With great regrets, Air Canada must announce the breakdown of negotiations between the Company and its Sales Employees' Association.

The Sales Employees' Association represents 1,500 passenger agents at Canadian airports, city ticket offices and at reservations offices. This association has now decided to terminate its discussions with the airline and conduct a strike vote.

Prior to this, a conciliation board had unanimously recommended a 15 per cent wage increase on a 30-month contract, with a cash retroactive settlement and other tangible benefits. Both the Company's and the Association's negotiating teams had endorsed the proposal and had undertaken to recommend it to their principals for acceptance.

Air Canada accepted the conciliation board's recommendation. The membership of the Sales Employees' Association did not — it was rejected by a majority of that portion of the Association's membership which voted. Despite the Association's decision to conduct a strike vote, Air Canada still hopes that a settlement can be reached.

THE COMPANY'S PLEDGE OF SERVICE. Please rest assured that Air Canada will give all its customers the best attention and service that can be provided under the circumstances, should any work stoppage occur.

Johnson Ready To Take Over Reins of Power

QUEBEC (CP)—Daniel Johnson, Union Nationale leader, expressed confidence Monday that he would head the next Quebec government but Premier Jean Lesage indicated he would not vacate his post until after judicial recounts had been held in ridings where votes were narrow in Sunday's cliff-hanger provincial election.

The Union Nationale won 55 seats in the newly-enlarged 108-seat house, upsetting the Liberals who took 51. Independent candidates were elected in two ridings. In the last house, the Liberals held 63 seats, the Union Nationale 28, there was one independent and three seats were vacant in a 95-seat house.

The election was the first since the redistribution of seats and since the provincial voting age had been lowered to 18 from 21.

Speaking in Montreal in his first official news conference since Sunday, Mr. Johnson said there was no written rule that would force Mr. Lesage to turn over control of the government but he hoped the premier would respect custom and follow established precedent."

However, Mr. Lesage said in an interview here earlier Monday he was "far from believing" that his party was finished. The Liberals won 47 per cent of the popular vote compared to 41.1 per cent for the Union Nationale.

WERE INFRACTIONS

"All will have to be analysed, including the infractions which were committed against the Electoral act, because there were some," he said.

Mr. Johnson said he had no fear of a recount as "past experience has shown they generally don't change anything. When they do, the change is generally in favor of the opposition party, because, since present a certain political bias possible on the part of the original enumerator who may have conveniently laid aside some anti-government votes."

"I can't say for sure whether I will ask for judicial recount anywhere, although there were several irregularities, especially in Matane (riding) where recipients of welfare were threatened by welfare agents with loss of their cheques if they did not vote Liberal.

"However, unless there is a change, we have the largest number of seats and the govern-

Seaway Workers To Strike

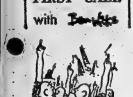
OTTAWA (CP)—A June 17 non-licence strike deadline for St. Lawrence Seaway workers in Canada was set today following an overwhelming vote by workers to walk off their jobs to back demands for wage parity with their U.S. counterparts.

The strike vote repudiated a federal conciliation board recommendation for an immediate seven-per-cent wage increase, with an additional seven per cent in 1967 under a two-year contract.

The seaway authority, which originally offered a three - per-cent raise in each year of a three-year contract, had agreed to accept the conciliation board's wage proposal. Basic rate for laborers now is $2.13 an hour.

Mr. Smith said the conciliation board's recommendation actually amounts to a 3.5-per-cent increase if the six-month period since the last contract expired is taken into account. The board recommended that the new pay rate take effect July 1.



The union is demanding a 35-per-cent increase to bring Canadian seaway rates more in line with those on the U.S. side.

NEGOTIATE 6 MONTHS

Mr. Smith said that the authority's offer of a three-per-cent boost was not a responsible approach. This was the best offer made by the authority after 30 meetings and negotiations ex-

Hot Pace Set By House

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons adjourned 25 minutes earlier than usual Monday night after it ran out of business.

A resolution to integrate the civil service, armed forces and RCMP pension plans with the Canada Pension Plan was given first reading.

Two other civil service bills were given second reading and sent to a Senate-Commons committee for study. They were the Public Service Employment Act which will replace the Civil Service Act, spelling out terms of employment, and an amendment to the Financial Administration Act to make the treasury board the management spokesman in a new bargaining system.

Third reading was given the government reorganization bill.

Davie Fulton (PC — Kamloops) said the measure, which brings major changes to eight departments and switches administrative responsibilities for more than 80 statutes and acts, should have been broken up.

AMENDMENT DEFENDED

A bill amending the Yukon Act won third reading after Conservative amendment to send it to a committee was defeated 42 to 60 in the closest vote of the session.

Two Social Credit MPs provided the margin by which the minority government won the vote. Defeat wouldn't have meant the end of the Liberal government but would have been embarrassing.

Also given third reading:

—An act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code, specifically to exclude contracts or agreements between British Columbia fishermen and buyers from prosecution.

—An act to amend the Research Council Act, changing

Shotgun Blast Ends March To Prove Mississippi 'Safe'

SHOT IN AMBUSH — James Meredith, the first Negro to graduate from the University of Mississippi, grimaces in pain (top) after he was wounded by a gunman who fired on him as he led a "march" to show Mississippi Negroes they had nothing to fear from registering to vote. Below, a suspect identified as Aubry James Norvell, 41, of Memphis, Tenn., is ushered into a police cruiser. (AP Wirephotos)

HERNANDO, Miss. (AP) — James H. Meredith lay swathed in bandages in a hospital today while other Negro leaders rush in to take up his "march through Mississippi."

Meredith, 33, a key figure in the violent annals of Mississippi's civil rights movement, was cut down by a man with a shotgun Monday. A white man was arrested immediately after the shooting.

Meredith was taken to a hospital in Memphis, about 25 miles north of Hernando, where his condition was listed as good. He was hit in the back and in the legs with birdshot.

The shooting stirred sharp reaction. President Johnson described it as an "awful act of violence." There were angry speeches on Harlem street corners, but calls for calm and peace also were heard.

The shooting happened as the slender former air force serviceman crawled under the racial barrier at the University of Mississippi in 1962, strode jauntily along U.S. 51.

SHOWING THE WAY

He was walking from Memphis to Jackson, Miss., on the assumption that if he could do it safely it would prove to Mississippi Negroes that they had nothing to fear in registering to vote.

A witness, Claude Sterrett, 36, of New York, said the gunman, apparently uncertain of his target, stepped from a wooded area and shouted:

"Meredith! James Meredith! I only want Meredith!" then he fired.

Sheriff W. L. Meredith arrested Aubry James Norvell, 41, of Memphis, a husky, balding gossengged hardware contractor, a few minutes after the shooting.

Meredith began his march from Memphis Sunday and had gone about 27 miles when he was shot. Jackson, his destination, is about 325 miles from Memphis.

NO MOTIVE

Governor Paul Johnson said Norvell admitted the shooting, but no motive was given.

The splotch of blood Meredith left on the dusty della roadside threatened to become the symbolic staging area for bigger marches than his own demonstration.

Floyd B. McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said CORE will continue the march started by Meredith.

"I will call upon 1,000 volunteers to join CORE in this march," he said. "It will commence from the point where James Meredith fell and end at his announced destination . . ."

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., leader of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, arranged to fly from Atlanta to see Meredith.

Dr. King said he and other conference leaders, after the hospital visit, would move on into Mississippi to urge Negroes to get out and vote in today's primary.

Whitney M. Young Jr., director of the National Urban League, said he was calling an emergency meeting of the leading civil rights organizations in the U.S. "to discuss immediate steps that ought to be taken" in the wake of the shooting.

Winters and Bank President Urge Canada Should Reduce Reliance on Foreign Capital

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada should try to become more self-reliant financially to cut down the uncertainties of tying future economic growth to continue large inflows of foreign capital, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was told Monday.

Trade Minister Winters and A. T. Lambert, chairman and president of the Toronto - Dominion Bank, both took the same approach at the association's annual meeting, arguing that depending on foreign investment could lead to difficulties.

Mr. Winters said more self-reliance would only reduce but also help give Canadians a larger stake in future growth.

"Bearing in mind these considerations and also the pressing requirements for capital in other parts of the world, there is, I believe, a need to expand our own supply of investment financing within Canada.

"This is a matter of common prudence and not because the climate here for foreign capital is not friendly."

Commenting on the present debate about foreign-owned subsidiaries in Canada, the minister said the government's aim is to make the best use of the advantages, such as technological and marketing experience, while minimizing the disadvantages, including the danger of economic influences from foreign capitals.

Mr. Lambert said the recent United States economic guidelines, calling among other

15-Seat Deadlock In P. E. I.

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Premier Walter R. Shaw Monday felt "a little better" about the May 30 Prince Edward Island election after an official tabulation of votes boosted his Progressive Conservatives party into a 15 - seat deadlock with Alex Campbell's Liberals.

Down two seats a week ago on the basis of returns compiled by a government bureau, the Conservatives gained an important victory Thursday 2nd when the tabulation re-elected Industry Minister Lloyd MacPhail as councillor by a four-vote majority.

The stretch-drive campaign for both parties begins Wednesday night when the Liberals in Kings let nominate their candidate for assemblyman in the deferred elections July 21. This deferred vote, coupled with three recounts today, the boy's a majority in the 32-seat legislature.

"I'm not even keeping my fingers crossed," Mr. Shaw said in an interview. "If things go the way they should go, I feel the government will be returned after the deferred elections."

BIDS FOR SUPPORT

The premier, Canada's oldest at 76, has taken one major step in attempting to secure Kings 1st support. He named Keith MacKenzie, Conservative candidate for assemblyman, as public works and highways minister in place of J. Philip Matheson who lost in Queens 2nd.

Mr. MacKenzie Monday called for tenders to pave 6.3 miles of road in the rural riding and promised more.

Monday official tabulation erased the Liberals' 18-24 edge in seats on election night by turning over the Queens 2nd result.

Liberal Horace Willis held a Leader's edge of 8,409 to 8,404 was chafged to a four-vote deficit when the poll at nearby Rocky Point reported an additional seven votes for Mr. MacPhail.

NUCLEAR GIFTS

OTTAWA (CP)—Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. is producing two nuclear radiation units as gifts to India for experiments in preserving her food supplies, it was announced Tuesday. The larger unit will be used for experimental studies of irradiated foods, particularly fish, fruits and vegetables. The second unit will test various radiation conditions required to disinfest grains.

Will Take 11 Days to Tell of Gemini 9 Flight

CAPE KENNEDY, (AP)—The triumphant Gemini 9 astronauts, eager to talk, today tackle the tedious job of recalling for experts the disappointments and success of their three days in space.

Officials want to know every detail, and Thomas Stafford and Eugene Cernan plan to take 11 days to cover them.

"It was a disappointment in spots," Cernan told friends.

"But we did get some real good information . . . a great deal of experience."

Cernan, 32, returned from space the world's champion space walker, and with a direct one - grade promotion by the president to navy commander.

Cernan and Stafford splashed back to earth with amazing accuracy at 10 a.m. EDT Monday, riding their scorched spacecraft to within 3½ miles of the recovery aircraft carrier Wasp in the Atlantic.

They got a jubilant welcome aboard the carrier, then flew here in separate planes shortly before 7 p.m. After four days of debriefings here, they will reach their families in Houston.

A press conference is scheduled for the astronauts in Houston June 17.

Presbyterian Church Approves Ordaining Women to Eldership

TORONTO (CP)—The Presbyterian Church in Canada broke Monday with 81 years' practice and approved lifetime ordination of women to its eldership.

However, the 92nd general assembly deferred discussion of a resolution to allow women to be ordained into the ministry. The debate is to be resolved before the Presbyterians adjourn Thursday. Of Canada's major denominations, only the United Church permits women ministers.

Persons elected from local congregations are called ruling elders while ministers are referred to as teaching elders. Both make up the church session which is responsible for forming congregational policies in non-financial matters.

The move means that for the first time since the Presbyterian Church was formed in 1875 women will have an official voice in church courts, from the local to national levels. All 240 official delegates at the assembly are males.

The decision to admit women to the cabinet of local churches followed approval last month in Edinburgh by the Church of Scotland to admit women into its eldership. The two churches are closely related.

The assembly's decision came as no surprise. Earlier it had been told 31 of the 48 presbyteries across Canada had indicated they favored ordination of women as elders. However, only 36 approved of ordaining them as ministers. The church has never had women ministers.

The United Church, established in 1925 after a merger of most presbyterians and two other major denominations, elects women in its eldership. Elders in that church may be elected for life or for a shorter term.

"During discussion of the women in the - ministry debate, Rev. L. R. Files of New London, P.E.I., said the New Testament writings of the apostle Paul show woman is to be the companion of man and should not be given more authority than him.

But Elder Sidney Stevens of Hamilton said the church already is 10 years behind the times.

"We need all ministers immediately and could use our trained women," he said.

Two Students Killed in Riots In Panama

PANAMA (AP) — The Panamanian National Guard restored order in Colon and Panama Monday night after eight hours of student disorders. Two students were killed.

President Marco A. Robles ordered all high schools in the two cities closed indefinitely, but more trouble was expected.

A two - year - old girl was brought dead to a hospital in Colon during the disturbances and there was an unofficial report that a boy died after being overcome by tear gas.

In addition, 27 persons were injured in Colon, Panama's second city at the Caribbean end of the Panama Canal. Five of them were in hospitals.

The trouble started in Colon when students demonstrated in front of the school designated of investigations to protest the unsolved killing of leftist student leader Juan Navas Pajoye. The students claim the department's agents killed him. He was found dead from a blow on the skull by a roadside bar Colon a week ago, shortly after he was released from medical treatment in Moscow.

The government has denied its agents are responsible and said an investigation has yielded no leads.

Martin Asks for New Pact Giving France NATO Role

By HAROLD MORRISON

BRUSSELS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Paul Martin called on the North Atlantic Alliance today to "initiate a new relationship" which would reflect the special concern of France and to push ahead in search of an East-West peace pact in Europe.

As the NATO powers reached agreement on how to restore its strength following the French eviction notice, Martin opened a two-day session of the 15 NATO foreign ministers, pleading for an alliance that is "more than a name."

His speech was an evident attempt to reconcile deep differences among the major allies resulting from President de Gaulle's order withdrawing French forces from the integrated NATO command. De Gaulle gave both Canada and the United States notice that they must close their French air bases by next April.

To meet this crisis, 34 foreign ministers decided Monday to reduce and streamline the NATO military command and pull it out of France as quickly as possible. France was not represented at the session.

The Benelux powers were invited to accept the supreme headquarters to be located near here.

The NATO defence college at Paris is to be shifted to Rome and the staff of the commanders of the Central European Allied headquarters integrated and relocated in Belgium or West Germany, or in both.

WON SUPPORT

Martin won support of some NATO members and powers for an immediate removal of the NATO ministerial council, the vital policy-making body, from Paris.

Big powers — the United States, Britain and West Germany — wanted to pull the council out as quickly as possible.

The 15 ministers agreed to reconvene here next October to re-examine the issue, and meanwhile NATO would look for a possible alternative site.

Goods Taken From Two Tweed Shops

TWEED (SPECIAL) — Thieves early Monday morning broke into two shops in this village and escaped with a large quantity of merchandise.

Entered were the Red and White grocery store owned and operated by Clarence Wood, and Tweed Radio and Electric, owned and operated by Cathy Donsky.

Police testified they were called to the church at 1.05 a.m. A constable said he found the basement door at the corner of the church behind the church. He said he waited a few minutes for reinforcements to arrive, then entered the church and observed Akey and Campoli standing against the church wall. They were arrested and handcuffed. A screwdriver, duck call and opened jackknife were found on Akey's person.

Malloy was found shortly afterwards lying on the floor behind a large tool box, with his hands over his head.

Police said that Akey admitted taking the jackknife and duck call from a car which was parked outside in the church parking lot.

A constable testified that upon further checking the premises, I saw a door which led into a room containing a machine. There were splinters of wood on the floor and the outside sheet of plywood had been kicked through."

He said the coke machine had not been disturbed and there was no sign of anything being taken.

All three youths testified that they went into the church to sleep. Campoli said he had been locked out of his house by his father that night and Akey and Malloy said they couldn't get a ride back to Bayside.

Defence counsel Douglas Boyle said the crux of the defence for Campoli was that there was no intent by him to commit an indictable offence. Magistrate Wills commented that argument was not acceptable in view of the fact they broke into another room inside the premises.

Police Report Man Missing Since Saturday

A Belleville man who has a nervous condition and suffers from occasional blackouts has been reported missing.

City police say that Herbert Wilson Kenyon, 58, of 41 Haig Rd., was last seen at 9:30 p.m. Saturday.

Mr. Kenyon is five foot six inches in height, weighs 135 pounds, has a sallow complexion, grey hair and blue eyes. When last seen he was wearing a navy blue suit coat, khaki colored trousers, a blue and grey fedora, a khaki shirt and brown shoes.

He was reported missing by his daughter, Mrs. Cameron Ameringen, 41 Haig Rd. Mrs. Cameron said that he suffers uses medication and always carries it with him.

Anyone seeing this man is asked to phone Belleville city police immediately.

Remand Three For Breaking Into Church

Three area youths were made guilty and remanded one week for sentencing by Magistrate T. Y. Wills today on a charge of breaking and entering St. Michael's Church on May 30.

Donald Richard Campoli, 18, 80½ South Front St., Robert C. Malloy, 17, Belleville, and James R. Akey, 18, Bayside, were remanded in custody to await a pre-sentence report. Akey was also found guilty on two charges of stealing out of the same incident.

Police testified they were called to the church at 1.05 a.m. A constable said he found the basement door at the corner of the church behind the church. He said he waited a few minutes for reinforcements to arrive, then entered the church and observed Akey and Campoli standing against the church wall. They were arrested and handcuffed. ## Sanitary Inspector Is Re-hired

TRENTON — H. S. Pane, sanitary inspector for the town for a number of years, was rehired by town council last night at $80 a week until such time as the town decides whether or not it will join with the Hastings and City of Belleville Health Unit.

Mr. Pane terminated his employment with the town on the 30th of April, but returned to the job temporarily on the recommendation of MOH Dr. R. W. Dow, who told council the town should not be without a sanitary inspector.

TAGGERS BUSY

Victorian Order of Nurses tagging campaign upwards of $400 last Friday and Saturday. This figure is approximately half the total collected in tag days last year.

IS LOCKED THROUGH

Tax boats were locked through Lock No. 1 last weekend, bringing to 48 the number of boats through since navigation's opening May 13 — twice as many as last year.

CHALLENGE TURNED DOWN

In "declining with thanks," an invitation from Belleville city council to take part in an 18-hole golf tournament, Trenton council last night voted the formal reply to the effect that "Trenton council had no time for such frivolous pursuits — and weren't devotees of the game, anyhow."

News in Brief

TRENTON — Trenton town council last night that much of the work on the approaches to Trenton's new bridge would be completed by September of this year. It is also planned to have the bridge itself completed by the end of the year. The deck should be in by July, 1967.

Councillor D. R. (Nick) Fraser reported to council last night that he would next week move the council chamber air conditioning unit to the nearby Town Office, the unit to cool the entire upstairs of the municipal office, he said. Councillors Fraser and Kinney were delegated to do the moving.

Councillor Douglas Kinney told council last night that the municipal electric department's stock showed a profit of $419 in March and a net profit of $2,300 on the first three months' operation. The profit in the first quarter last year was $1,800.

Fraser-Glenbourne bus asked council to re-zone an 11 acre area south of Wragge Street to the DCA Food property, and went to the Erie Technological property, to residential.

Council was told by Clerk Comptroller O. W. Larry last night that it had received no serious objection to the re-zoning. Erie through general manager George Kemp, said only that it would not like further expansion interfered with.

Councillor D. R. Fraser, one of the principals of Fraser-Glenbourne, said he and company was willing to cede a 66-foot road allowance at the west side of the property, to be known as the extension of Victoria Ave. and the "production" at Erie. This would be given in lieu of a five per cent parks' allowance, Mr. Fraser said, provided the parks' board agreed.

Trenton council cleared by-by-law last night Fire Chief Cecil Ellis, right to send supplies to mutual aid fires. This was to prevent any trouble with insurance companies holding policies on the equipment.

New Sanitary Sewer for Roscoe Ave.

TRENTON—Trenton council last night approved in principle the early installation of an all-flush and combination sanitary sewer on Roscoe Ave. All that remains now is Ontario Municipal Board approval of the project, long awaited by Roscoe Ave. residents, who are presently serviced by septic tanks, which have been in operation past the time recommended by experts; soil conditions in the area taken into consideration.

Approval of a 250-foot watermain installation on Flim Street, (estimated cost, $2,100); a 1,360 watermain installation on Edward Street, (estimated cost, $34,000); a 1,184 watermain installation on Willis Street, (estimated cost, $12,000); and a six-inch watermain installation of Bay Street, from Pitafall Street, 643 feet easterly, under the Local Improvements Acts, was also forthcoming.

Judgment Will Be Appealed

TRENTON — Trenton town council, meeting in camera last night, voted to lodge an appeal with the Ontario Court of Appeal against judgment brought down on May 30 by Mr. Justice Leo Landreville which ruled against the town in a trespass dispute with the B. W. Powers - and Son coal property and the Pitsburg Coal Company.

Mr. Justice Landreville awarded the coal companies $1,135 in damages when they proved to his satisfaction in the Supreme Court that the town and committed trespass when it opened up an extension of Ontario Street, used by the coal companies for many years and taxed by the corporation as a municipal property.

Following the half hour meeting with town solicitor Roderick Campbell, reporters were advised by Mayor James MacDonald of council's decision. Present in council, with the exception of D. R. Fraser, voted to appeal the judgment. Mr. Fraser did not vote on the issue owing to conflict of interests."

Police Mowed Down by Rocks And Bricks

BELFAST (Reuters) — Police who tried to break up a religious procession of 5,000 Catholics and Protestants Monday night were mowed down by a hail of rocks, bottles, stones and nuts and bolts.

Four policemen and a number of civilians were injured, and a 12-year-old girl—were taken to a hospital after angry Catholics stoned a procession of 1,500 Protestants.

Cars, buses and trucks were burned down were smashed in a burning street fight which broke out as a mutilated Protestant clergyman led his supporters in a protest rally against alleged Catholic intolerance in the Irish Presbyterian Church.

Catholics blocked the path of the marchers through the centre of Belfast—capital of officially Protestant Northern Ireland—which is still part of British.

They hurled missiles and brought the procession to a standstill before police reinforcements drove their riot sticks and charged the crowd to break up the battle.

Later eight persons were reported under arrest.

The leader of the Protestant marchers was Rev. Ian Paisley, one of two Protestant clergymen refused entry to Italy recently when he went to protest the visit of the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England, with Pope Paul.

Two Toronto Area Men Hurt In Accident

TRENTON — Two-Toronto area men were taken to Trenton hospital last evening following an accident on Highway 401, a mile west of Highway 33.

The driver of a light van, Gordon Edward Weaver, 36, of Toronto, was admitted for treatment. Still in hospital, suffering from a cut to his head, is Bob Bazeley, in his 20s, of Scarborough.

Provincial police from the Brighton detachment say the van went out of control when a tire blew, and rolled over. Damage to the van was set at $2,000.

Sex Relations Out of Wedlock Denounced

LONDON (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham denounced lust, sexual relations outside marriage and self indulgence Monday night at the first youth meeting of his London crusade.

"I can see no place in the Bible that allows for sex relations outside marriage without bringing difficulties and problems to those who engage in them," he said.

But, he added, there is no doubt that Western culture no longer accepts the idea that sexual relations should be confined to married couples.

"It is a distorted society, especially in America, which gives young people automobiles to drive, provides them with opportunity to go out with the opposite sex, but does not teach them the moral dangers of promiscuous sex," Graham said.

He took girls to be modest in clothing and advised young men to avoid the wrong company, watch their reading and leisure time and be careful of the movies and television shows they see.

Bylaws for Unrestricted Gas Sale for Trial Period, Opening Of Day Nursery Up Next Meeting

Following one of the longest regular council sessions in recent years by-laws authorizing unrestricted hours of sale for gasoline and for the opening of a municipally-operated day nursery for children of working mothers will come before city council at its next meeting.

Heated discussion and lengthy debate on the two controversial items marked yesterday's council session which took more than four hours to complete.

During the meeting delegations both for and against unrestricted sale of gasoline were heard, while welfare officials outlined the need and details of the proposed day nursery for Belleville.

The gasoline by-law will provide for a six month trial period of unrestricted hours of sale, following which operators will revert to the present hours of sale.

Local solicitor Robert Temple, appeared for the service station operators asking for the trial period of unrestricted hours of sale, while Claude Roper, Canadian Road, presented the views of operators wishing to retain the present hours of sale.

PETITIONS NOT CLEAR CUT

Petitions supporting both views have been presented to council with strength about evenly divided.

But the petitions are not quite clear cut. There are 16 service stations now operating in the city but 34 names appear on the two petitions with five names appearing on both petitions.

Mr. Temple claimed that with operators about evenly divided in their views, council should decide in favor of free enterprise.

But Mr. Roper felt that allowing unrestricted hours of sale would mean operators bowing to the wishes of the few at the expense. He asked that there be a substantial majority of operators wishing unrestricted hours of sale before council allowed a change.

Miss Mary Gibson, field supervisor of day nurseries for the Ontario Department of Welfare, and Mr. Dan Aitken Belleville welfare administrator spoke on the need for a day nursery.

35 IN ONTARIO

Miss Gibson said there were 35 municipalities in Ontario which operated day nurseries with Toronto operating 10. Fees were geared to the municipality to pay and ranged from 10 cents to $2.50 per day.

In most instances no children were admitted if the mother or parents could afford to pay the full cost of day nursery care.

Alderman Donald Joss and Thomas Carruthers felt there was a definite need for such facilities would be used by parents able to afford private day nursery care, but Alderman Ellis assured that admission to recreational centres would prevent this.

Mr. Aitken said a local survey had shown that there were 27 children of working mothers on welfare who would be eligible to attend day nursery in Belleville.

He suggested it might be some time before enrolment would reach the number but could not assure this would be the maximum.

ADMISSION POLICY GIVEN

The proposed day nursery would be supervised by trained personnel under the jurisdiction of the welfare director.

Admission policy for the day nursery would be:

(a) Children from homes which are being kept together and maintained for the benefit and personal efforts of mothers; the fathers being out of the homes for various reasons, death, illness, separation, desertion, etc.

(b) Children from homes in which both mothers and fathers are present but in which special or urgent situations can only be met by the mothers employment in addition to that of the fathers is contingent upon the securing of Nursery Care or Day Care Centre for their children.

Children between the ages of 2 and 5 would be eligible for admittance to day nursery school at in accordance with the regulations.

$36,000 SAID COST

In certain circumstances, however, need day nursery at Belleville have been set at $20,000, made up of $6,500 for equipment, $8,500 for maintenance (rental), meals, play material, etc. and $14,000 for salaries and administration costs.

Revenue (from fees of children enrolled) is estimated at $5,500, leaving a net cost of $24,330.

This amount would be subsidized 50 percent by the province leaving the city's net share for the first year of operation at $12,165.

A proposed maximum fee of $63.00 monthly or $3.00 daily has been suggested with a minimum fee of $1.00 daily. Under certain circumstances, however, depending on the financial position of the applicant, the fee may be waived.

The proposed fee schedule is based on the cost of operation, the number of children attended, land, local economics, losses and extraordinary care for certain children attending half days.

CONTROVERSIAL ITEM

Alderman Jack Allin said the proposed day nursery had become the most controversial item in his tenure as a member of city council and said that some of the blame should fall on the welfare department for not fully advising council of all details.

He said there should have been more publicity and a better selling job done.

Mayor Ellis objected to the alderman's attitude, pointing out that Mr. Aitken had been at the council budget meeting ready to answer any questions. He said it was not the aim of the welfare department to publicize the affairs of welfare recipients.

The mayor went on to cite the feeling of the U.S.A. government that day nursery care was essential and should be available to everybody.

"But does Mr. Johnston say that one half of the cost should be borne by the property owners?" asked Alderman J. Russell Scott.

MIGHT REDUCE TAXES

Mayor Ellis replied that in the long run day nursery care would reduce the property owners taxes.

He said there had been no increase in the 1966 city welfare budget because of the day nursery proposal.

Alderman Arthur Keegan said that the older local people with fixed incomes were opposed to the day nursery, adding that as a result of a newspaper advertisement he had received more than 540 letters.

Mayor Ellis said, however, that the answers received by Alderman Keegan were not based on facts and because of this could have no bearing.

Alderman Don Williams said objection to the proposed day nursery reflected a lack of faith in the city welfare department. "I say let us try it but it be given a chance," he said.

Alderman Joss admitted that he had misinterpreted the proposed day nursery program and said if it had been fully explained he would not have objected.

He asked, however, that safeguards be written into the by-law to assure that only children of needy welfare parents where the mother was working be enrolled in the day nursery.

Gossard Garment Company Will Not Locate in City

The comment that the city of Belleville was "over-planned and under-developed" was heard in city council yesterday after it was learned that the Gossard foundation garment company would not locate in this city after all.

To a question from Alderman Arthur Keegan Mayor J. R. Ellis said he had last week received a letter from the Gossard company vice-president stating they would not be able to locate in Belleville as had been planned.

The letter indicated the company had purchased a bankrupt plant in Toronto which would provide all expansion presently required for up to five years.

In making the announcement Mayor Ellis said that the site in Hillcrest been serviced, the Gossard company would have already commenced construction.

NO PAYMENT MADE

Unfortunately the Gossard company had not paid the city for the plant site.

"It seems to me that Belleville is over planned and under developed," commented Alderman J. Russell Scott. "Planning seems to be continually holding us up. Apparently we need some kind of an expeditor to get action."

Alderman Keegan's enquiry regarding the Gossard company came following some mild criticism by the city council regarding Industrial Commission secrecy.

He said the Industrial Commission policy should be thoroughly discussed so that it might be understood why Belleville misses out on industry.

REPORT COMING

In reply the mayor said there would shortly be a complete report from the Industrial Commission.

At the same time the mayor supported the Commission policy of secrecy to protect possible industrial clients.

"If there was no secrecy, the word would soon get around and soon we would have no industrial enquiries," he said.

Mayor Ellis said the commission had another prospect for the Gossard site but he would not disclose the name until the company was signed on the dotted line.

Roslin Man Has Skull Pierced by Nail

A Roslin man injured yesterday afternoon in a mishap at the Belleville Construction site of Belleville's new Centennial Secondary School was reported in fair condition this morning in a recovery room in Kingston General Hospital.

Stuart Sinclair, 34, of Roslin, was rushed by LaSalle Ambulance Service to Belleville General Hospital around 3 p.m. Monday after his skull was pierced by a nail, while he was installing sheet metal on a corridor ceiling in the partially-completed high school. He was taken almost immediately from the Belleville hospital to Kingston by ambulance, the latter procedure in many "critical" accident cases in the area.

At the time of the accident, Mr. Sinclair was working with a "ram-set gun," a tool capable of driving nails several inches into solid concrete by means of a 22-calibre charge.

A nail apparently grazed the construction "hard hat" that he was wearing and entered Sinclair's skull just above the right temple.

Two men working near Sinclair did not witness the actual mishap but saw Sinclair fall from the four-foot high step ladder on which he had been working.

Resuscitation Courses Planned For District

Municipal fire departments and St. John Ambulance are co-operating to provide the public with training and opportunity to learn artificial respiration. Members of St. John Ambulance Brigades will give instruction while the fire departments will supply the facilities.

The course, planned especially for campers, cottagers, boaters and camp leaders, is open to persons who are at least 16 years old. In the Bay of Quinte area, nine classes are scheduled. Two will be held in Belleville with the first at No. 1 fire hall on Thursday, June 16 and the second at the 2 fire hall on Monday, June 20.

The program gets under way at Trenton Fire Department tomorrow night and continues at Deseronto, Monday, June 13; Wellington—Tuesday, June 14; Picton and Tweed, Tuesday, June 21; Rawdon, Thursday, June 23 and Marmora, Wednesday, July 13. At Trenton and Marmora, the classes will be held from 7:30-9:30 p.m. At all other locations, the two-hour course runs from 8-10 p.m.

Williamson Medical Clinic Banned by Municipal Board

The Ontario Municipal Board has ruled against the city's application for re-zoning of a portion of 75 Dundas Street, East, which would allow the operation of a medical clinic by Dr. Harold Williamson.

The hearing was heard by board member F. G. Blake in city council chambers on April 22 with the ruling being handed down early last week.

The Dundas Street clinic has been before council for several years and appeared to have come to head about a year ago when Dr. Williamson applied to council for re-zoning. Council referred the matter to the planning board which recommended that re-zoning not be approved.

Last October council rejected the planning board recommendation that re-zoning not be approved and at the same meeting approved Dr. Williamson's request. When neighboring property owners objected the OMB hearing was called.

GIVE REASONS

The OMB ruling noted that the city had submitted no evidence at the hearing in support of its application and said there appeared to be considerable doubt that the clinic would be properly authorized and also that the owner is entitled to use for a medical clinic, or for accessory parcel for a parking lot.

"It appears to me that the present owner of the subject land (Dr. Williamson) has been the author of the problem and that granting of this application, while solving his problem would be harmful to some extent to other individuals."

"The operations intended for this subject property and particularly the parking lot would have a depreciating effect on the adjacent residential properties. There was no evidence that the general neighborhood has undergone a change in zoning or that the change would be in the public interest."

WILL 'SIT TIGHT'

"In the absence of any evidence by the city in support of its application and in view of the lack of sound evidence from any person in support that the proposed change is in accordance with good planning, I recommend that this application be refused," concluded Mr. Blake in his ruling.

"So what does council do now?" asked one councillor after the OMB ruling was received.

Mayor Jack Ellis suggested that council merely "sit tight" and enforce the present zoning regulations.

Present zoning in the area would permit Dr. Williamson to operate the clinic only if it was in connection with his official residence.

ISRAELI ART EXHIBIT — Mrs. Flo Yanover (left) listens as the Hon. Gabriel Lourie, Consul of the State of Israel in Toronto, explains the significance of this painting of a synagogue to her and Mrs. Becky Shulman at a display of Israeli art sponsored by the Hadassah Wizo and the Corby Public Library yesterday.

Israeli Art and Handicraft Exhibit Officially Opens at Corby Library

An Israel Art and Handicraft exhibit was officially opened last night at Corby Public Library. A large and enthusiastic audience attended the event, sponsored jointly by the Belleville Chapter of Hadassah and the Belleville Public Library. Mrs. L. Yanover and Mrs. I. Shulman were conveners.

Mrs. S. Schlein, president of the local chapter, and her conveners, received the guests. Mrs. Yanover welcomed those present on behalf of Hadassah and thanked the library for its co-operation and assistance. She said the motivation behind this event included the desire to render service to the city of Belleville and added the hope that through the international language of art this purpose could be achieved.

Mrs. Yanover introduced Mr. W. G. Anderson, chairman of the Library Board, who spoke on behalf of the Belleville Library and expressed its pleasure at being co-sponsor of the exhibit.

ISRAELI CONSUL SPEAKS

Dr. George Liben, executive director of the central region of the Zionist Organization of Canada, gave a brief outline of the backgrounds of the artists and introduced the Hon. Gabriel Lourie, Israeli consul, patron of the exhibition. Mr. Lourie expressed his appreciation to the Library for its kind reception and paid tribute to Hadassah for its efforts. Mr. Lourie announced that a shelf of books would be donated to the library on behalf of the Zionist Organization.

Mrs. Yanover called on His Worship, Mayor Jack Ellis, who extended a civic welcome and referred to the city's infinite pleasure at being privileged to have this cultural contribution to its citizens' life.

After the official opening, guests were privileged to view the display at their leisure following the addition of refreshments. A reception was held for the visiting dignitaries.

The exhibition will continue at the library for the remainder of this week, excluding Wednesday, from 2 to 9 p.m. There is no admission charge. A door prize will be drawn from the names of those attending the exhibition.

Method to Shorten Council Meetings Not Working Out

Council Rents Quarters for Health Unit

The Hastings County Health Unit, when it gets underway about September 1st, will have the present Belleville Board of Health offices on Pinnacle Street as its headquarters.

Yesterday city council voted to lease the Pinnacle Street quarters to the county health unit at a monthly rental of $300, the rental to include heat and light, and the use of furnishings and equipment.

The lease of the Pinnacle street quarters can be terminated by either party on two month's notice.

Harder Drive Will Be Name Of New Street

The recent suggestion of a Belleville resident that consideration be given to naming new streets after former mayors will have to wait for a little while.

The suggestion was that a proposed road connecting Palmer and Avondale Roads, which will run out into Sidney township be named after former mayor the late Charles Hannah. The request was forwarded to the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

Yesterday council learned that Sidney township had already requested that the new street be named Harder Drive.

Mayor Ellis commented that the Harder family had provided the right-of-way for the roadway in Sidney and it was only reasonable to consider the township request.

LIKE CITY LIFE

About 10 per cent of the population of Portugal lives in Lisbon, the capital.

City councillors are getting tired of those long drawn out council meetings and are beginning to ask if something can't be done to shorten them.

And that is just what council thought it was doing when at the first of the year it adopted the present policy of holding the bi-monthly committee meeting and regular council session on the same day.

This, it was thought, would eliminate the separate council-lee meetings, and council business would be completed that much quicker.

But that is not the way it is working out.

Yesterday council went into session at 4:00 o'clock and the day's business was not over until after 8:15 — more than four and a quarter hours later.

PLENTY OF REPETITION

The trouble apparently is repetition.

First council goes over the day's business informally, approving or disapproving of the recommendations before them.

Then during the regular council session when proceedings are broadcast over the radio, many of the councillors repeat their performance.

According to Mayor Jack Ellis it is this repitition which is consuming council's time.

The only solution he can see is that with the possible exception of personal discussions during the informal session be broadcast.

Then, he feels, there would be no point in repeating the arguments.

ETNA STILL HOT

CATANIA, Sicily (AP)—Volcanic Mount Etna has poured out 2,000,000 cubic metres of lava in 112 days of continuous eruption, scientists here reported Tuesday. The eruption is the first major outbreak of the towering volcano in two years.

Britain's Plight

With Britain's gold and dollar reserves falling steeply as a result of the seamen's strike the country is being forced to make further, stringent economies.

While not linked directly with the sterling crisis resulting from the strike, the announcement that Britain is dropping out of the space race is a case in point. It is doing so simply because it costs too much.

Britain, of course, was not engaged in the kind of research of the magnitude practised by the United States and the Soviet Union. It was not in the race for the moon for example. However, it had performed useful work in rocket research in co-operation with Australia at the latter country's Woomera Range.

As a member of a body called the European Launcher Development Association, Britain had provided the Blue Streak Rocket, already undergoing tests in Australia with a view to launching a European communications satellite in 1970. It had committed itself to paying 40 per cent of the cost of the project, now estimated at a total of about $420 million.

In other words, Britain stood to pay about $100 million toward the cost. Compare this with the continuing drain on the country's gold and dollar reserves (they fell $114 million during May to $3,657,000,000) and it will be realized that Britain can ill afford to finance such projects.

It now seems likely that the other ELDO countries will take over the Blue Streak project. They are Australia, France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, and Holland. All of whom are enjoying more stable industrial conditions than is Britain.

Vancouver's Strike

Strike-breaking may be bad form, from the strike pickets' point of view at least. In their book, and that of the union to which they belong, it simply is not cricket to walk across those picket lines.

There are times, however, when it is not in the public interest to permit a strike to continue indefinitely. In Vancouver, for example, the garbage cans have been idle for four weeks and the city is a mess.

In the circumstances we can regard only with admiration the force of 100 high school students who "overran" pickets guarding packed refuse in downtown Vancouver, and carted it off to the city dump for unloading in defiance of other pickets.

Whatever the merits of the Strikers' demands, there is the threat to public health posed by the appalling accumulation of garbage. In this light — quite apart from the unkempt appearance the city has taken on — the action of the students was admirable. They worked on a voluntary, non-profit basis, and two girls in the squads said the campaign started spontaneously.

One who made her own personal protest was Dulcie Brincombe, a 19-year old university co-ed. She took the family lawn-mower (an old one with no motor), hitched a ride into town and started trimming the 1,000 unkempt acres of Stanley Park.

Not only the garbagemen, but all the other civic outside workers are out too. While acknowledging the value in times of rising costs the workers' demands may have merit, the action of the students commands respect.

Driver's Responsibility

Tucked away in a brief news item the other day was some sage advice from Karl Kohler, president of Volvo (Canada) Ltd., the Swedish car company which has a plant in Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

Mr. Kohler said that the safety factor of North American automobiles "has been blown up out of all proportions." He said that the responsibility for accidents rests first with the driver, then with road conditions and finally with the car.

This makes sense. The driver must assume the prime responsibility for safety on the highways. An axiom of highway safety is that accidents do not happen, they are caused — more often than not by careless driving. This in turn can mean driving at excessive speed according to the conditions, or driving while impaired.

Once the driver recognizes his own responsibility there may be some hope of reducing the terrible death toll on the highways. If cars can also be made intrinsically safer, so much the better, but it is to have more emphasis on driver education and slower safety as well.

Medicine Kit

For many years, foreign correspondents of the Associated Press have carried special medicine kits for protection in areas where physicians and drug stores are few and far between.

The kits are prescribed by Dr. William G. von Stein, physician in charge of the news gathering organization's medical department in New York, and include nearly a dozen basic drugs ranging from aspirin (a sleeping pill) to aralen (a drug for malaria).

Inflation Real Threat

Letter to Windsor Star

Never, perhaps in the whole course of economic history, have so many economists been so wrong about so much as they were between the end of 1964 and the end of 1947.

They prepared for deconbilization and lasted got a breaking of all the wartime dams which had held up inflation, and the streams flowing with money turned into torrents. That began the wave of post-war inflation.

Today we see inflation increasing day by day. The post - war world wide political revolution had become dangerous. All nations had to make good the ravages of war. Demands for raw materials rose on all sides to levels unimaginable. Restraints upon spending were loosed.

The most pressing inflationary force came in the field of politics. It came from governments themselves. Governments took into themselves duties of doing for citizens what they would otherwise have done for themselves.

New debts were added and new taxes were imposed. Today we are faced with the facts that of all the subtle instruments for the subverting of individual freedom, inflation is the worst. The problem will be hard to solve.

What are we to make of it? The whole of Canada is in the vise-grip of this danger. We are faced with the erosion of the value of money by creeping inflation.

All those who have recognized the dangers of a Welfare State agree that the condition of inflation is a real and immediate danger. The Welfare State contains nothing in itself which would set a limit on its own activities.

It is because we have allowed the Welfare State to exceed its proper bounds that we now find ourselves trapped.

The Welfare State becomes a camouflaged taxation of those who have to restrict their spending because their incomes did not rise as fast as the value of money declined.

We stand at the crossroads, where one way leads to a free society, free economy and free enterprise, and the other to a Welfare State which tends to become self-defeating.

This should be a sobering thought; how far are we prepared to let compulsory Welfare State provisions go?

Talbot Kirkpatrick.

Two per cent of service calls by motorists to the Dominion Automobile Association are from people who have run out of gas, compared with four per cent 30 years ago. Bigger gas tanks and more filling stations are credited for the drop. Credit cards help, too.

Temperament May Be Changed After Stroke

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Last year my husband had a stroke from which he is slowly recovering.

He has changed in so many ways, his likes and dislikes, and his temperament flares at the least thing. Is this usual in people who have had a stroke? Nothing I do pleases him.

Also please tell me if I am too old to have my varicose veins taken care of. They are bulging and rather painful at times. How long would I have to be in the hospital? — Mrs. J. M.

Personality changes such as you mention are not usual in a person with a stroke, but neither are they unusual.

Although your husband is slowly improving, he realizes that he cannot do the things he formerly could. This can produce a dessimist attitude that can make him very irritable.

Furthermore, certain portions of the brain having to do with personality may have been affected by the stroke. Great patience and tact are required to care for a patient under these circumstances.

As he improves physically and gains more confidence in himself, you may notice a change in his attitudes.

You forgot to give me your age, but since your varicose veins are not only unsightly but causing discomfort, it would be well worth while to discuss surgery with your doctor. Age no longer is a very important factor if your health in general is good.

This type of surgery requires hospitalization for only a few days. In fact, patients are encouraged to get on their feet and start moving about very soon afterwards.

Dear Dr. Molner: My doctor states I have a chronic lung condition known as emphysema. Would you explain more about it? Does smoking have any effect on it? — H. B.

So many people these days are discovering that they have emphysema, and are asking the same questions, that I can't keep repeating the answers here. They are all contained, however in my booklet, "How to Control Emphysema." Send to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., 10 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll mail the booklet to you.

Yes, smoking has a lot to do with emphysema. You definitely should stop.

Dear Dr. Molner: A few weeks ago I began spending a few minutes a day standing on my head. I started for a half minute, now its three minutes. I thought it might speed up the ability to use my thought processes. Is this beneficial or harmful? I feel somewhat better and more mentally alert, but there may be no connection. — L. C.

It stirs up your circulation, gives you a bit of exercise and it's probably wonderful to talk about at parties when the conversation lags. I don't see how it can hurt you. It's not a totally new fad, though.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 33 and have not had a period for three years. When can I stop having a pelvic examination once a year? Does hormone therapy help?

The pelvic examination is of great importance against disease, and to find it early if any develops. Your age is not a governing factor. Continue your annual examination.

Nothing New Under the Sun

Victoria Colonist

There are some people (often calling themselves philosophers) who claim that the nuclear age negates history.

They believe that the lessons of the past can no longer be applied to the problems of the future.

They say that history can tell us where we have been but can't tell us where we are going.

History, they declare, will no longer repeat itself.

Those who subscribe to this theory may be interested in the following passage:

". . . It is certain that the government is very weak; that it grows weaker day by day, and the cause of this lack of power is not external attack but inherent imbecility. (The prime minister) has undertaken a task which at his age he should have avoided.

"A 'hot blood' coolled is ecclectic: but a cool mind chilled is bad. The fact, too, that we have just had two very old premiers for a reason, but the opposite of a reason, for selecting another very old one.

"We cannot go on waiting for ever. The time of the country is too valuable and its business too great to permit us to live perpetually in a delicious observance of estimable age."

As prescribers of history they should be interested before they read this passage was not written today or yesterday as a criticism of Prime Minister Lester Pearson and his Liberal Government. It was written a hundred years ago by The Times of London as a rebuke to the British prime minister, Lord Russell, and his Liberal Government.

20 YEARS AGO

June 7th, 1946

The public advantages of holding an old boys' reunion have again been brought to the attention of members of the Belleville City Council by Ex-Mayor W. C. Mikel, who claims that this city owns a great deal to the "old boys" who were responsible for the building of much of this fair city. "The city of Belleville was the first place in Canada to adopt the old boys' reunion and old home week, by establishing the old boys' reunion in the summer of 1905," writes Mr. Mikel to Mayor Frank Folwell. "Belleville owes much to the Old Boys," continued Mr. Mikel "Most of Front St. was built from 60 to 90 years ago, while a great deal of the residential portion of the city was built at the same time."

MPs Put in Long Hours On Parliamentary Grind

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — You may think your MP at his $18,000-plus, with special Parliamentary privileges, is being more than well-paid.

But he's working.

Never so hard in any Parliament as in this one.

Hard enough, in a great many cases, that he even may be earning what the National Revenue Department's national income tax tables has disclosed is the country's top-rated professional salary.

If he doesn't spend every Parliamentary working day in the Commons — and many of the MPs don't — he may be back in his constituency keeping the political home fires burning.

And that isn't easy, listening to everybody who has a beef against Parliament — which, in fact, seems to be just about everybody — opening his home or office door to every favor-seeker who wants a job, a pension, contract or any of those other Federal dispensations that so many people mistakenly seem to believe the MP has at his disposal.

But if he isn't in the Commons or home making hay for the next election, you can be sure he is stuck in one of the multiple House committees.

For when Prime Minister Pearson met his Backbenchers at the opening Caucus, four months ago, the MPs were told he told them that the order of the Commons day from now on would be sitting, work, work.

WITH MUSCLES

The old, take-it-easy, no-sweat days of the Backbencher sitting in the Commons trying to remember what they were, he promised.

There would be plenty now to do.

They — and their opposite numbers in the Opposition ranks — would have a bigger say in Parliament.

And have it where it really counts — where decisions are sometimes even policies are made — in the Commons committees.

The Pearson word has been kept to the letter, and never in Parliament's 99 years has the MPs been as busy as this.

There are now 29 of the committees, and under the new changes that the last Parliament considered, they have been given muscle.

And the right, even the responsibility to use it, whether it matters — in scrutinizing the departmental spending estimates.

These estimates perhaps more accurately could be described as the Treasury Department's budgeting of how your tax dollars are to be spent.

The Commons Committees can't increase these budgets.

But they can, and sometimes do, cut them, by recommending to Parliament and the Government that spending for this or that be trimmed.

It used to be that the estimates of the departments were handled by the Cabinet Ministers concerned.

And in the Commons where he usually was firmly in control.

INTO THE FIRE

You wanted to know why this branch of that department was spending X amount of tax dollars?

So you asked the Minister and he asked his Deputy or some departmental Brass Hat, sitting there in front of him at a little table that the House hands carried in and plunked down before his Commons Frontbench.

Maybe you got an answer that satisfied you. But only maybe. Some of the time you got snowed.

But now that the estimates are being examined by the 21 different House committees, with a chairman, and the cabinet Minister concerned, in charge of things, the MPs are cutting closer to the departmental spending hose.

They get to ask the departmental Brass Hats directly with no Cabinet Minister handy to run interference.

And so, for the first time in Parliamentary history, some of the formerly anonymous departmental Deputies are getting a wrestling — and the MPs are getting some answers.

Some of the MPs, too, are getting a name for themselves.

Like Harold E. Stafford, freshman Liberal MP for Elgin, who has been making some sensibly hard questions in the Commons Broadcasting Committee about the $110,000, 000 officialdom.

New to the House, Mr. Stafford, who has delivered few if any speeches, and so was making no personal mark in the Commons itself.

But hear him swing in the Committee with pointed questions designed to establish just who might be running the CBC and since when did the hired help call the executive shots.

And you'll know a Parliamentary mark is being made, and a name being established.

Labor Unrest Century Ago

Brantford Expositor

There is a familiar ring about an extract from a Times of London editorial of 92 years ago, it says:

The present is a time of universal, however unreasonable, discontent. Classes, all employments, are wanting better pay, less work, more money, more food for money, quicker promotion, earlier retirement and larger superannuations. All are complaining of rising prices and wages. For good or ill there is a universal rising in the rate of expenditure and there is probably not such a thing in these lates as a man content to live as his father did at the same age and under the same circumstances.

Some people don't seem to have changed much since then.

Treasure Van Of 'Y' Service To Visit City

Douglas Moyer, of Toronto, General Secretary of the World University Service of Canada, met last evening with the World Service Committee, members of the Board of Directors and representatives of the Y's Men's and Y's Mentettes Clubs of the Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. to plan a visit to the "Y" of the World University Service Treasure Van.

From September 28, 29 and 30, the people of Belleville and district will be able to visit the display-aids of international handicrafts from over 30 countries at the Belleville Y.M.C.A. building. The Treasure Van brings an exciting display of exotic and unusual goods. From the bazaars of India to the villages of Latin America, the rural co-operatives of northern Europe, and native craftsmen of Africa and the South Pacific islands come thousands of hand-made items.

Koala bears from Australia, ibpaca slippers from Peru; embroidery from Spain; silks from Thailand; traditional toys from Russia, Mexico and Japan; batiks made today, challenged in wax, Tanzania and New Guinea; brassware, incense, silks and bora bags from India; wood carvings from Sweden, Poland and Yugoslavia; "wife beaters" from Barbados; "worry beads" from England; camel saddles from Egypt; grass sandals from Pakistan; leather goods from Morocco; these are but a few of the many colorful items that will be on display.

Net proceeds from the sale will be shared between the World University Service work in 40 under-developed countries and the World University Service of Canada is a voluntary organization of students and graduates which profits on the sale of "Treasure Van" goods help to further the work of the W.U.S. through the Canadian students abroad; assisting overseas students in Canada; and contributing to the growth of universities in developing countries.

The Chairman of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. World Service Committee, Mrs. Peter Simmons, rows was appointed Treasurer Van chairman, Mrs. R. L. Smith accepted the chairmanship of the selling division.

World University Service Treasure Van dates and times to take place in university centres across Canada and this year also in the St. John, New Brunswick, Y.W.C.A., the Brantford and Y.W.C.A. and the Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. Only these three Y's have such sales other than those in university centres. Bert Messacar, General Secretary of the Belleville "Y" was instrumental in starting the sale in Brantford in 1963 and suggested the event to the local "Y" World Service Committee.

Douglas Rain Grasps Chance As Stratford Festival Star

By ROBERT TANNER

STRATFORD — One of the theatre's finest plays, and the climax of his historical cycle, Henry V last night opened the 14th Stratford Festival with a lengthy but gripping production.

Extraordinary can be the highlights was the performance of Douglas Rain in the title role. Mr. Rain, who has been with the company every year since its inception, has hitherto been allotted either supporting roles in the major plays, or leading parts in minor ones, with conspicuous success in each instance. His portrayals of Malvolio in the 1957 Twelfth Night, and of last year's Bourgeois gentleman are typical examples. This year he has been given the chance that started Christopher Plummer on his way to stardom in 1955, and he has grasped it with both hands. Lacking some of Plummer's stature and presence, he has found his own mannerisms, and gives a straightforward but deeply thoughtful portrayal of the king, who, having but recently cast off his life of dissipation on according to the Orsino, finds the mental and battered band of warriors to victory over the French.

He gives no effective throughcast, and p---- to greatness at the play's masterful moments.

FRENCH COURT

It is almost impossible to avoid comparisons between this presentation and the one of 1956: as before, French-Canadian actors have been cast as the French court, a decision ment which makes this such a suitable play for Canadian performers. Again Leonard Rossiter's charm and spontaneity which surrounded Gratien Gelinas as the King, d'Arbanville and Pistol have faded. Jean Gascon was brilliant as the dauphin in 1963 than as Charles VI in 1956, and Diana Leblanc was Katherine in 1956 and Alice in 1963, a magic and music of Burgundy's great speech in the final scene, a speech made memorable by Valentine Dyall in Laurence Olivier's magnificent film.

Again Douglas Rain, the English actors were perhaps more competent than outstanding. In fact, it was the performers in the Welsh role of Captain Fluellen that are the greatest impression. He was ably abetted (to confound the confusion) by Powys Thomas as Welshman) playing Lieutenant Piston (a Cockney). Eric Christmas was also good as Pistol, this year's Henry IV his characterization of the Bibulous Bardolph, a William Hutt could have been rather tricky role of Chorus with his usual experience and Michael Langham's production, like the portrayal of the king, is straightforward, with battle scenes more bloodthirsty and colorful than usually. Sometimes by Desmond Heeley were good, and Glen Gunning, very somber for the English and relieved only by the splendor of the French court. Alan Cook's music played a considerable part in establishing the mood of the various scenes, without appearing intrusive.

Summing up, this production does not seem quite to reach the heights reached 10 years ago, but is nevertheless a very fine presentation of one of Shakespeare's greatest plays. Together with Henry VI, which opens tonight, it takes place in the logical but fascinating series of histories which Stratford is presenting in chronological order, and which will be completed next year.

Parking Problems Acute At Hospital

Parking problems are acute at the Belleville General Hospital, but they are going to be tougher.

When a by-law proposed by the hospital board of governors is passed by city council, motorists who park their cars illegally on hospital property will have their cars towed away and will face parking fines.

Hospital board members at their last meeting passed a motion requesting the parking by-law stating that this was the only answer to the problem of illegally parked cars in the hospital area.

Council was advised last night that parked cars soon times block roads and exits at the hospital which are required for emergency use, including passage of ambulances and fire trucks. Mayor J. R. Ellis said that at times parked cars would make it impossible for a fire truck to get to the rear of the hospital should an emergency arise.

Donald E. McAlpine Weds

Donald E. McAlpine, son of Mr. and Mrs. McAlpine, Marysville, received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from St. Michael's College, University of Toronto, June 2. Mr. McAlpine attended Quinte and Moira Secondary Schools in Belleville and plans to accept a position in France in the fall.

Regional Development Explained

Ontario's Regional Development Program is "an attempt to cope with a growing peril of economic unbalance," the Hon. Joseph A. Curtain, Regional Development Officer in the Region-al Development Branch of the Ontario Department of Economics and Development, in a speech to members of Rotary at luncheon meeting. The population of Ontario will double in 25 years but there is no guarantee it will be allotted to meeting this growth", the speaker declared.

He pointed out that the decision for a development program should cope with such growth and to this end it was aimed at a Belleville of 64,000 people. His department looks forward to producing an economic which will create a better standard of living and also a world where "it will cost more for the perils of overgrowth, he said.

Almost 100 per cent of the province's growth is expected to be urban growth and the major centres will register the largest share of it. There will be another Metro by 2000, Mr. Curtain claimed, for which 57,000 acres will have to be taken out of rural functions.

One of the key steps in the implementation of the regional development program has already been taken, the speaker informed. The creation of the Regional board of Cabinet level, with the Premier as chairman, has been established. Its purpose is to encourage the bringing forward of plans in the economic regions within Ontario.

Belleville's region is represented by the Late Ontario Regional Development Council, one of 10 such councils which will be autonomous areas with full control of their own policies.

The leadership of municipalities is an important committee in the program, Mr. Curtain continued. "His job is not a left handed way of approaching regional government", he warned because regional government is meaningless unless there is the opportunity for you to create a regional program", he said.

Mr. Curtain concluded his address by telling Rotarians that "through our support in a program of regional development, you have an opportunity to create a more dynamic community and prepare yourself for a role in the growth ahead."

Rotarian Jack Ireland introduced the speaker and he was thanked by Past President Jack Deacon.

George Street Park Good Picnic Site

Just because the Zwick's Island Park is temporarily out of use while centennial project work is underway, Belleville residents need not feel they are deprived of suitable picnic sites.

Alderman Don Williams, chairman of the Parks Board, recommends the bay front park at the foot of George Street as an ideal spot for a picnic.

The parks board and harbor commission are cooperating on the development of this park area which has access to the bay and plenty of picnic tables and other park accommodations.

Seaway

binding over six months, he said.

The CBRT president said pay rates for locomotive men on the Toronto-Hamilton-St. Catharines triangle are 30-50 per cent higher than those in other seaway employees. The disparity between the pay of Canadian and U.S. seaway employees was even higher.

An important side issue is the authority to demand it be free to have work done under contract with outside interests in certain circumstances. The union insists on an agreement to prohibit private contracting.

The conciliation board made no recommendation on this point.

Informants say there is little likelihood the authority will try to keep the seaway operating with its 100 non-union supervisory personnel.

The strike vote involved 1,200 workers at Montreal and the Ontario centres of Cornwall, Iroquois, Welland and Sault Ste. Marie.

Announcement of the date by W. J. Smith, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC), came the day after a tally of votes from the union's seven seaway locals showed 1,150 in favor of strike action and only 16 against.

Mr. Smith said in a statement he has authorized a "peaceful withdrawal" of services and said the action was forced by the "total lack of a responsible approach" by the seaway authority to its union demands.

Date for the strike was set 10 days away to give shipping companies enough time to prepare for a closing of the seaway or for a federal mediator to try to bring about a settlement.

Informants say a mediator probably will be appointed soon.

FIRST MAJOR TIEUP

If a strike would be the first major tie-up in the seven-year history of the international waterway. Only the Sault canal between Lake Superior and Lake Huron, operated by the U.S., would be unaffected.

MAPPED MOON NAMES

Most of the names for the moon's many features were given in 1651 by Giovanni Riccioli, an Italian priest.

CAR TRADE FALLS

Sales of new cars in Sweden were 6 per cent lower in the first quarter of this year compared with 1965.

CNR Strike Inevitable Says Editorial

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Transport, the publication of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) says a CNR strike seems inevitable.

An editorial in the publication says it is hardly conceivable that the report of the conciliation board, which has not yet opened hearings into the CBRT's contract dispute with the CNR, will go beyond the durable goods wage standard by a sufficient amount to satisfy the needs of CBRT members.

The durable goods standard is based on a comparison of the average wage rates for non-operating railway employees with the average earnings of workers in the durable goods segment of manufacturing.

The union is conducting a strike vote even though the conciliation board has not begun its hearings. The publication says the union expects to be in a position to go on strike by the end of June or mid-July at the latest.

The editorial says railway workers need a big wage increase and are determined to resist any agency — including the government — that would deny them that objective.

The union is asking for an increase of 50 cents an hour in a two-year contract, plus other contract improvements. Base rate for the employees now is about $2 an hour, a union spokesman said.

Intelligencer Ad May Bring Sale

Mrs. Isobel Armstrong, sales representative for Whalen Real Estate last week had a telephone call as a result of an advertisement in The Intelligencer from a prospective home purchaser in the Arctic. The call was via wireless and land line.

The call being overheard in the office aroused some wondering when the sales representative was heard saying "over" at the end of each sentence. A house sale is expected as a result of The intell being read in the far North.

Wants Municipalities Freed From All Costs of Education

BY TOM CARNEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities said Monday the federal and provincial governments should absorb the total cost of education.

Mayor Victor K. Copps of Hamilton, Ont., told a press conference education costs have increased beyond the capabilities of municipal taxes based on property.

Canadian communities cannot afford to meet the soaring costs of school building, staff and maintenance as well as provide other services on the existing tax structure, he said.

"The demands on us have increased tremendously and we have not been given new sources of income."

Education costs must be met by provincial and federal government revenues from flexible taxes such as sales taxes, said Mayor Copps.

POOR GET MORE

This would not mean loss of autonomy for local authorities, he said. School board would still serve a vital function in selecting curricula and other activities. It would also mean a more equitable distribution of available funds, with more areas getting greater assistance.

The press conference came on the first day of the federation's four - day convention here.

Asked how the education costs should be shared, Mayor Copps said "they (the federal government) can work that out with the provinces."

The municipalities should not approach Ottawa directly because of a constitutional problem, particularly in Quebec.

"Municipalities are creatures of the provincial government," he said.

Mayor Copps also called for federal aid in planning, research and financial assistance to enable municipalities to carry out programs designed to overcome pollution. The first step, he said, would be to recognize pollution of air and water resources as a national problem.

Mayor Copps said one of the federation's achievements during the past year included cheaper telephone rates for users in Quebec and Ontario. Bell Telephone Ltd. had applied to increase rates but a federation delegation's brief to the federal cabinet last January had meant a reduction in the increase, he said. A subsequent similar application for increases in B.C. has been parced accordingly.

COOF Bowlers Hold Banquet

The Canadian Order of Foresters District Saturday Night Bowling League held its annual presentation banquet and dance recently at Chalet Canara.

One hundred bowlers and guests attended, enjoying a turkey dinner prepared and served by the CNRA ladies, and dancing to the music of the Frankie Howard Combo.

During the election of officers for next season, Stewart Dafoe was named president, Marg Ruttan vice - president, Jerry Fobert secretary and Shirley Foley treasurer. The league expects to expand from eight to either 10 or 12 teams next season.

The Jets won first place honors. Members of the team: captain Bernard Foley, Shirley Foley, Kay Dafoe, Alan Lott, Ross Demorest, Ralph Demorest, Drew Dafoe and Joyce Keller.

Clippers won the playoff title. Members of the team: Captain Russ Ruttan, Jean Spencer, Jack Spencer, Mabel McFarquher, Walter Weir, Marg Ruttan, Blondie and Betty Clark.

High average winners were Jerry Fobert and Henry Reid, Marg Ruttan vice - president, Jerry Fobert secretary and Shirley Foley treasurer. The league expects to expand from eight to either 10 or 12 teams next season.

DATE OATMEAL SQUARES

CORRECTION

There is an error in the Lenton Muffins printed May 3, 1960. In the list of ingredients there should be ½ cup milk (not 1½ cups).

* * *

Some of the faculties of Home Economics in our Canadian universities have introduced a semester on the use of mixes and prepared foods for study.

I pick and choose the best of these preparations from the manufacturers of quality products and when they suit a purpose and please me and my staff we write a story.

Now is one of those times — and the product is Date Filling used for Date Oatmeal Squares. The 20-oz. can costs 41c and made the preparation of these Date Oatmeal Squares easy and quick.

ACCELERATED DATE OATMEAL SQUARES:

2 cups sifted but not sifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon baking soda, 2 cups quick-cooking rolled oats, ½ (or 2/3) cup light brown sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla (optional) 1 cup shortening (half butter is recommended), 1 20-oz. can prepared date filling (or 1 lb. pitted dates cooked in 1 cup boiling water until tender and cooled), 1 teaspoon lemon juice (optional).

In a large mixing bowl mix together the flour, salt, baking powder, baking soda, rolled oats and sugar. Sprinkle vanilla over and cut in the shortening or shortening and butter with a pastry blender until mixture is crumbly. Butter a 13 x 9" baking dish and pat half of crumb mixture on bottom smoothly and firmly. If lemon juice is used stir it into date filling. Gently and evenly spread date filling over all. Sprinkle remaining crumbs over top and pat down evenly. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 60 or 70 minutes or until pale gold on top. Do not rush it. This is a thick heavy mix and requires long baking at rather low temperature. Mark into squares while warm.

NOTE:

1) Some mothers when hard pressed for a dessert cut this while warm into 3-inch squares and top it with ice cream. It is good too.

2) As you know, this is often called Matrimonial Squares.

3) As you can plainly see this Date Filling over which I am so enthused can be used between other cut-out plain oatmeal cookies to make them into pairs or as a filling between layer cakes. My favorite way to use date filling with cake is to make a plain 2-egg cake. When cool spread top with ¼" thick layer of date filling and cover that with Mocha Icing: ½ cup butter; 1 tablespoon cocoa; cocoa and instant coffee powder; about 2 cups sifted icing sugar and 2 or 3 tablespoons milk or cream beaten well together.

Ann Landers

Difficult to Get Away With Tax Shonnikers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have worked as a caddy, bus boy, waiter and bartender in my day. I have always been on the side of the poor slob who has had to take guff from the loud-mouth and the cheapskate. Those days are behind me, happily, and now I am seeing the other side.

ANN LANDERS

I am self-employed and most do considerable entertaining in expensive restaurants. To keep things straight with Uncle Sugar I use credit cards almost exclusively. If the Internal Revenue boys want to take a second or third look at my expenses, it's all right there — neatly recorded. I also add the tip to the tab, rather than laying out cold, hard cash. Incidentally, I'm considered a liberal tipper — usually 20% of the bill.

You ought to see the dirty looks I get from the waiters and the waitresses when I add the tip, in writing. They hate it.

Why? Because then they have to report it as income. If a customer lays the cash down by the plate, or presses it into their little hot hands, they can forget they ever got it, so far as the tax men is concerned. In other words, they rescind the loss of an opportunity to steal. I'd like your comments on this. — THE BAZZ.

DEAR BAZZ: The chiseler will always be with us. But it's getting tougher all the time to pull tax shonnikers.

How dumb do you think the tax boys are? They check the fancy places regularly and they have a fairly good idea of what a waiter or waitress should average in the way of tips. If the waiter is too far out of line when he files he gets questioned and has to come up with what Uncle Sugar thinks he ought to pay.

I'm not saying nobody gets away with anything, but more people are getting away with less all the time — and it's about time.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We have been married 26 years and my husband has never given me any reason to distrust him. About three weeks ago I found orange lipstick on his handkerchief. (I do not wear that shade.) It baffled me, but I put it out of my mind after a few minutes.

This morning I noticed lipstick (orange again) on his white shirt — just below the collar. He is at home for dinner every evening promptly at six o'clock. He never goes anywhere without me. So when does he find time for the orange lipstick? Lunch hour? On his way to work? On his way home? I cannot figure it out.

I've said nothing to him and don't know if I should. Right now I feel insecure and confused. Please advise me in your column. I read it faithfully and I have confidence in you. — ASHAMED TO SIGN INITIALS.

DEAR ASHAMED: By all means speak to your husband. It would be unfair not to. Its record is too good.

Perhaps someone gave him an innocent kiss on the cheek and he wiped it off with his handkerchief. The shirt imprint could have occurred when a gal bumped into him in an elevator.

Most cheating husbands are too clever to bring lipsticked hankies home. My guess is that he is all yours.

European Princess Makes Transition to New Life

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP)—When a European princess makes the transition to life in the New World, there's bound to be adjustment. Like the Old World in evidence.

Princess Maria Louisa of Bulgaria lives with her husband and two sons in a cut stone and redwood ranch house overlooking Lake Ontario.

It's the sort of home occupied by many middle income and upper income families in Canada and it's furnished in Danish modern furniture.

The old World reminders are in the paintings, including a museum-sized oil portrait of Princess Maria's father, the late King Boris of Bulgaria.

There is also an impressive oval portrait of Maria's great grandmother, the late Queen Maria Louisa, after whom she is named. And on either side are matching miniatures of members of Princess Maria's royal family and that of her husband, German Prince Kael of Leiningen.

Prince Karl, who works as a stockbroker in Toronto, remains European in at least one way—he never barbecues for his guests.

"I'm sure I'll hereby housewives and delight husbands by saying I think cooking is woman's work and no man should think of cooking after working hard for eight hours in an office," the princess says.

'PROMISED LAND'

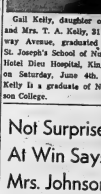
The prince and princess were married nine years ago and "wanted to see the New World." They arrived a year later and Princess Maria says they found "the promised land." They have lived in Oakville since 1951.

Once or twice a year they return to Europe to visit With their masses of relatives. Princess Maria usually stays with her mother, the former Queen Giovanna, in her home-in-exile in Portugal.



Explaining the economics of such trips, Princess Maria says:

"Many ladies of Hamilton and Toronto go to Saks Fifth Avenue and spend the same money in an hour on clothes that it takes me to cross the Atlantic."

She adds that the fare to Lisbon is only $200 and that once she reaches her mother's home the expenses stop.

Princess Maria's father, the late King Boris, died mysteriously in the palace in Sofia in 1943 and her brother became King Simeon. The family thought the king had been poisoned but, as prisoners in the palace, said nothing.

In 1946, after a "phoney plebiscite in which Bulgaria turned republican," Queen Giovanna, the boy king and teen-aged Maria fled to Egypt. Today Simeon runs a Madrid radio station that broadcasts to Bulgaria. Several months ago he and his wife and their three small children visited Princess Maria and Prince Karl here.

Gail Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Kelly, 21 Fairway Avenue, graduated from St. Joseph's School of Nursing, Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, on Saturday, June 4th. Miss Kelly is a graduate of Nicholson College.

Not Surprised At Win Says Mrs. Johnson

MONTREAL (CP) — Reine Johnson, wife of Union Nationale Leader Daniel Johnson, said Monday she was not at all surprised that her husband's party won Sunday's provincial general election.

"I am very pleased with the results," she told the interview here. "I wasn't at all surprised. We had been certain we would win for a long time and the vote confirmed our expectations."

Mrs. Johnson is the daughter of Horace Gagne, one-time Progressive Conservative candidate in Montreal-Soulanges constituency.

She and Mr. Johnson have been married 23 years and have four children: Daniel, 22, Pierre-Marc, 19, Daiane 16 and Marie, 15.

However, Mrs. Johnson said that her husband is not yet premier of Quebec.

Until the final count of votes has been taken in several ridings, it is still a moot point whether the Union Nationale with 53 seats or Premier Jean Lesage's Liberal party with 51 seats so far, will form the government.

"But I am ready to face the responsibilities of being the premier's wife," she said. These responsibilities are no doubt very heavy, but I am used to an exciting life."

She found this year's campaign harder than others she has been through because her children were writing exams.

MOKE ON MUST AND MOLD

For musty odor inside luggage dry well in the sun first to kill any fungus. Make a solution of cedar oil and water, about two tablespoonfuls to a half a pint of water. Spray inside the luggage, having first placed it in an atomizer or other sprayer. Try to keep the spray as fine as possible so that rings won't occur on the lining. Do a small patch at first to test the strength of your solution and the distance away from the article you should hold the atomizer for best results, etc., so that you won't ruin the lining.

For wooden wardrobe, metal trunks — scrub with hot water and detergent.

VACUUM BOTTLES AND THERMOS JUGS

Those respond well to a solution of baking soda — a good spoonful — and water. Fill and leave standing for a while — both before and after using if necessary.

In addition, dry well and try storing them with a couple of lumps of sugar inside. This will sometimes help to keep them fresh and sweet smelling.

BOOKS

Wipe off any mildew on the covers the same as for luggage and open up the books in the sun to dry.

Make a solution of about two tablespoons of oil of wintergreen to half a pint of water and place in a fine spray atomizer. Hold at a distance and spray through the book as you leaf over the pages.

This method is used in the very best libraries of one of the nation's largest reference libraries. As with lining of luggage, do experiment with the solution until you get it the right strength for the job.

Dear Susanna: Hint for prolonging life of sheets:

When you first notice a sheet is getting thin in the centre, before it tears, cut right down the middle.

Now bring the two outside edges together and join them from top to bottom. Hem the worn outside pieces and your sheet is good for a long time again without mending. — Mrs. R. Barvs.

Dear Susanna: After having a slight accident and injuring my knee, it was impossible to get down to dust the baseboards and the lower parts of the furniture.

I'm sure this will sound a little odd, but I purchased a large size dish mop and find that it is heavenly to work with when you cannot bend — saves lots of time when dusting, too.

We added a bit of furniture polish to it and the results are even better. The only part is that it is so easy to wash out and keep clean for the next time. — Miss R. Bennett

Vulgar Talk Bound To Hurt Business

DEAR DORIS: Although I am getting past middle age, I think I am as broadminded as anyone. But lately a good friend, a clever man in his line of business, has become quite rude in his manner of speech, using words that make me cringe. Language that small boys write on fences in a bravado way, or might be heard in a barn.

DORIS CLARK

We feel that it should be brought to his attention that this way of talking is detrimental to his popularity and to his business, but somehow fails to do so. Could he be sick and trying to swagger his way through something that is too big for him? — A CONSTANT READER.

* * *

DEAR CONSTANT: It may be swagger, but it sits poorly on the person of a grown man. Small boys use such language to shock and jar people. In his case it will jar customers into going some place else.

I'm afraid the only thing that will jar him out of it is to lose business. People seldom accept rebukes of this kind before the damage has been done.

* * *

DEAR DORIS: What is social work actually like? Is it much office work or are you more with the people?

Is there anything similar to this social work in which I wouldn't need so much university? — GRADE TWELVE.

DEAR TWELVE: You deal constantly with people. You have appointments, like a doctor does. You discuss personal, often intimate, problems. Through long, specialized study you have understanding of human motives and emotions and effective ways of coping.

Not only so-called office work involved is usually the dictation of reports of such treatment session. Most social workers can't even use a typewriter (except for those who write columns or do other interpretation.)

Most people who like work in a social agency and who get along well with people are often hired for the helping jobs, like receptionists, or some aspects of public relations. To have typing ability will stand you in good stead.

(For a fine leaflet on the career of social worker, write to the Canadian Association of Social Workers, 185 Somerset Street West, Ottawa 4, Canada.)

DEAR DORIS: I am 19. My mother says I have bad posture. My back is straight but she says I stick my neck out.

When I was younger I felt that she was just being mean, but now I realize she was trying to help me. I try to stand up straight but when I look at myself in the mirror my posture looks O.K. to me. — NECK OUT.

DEAR NECK OUT: Pull your chin in next time and see if it doesn't look even better. Your mother is trying to develop lifelong habits to thwart that "dowager's hump!" For your ten cents I am sending you exercises "For Round Shoulders" which will help you straighten up. Nice that you learned, this soon, that your mother was not being mean when she criticized.

Other teens, please note!

Canadian Council of Women Meet

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)— Provincial governments have been reluctant to carry out any measures regarding safety regulations at public swimming places, the Canadian Council of Women was told Monday.

The council opened its 53rd annual meeting Monday night with about 140 delegates present. The council has branches in all provinces except Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

Mrs. H. H. Steen of Vancouver, national president of the council, was named a vice-governor of the board of the International Council of Women, the council was told. International conference of the council was held May 14-28 in Tehran, Iran.

The council was told that a resolution calling for mandatory use of approved life-jackets in small boats met with some success.

ADOPT LIFE IN BELT

The Manitoba council said a life belt had been adopted in that province and used by the federal government. It won approval by the Red Cross.

The council was told of action on two resolutions submitted to Parliament.

A federal committee had been set up to study divorce laws in Canada and there now was a good possibility the Nobel Medal, approved in 1943 but never presented, might be awarded in 1967.

Resolutions passed during Monday's sessions included requests that a citizenship form be provided in which the applicant could affirm his loyalty in his principles, prevent him from swearing an oath, that sections of the Bladen report on university financing and student aid be implemented and that the federal government nominate women for posts on the secretariate of the United Nations.

Other council business Monday dealt with a resolution from last year urging all councils to ensure that Remembrance Day the handicapped are incorporated in plans for new public buildings.

Belleville Doctor Says Christians Must Give Up Neurotic Dependency

Christians must relinquish a neurotic need for authority and cease to require an official view on all issues of the day, Dr. Edith Peterkin, Belleville pediatrician, said in Toronto on Saturday.

Dr. Peterkin was addressing a group of woman graduates of St. Michael's College at the 50th annual Whitsuntide Conference. Her talk, on the need for lay participation in Roman Catholic parishes, was reported in the Globe and Mail.

Bishops are offered a passive obedience which, she said, is a poor substitute for creative responsibility. The bishops, in turn, are too busy studying spiritual matters when they should be giving leadership.

Dr. Peterkin referred to the Second Vatican Council, where the aspirations of the Church were documented. She felt that the decrees and aspirations of the church will be implemented by the creative person — the artist.

"The creative process has limitless horizons," she said. "It is the mother's milk for her child: it is in the loving intimacy between husband and wife; it is the moral choice, in friendships, in the whole of life."

Ottawa Real Estate Broker Once Had Office in Belleville

By MARILYN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Dorothy Marshall went to Tokyo for a real estate convention and wound up on a mountain top handcuffed to a Japanese policeman who couldn't speak English.

The handcuffs were a joke—"except when he couldn't get them off."

Mrs. Marshall, an Ottawa real estate broker, was with a sightseeing party which had a police escort on the cliff-side mountain route. The handcuffing occurred at a stop when the tourists and officers were "tapering about."

The real estate part is no joke—Mrs. Marshall is one of only two Canadians women brokers, and spoke for Canada on the multiple listing system at the Tokyo convention.

She was the only woman in the 10-delegate Canadian party, and one of three women in the conference which included representatives of 20 countries.

"Real estate is still the kindergarten stage outside of North America," she says. "They have multiple listing systems or do the same work to get a licence."

USED SIGN LANGUAGE

She's tall and slim, with a short haircut and acquired on the trip. "I had my hair cut in Hawaii by a Korean girl. She couldn't speak English, but I got the point across by sign language."

English-born, Mrs. Marshall still has a slight accent though she came here 20 years ago and is "Canadian now." The mother of two children, Pamela, 21, and Ian, 18, she went into real estate 14 years ago in answer to an ad for an agent.

"I didn't even know what a mortgage was." After scoring a record-breaking 90 on training exams, she went into sales for five years and then opened her own firm.

For two years she had an office in Belleville, Ont., where her husband was posted with the RCAF. In her Ottawa office she employs a secretary and three agents, all women, who deal in private dwellings. Mrs. Marshall is licensed to sell commercial and industrial property as well.

For her Tokyo speech she learned enough Japanese for her opening remarks. "It was only a paragraph."

Church Groups

The June business meeting of the Afternoon Branch W.A. of Christ Church was opened by president, Mrs. H. Pitt and followed by the reading of an appropriate hymn "God in Nature". "Meditation on Prayer" was the theme used by Mrs. R. Godden, which stressed there must be time, need and the desire for prayer. Meditation carefully practised leads to effective prayer.

Mrs. R. B. D. Wright, wife of the rector of Christ Church, accompanied by her John Webbers, organist, rendered a selection.

Mrs. D. Stewart welcomed the guest speaker, Miss Frieda Matthews of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Miss Matthews started her career as a public school teacher and after six years she attended Ewart College, graduating as a deaconess in 1931. Her life has been varied, with nine years in Alberta working as a deaconess and other times travelling on the prairies to churches and schools for meetings.

In 1942 she went to Toronto where she was appointed field secretary for the W.M.S. Then in 1947 was appointed director of National Missions for the Western Division of the W.M.S., travelling from Quebec to Victoria and held this position till 1962.

She was appointed Director of Immigration for the Presbyterial Church, which she held until her recent retirement.

Miss Matthews gave a descriptive picture of immigration work that is being accomplished and emphasized the need for co-operation and concern in the church organizations as the story of migration is not a new one (Genesis 12). Meeting these strangers with a sincere welcome is rewarding in many ways.

Immigrants often bring and develop a business here as well as bringing wealth and a high standard of culture and are not a drain on the government.

Special medical care and assistance has been given to certain forms of illness and to handicapped persons. Many do well in agricultural jobs, work on farms and establish in Canada.

Girls from Jamaica and Trinidad come to Canada as domestics, training for a period of a year and at least 35 per cent have settled in Toronto and Hamilton areas. Port workers visit the newcomers encouraging and helping them with the numerous adjustments of a new life.

Miss L. Hart expressed a warm vote of thanks.

Staff Holds Shower for Bride-to-Be

PLAINFIELD — The staff of the Ontario Home for Mentally Retarded Infants honored one of their co-workers, Barbara Mars, at a bridal shower, on Thursday evening, at the home of Mrs. Bruce Hamilton.

Co-hostesses were Miss Lois Bebie Boothe and Miss Lois Cooney. An enjoyable evening was spent in games, contests, readings and songs. Following this, the bride-to-be was presented with many beautiful and useful gifts.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Hamilton and her co-hostesses.

Alberta Guide Movement Said Absolutely Booming

By ANNE MASON

EDMONTON (CP) — Yesterday's girl guides seemed to spend more of their time learning merit badges by learning to tie knots or identify obscure members of moss.

Today's guides, rangers and rovers are more likely to be found studying photography, flower arranging, good grooming or weather forecasting. The older rangers may teach swimming or discuss social problems such as sex and drugs.

"Membership is absolutely booming," says Mrs. M. E. Manning, provincial guide commissioner.

Despite removal of Yukon and Northwest Territories guides from the province's jurisdiction, enrolment now totals 22,000, up 10 per cent over last year and double what it was in 1953.

Mrs. Manning gives full credit to the modernization of activities, started by the Girl Guides of Canada three years ago and now put into effect in Alberta last fall. Guides now follow their interests rather than a specified, formal program.

AIM UNCHANGED

"We hope the girls enjoy it," says Mrs. Manning, wife of an Alberta Supreme Court justice and mother of four. "The basic aim remains the same."

For all the changes, the overall aim is the same—teaching girls how to get along with others their own age.

The movement, split into three age groups, serves 10- guides from 10 to 14 and ranges up to 18, still emphasizing helping others. There are visits to homes for the aged and projects, with handicapped, retarded and underprivileged children.

In keeping with the guides' international and interdenominational traditions, the Alberta division is starting mixed packs of Indian, Metis and white girls in the north. Mrs. Manning says the three established thus far are doing well.

The camping program in the province is also expanding. Alberta guides are building a guide house in Banff National Park as a centennial project.

A former guide who rejoined the association when her oldest daughter became interested 11 years ago, Mrs. Manning was elected provincial commissioner last December.

Premiers Lesage and Shaw Could Remain in Office Until Defeated in House

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Two provincial premiers — Lesage of Quebec and Walter Shaw of Prince Edward Island and Liberal Jean Lesage of Quebec-could be in the curious position of having lost majorities in their legislatures but still having control of their governments.

A principle of the parliamentary system of government is that although a prime minister may lose a vote in the house, he is not required to resign until defeated by members of the legislature if he chooses to remain in office and face the newly-elected house.

President Shaw and Lesage both felt short of majorities in their elections. The latest standing after the May 30 P.E.I. election is a 15-to-15 tie, with a deferred election still to come for two other seats.

Latest standing after Sunday's Quebec election is: Union Nationale 55, Liberal 51, independent 2.

The most celebrated case in Canadian history of a prime minister declining not to quit office despite the will of the people generally on the future of Quebec's religious educational system.

The system was one of the subjects covered in the report of the Parent royal commission on education in Quebec. The report recommended sweeping changes including measures for eliminating compulsory religious aspects from the school curriculum.

LIBERALS TO MEET

Mr. Lesage said a meeting of his cabinet will probably be held Wednesday and a caucus of elected and defeated Liberal candidates will be held Thursday to consider the situation created by the close election.

Official counting today showed in 83 of the 108 ridings and official count seem to be carried out in another 24 today. The recount in the northern riding of Duplessis will be held June 20.

At least five of the seats were won or lost by 100 votes or less according to unofficial counts Sunday and another 30 seats were decided by 1,000 votes or less.

The two independents elected were Arthur Seguin in Robert Baldwin riding and Frank Hanley in Montreal Ste. Anne. Neither indicated they would support either of the parties in the house but would rather vote on issues.

Two separatist parties ran candidates in the election but none were elected and most drew only light support. Rassemblement national got 3.2 per cent of the popular vote and le Rassemblement pour l'Independence Nationale got 2.5 per cent.

Shotgun

fired at Meredith, two hit him. Governor Johnson said the gunman used a 16-gauge shotgun load with No. 6 shot, which is a small pelled used in hunting birds.

"Handle me easy," Meredith told the ambulance crew. "I've been hit in the leg."

Physicians in Memphis said the multiple wounds, though painful, were not severe. Meredith, now a student at Columbia University law school in New York, telephoned his wife in New York Monday night to report.

"Everything is all right. Don't try to make any kind of plans yet, they haven't got all the buckshot out yet."

KEEP CALM

"Do you want me to come?" asked Mrs. Meredith.

"I'd be happier if you'd keep everything calm there the way you always do," he replied.

There was confusion also about Meredith's arrival at the hospital. Police blocked off the corridors and at one point firemen surrounded the hospital while police checked a report that a bomb had been in the building. It was a hoax.

In Washington, Attorney-General Nicholas Katzenbach told the justice department probably will allow state officials to prosecute Norvell.

However, he said, there is a "good possibility that it was a federal crime under the 1965 Voting Rights Act" and he would not exclude the possibility of federal prosecution.

The Voting Rights Act carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine for interfering with or trying to vote or encourage others to vote.

'LIKE A PORK-GUN'

With Meredith when he was hit, in addition to Sterrett, was Sherwood Ross, 31, of Washington, D.C., press co-ordinator for the march, who said:

"I heard a shot. It sounded like a pumpkin. Then I saw cans coming at me down the highway. We got up and dived into a nearby ditch. Then I heard a second shot and looked up and saw Meredith crawling. He shouted 'Oh, God.'"

Meredith came on the civil rights scene in 1962 when a federal court ordered Mississippi University to admit him after a long, complex legal fight.

things for foreign subsidiaries of U.S. companies to return more money to their parents, show how "conditions and governmental actions beyond our control" can affect Canada.

"In view of our dependence on capital inflows they suggest that we Canadians should be concerned more with what interruptions may take place and not as much with foreign ownership and control."

Premier Jean Lesage's office in Quebec meanwhile said the premier could not keep a speaking engagement with the CMA.

The premier, who saw his Liberal party lose a provincial election Sunday to the Union Nationale party by a 55-51 seat count, had been scheduled to address a banquet Monday night.

Immigration Minister Marchand told the convention management may have as much trouble as labor adjusting to new technology in industry in order to maintain high productivity levels.

He said that unless manpower is used efficiently, a slowdown in the expansion of the economy will result. The sum of low productivity and an expanding economy could equal widespread poverty."

Transport Minister Pickersgill said an integrated national transportation policy is being studied as a means of cutting costs and eliminating wasteful practices.

Mr. Pickersgill said federal policy should require all modes of transport to meet the test of competition.

His suggestion, in effect, was that subsidies should be removed to put all transport forms on a slot-or-swim basis.

Johnson

ment must not hold on," he said.

Mr. Johnson blamed lack of support by English - speaking Canadians and Jews for his party not attaining a larger majority. He said he was "angry that they did not understand my (electoral) message."

ASSURES SECURITY

However, he stressed that his government would try to make sure that the "average English-Canadian will live in security and feel at home in this province."

Answering a question, Mr. Johnson said there would not be time to ask for a postponement in the federal-provincial conference scheduled for victoria June 15-18. However, he said he understood that premier Lesage had already asked for a postponement.

Mr. Lesage said here he had been in touch with what he termed his colleagues in other provinces and that they had expressed fears for the future of Confederation in view of his party's setback in the elections.

He also said he had talked by telephone to the five federal ministers who were defeated. He attributed the defeats of Labor Minister Carrier of Portneuf, Sherbrooke and Albert Morrissette in Arthabaska to fears engendered by the drive by some people generally on the future of Quebec's religious educational system.

The system was one of the subjects covered in the report of the Parent royal commission on education in Quebec. The report recommended sweeping changes including measures for eliminating compulsory religious aspects from the school curriculum.

Kennedy Urges Students Seek Apartheid End

From AP-Reuters

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—Senator Robert F. Kennedy Monday called on South African students to work for an end to their government's racial segregation policies and "help rid the last remnants of that ancient, cruel belief from the civilization of man."

Addressing 14,500 students at Cape Town University, the New York Democrat compared South Africa's apartheid policy of strict racial segregation to starvation in India, serfdom in Peru and discrimination in New York.

Awards Given C.Y.C. Group

NAPANEE — Patsy Hughes, aged ten, had the distinction of being named Cadet of the Year, when awards were presented to the Christian Youth Crusaders at the evening service in the Free Methodist Church, Sunday. Patsy had completed all nine projects of the "Pals", the grade four pupils. As a special award, she was given a gold star.

Judy Nickel and Judy Laird earned their colors, in addition to pals for completed projects. Tim Marcelle received credit for completed projects. Laura Harashka, John McConnell and Janet Fleming received pins for completed projects in the "Volunteers", grade five children.

Margaret Howard and Maureen Greer tied for first place with eight completed projects in the "Messengers", grade six boys and girls. Pamela Dunham and Cathy Furse also won awards in this class.

Nancy Hughes, 12, Patsy's sister, was declared Crusader of the Year, for the group consisting of those in grades seven, eight, and nine. Rose Hamilton and Donald Harashka were runners-up. The Crusaders win crests instead of pins. An award for needle work, carpentry, Bible geography, Bible reading and cycling, were also handed out to various Crusaders.

Mission study badges were given to the Junior Missionary Society members. This organization meets monthly, and is conducted by Mrs. Stewart Mc-Connell, Mrs. Charles McConnell, and Mrs. James Larrahy. For a reading contest, the two top winners among the boys were David Harashka and Ross Hammond, and among the girls, Laura Anne Harashka and Linda Dafoe.

James Green, missionary on furlough from Tanzania, showed slides of Mohammed Ahmed, near his mission station, with a tape recorded comment. The slides illustrated the work the missionaries are doing among the native workers.

Work Now Progressing on Historic House

NAPANEE — Restoration of the historic Macpherson house has gone into high gear once more, now that warm weather has arrived. The restoration must be completed by next summer, as this is Napanee's Centennial project. The county historical society is spearheading the project, with the assistance of the town council and anyone who will lend a hand.

Attention has been concentrated on the outside so far, for the most part, and with the exception of some landscaping this will be completed before long. Painting is now the order of the day.

An invitation was issued to teachers and pupils of the N.D.S.S. to turn out Saturday, and a dozen people put in an appearance, half of them from the school: Dorothy Lind, Eric Bartlett, Jim Woods, Jim Horwood, Jim Eadie, all staff members, Miss Betty Smith, a former teacher; Mrs. Norman Hutchinson, vice-president of the society, whose teacher-husband was on federation business in Toronto; Jimmy G. F. Smith, president, and Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Mounce, directors of the society. Jimmy Eadie was the sole representative of the student body, and William Hutchinson was also present. Tall ladders were lent by a local painter, and material supported by the trucks of a local lumber firm.

SECOND COAT

Through this united effort the restoration leaders received its second coat of paint and the front, or north-side of the house is now finished and completed the second time. The first coat had been applied four years ago.

The windows, 40 of them, are going to present a problem, as they will be made, as were the original sashes. All restoration so far is authentic, even to the use of square cut nails. The windows will average $20 apiece and the society is now looking for "bubbly" glass in old buildings.

Thursday Peter Stokes and Bill Bainard of Spencerville spent the day measuring the windows and Mr. Hooper took one with him for making such windows is his particular craft. Peter Stokes is the supervising architect for the project.

WANT QUICK FINES

MOSCOW (AP)—Russian police want the right to fine drunks on the spot, thinking it the main cause of hooliganism, a convention decided, and plaintiffs were criticized for consigning only vodka profits and not taxes following drunkenness and violence.

Through this united effort the restoration leaders received its second coat of paint and the front, or north-side of the house is now finished and completed the second time. The first coat had been applied four years ago.

The windows, 40 of them, are going to present a problem, as they will be made, as were the original sashes. All restoration so far is authentic, even to the use of square cut nails. The windows will average $20 apiece and the society is now looking for "bubbly" glass in old buildings.

Thursday Peter Stokes and Bill Bainard of Spencerville spent the day measuring the windows and Mr. Hooper took one with him for making such windows is his particular craft. Peter Stokes is the supervising architect for the project.

Grade Eight Pupils Enjoy Ottawa Trip

NAPANEE — Grade eight pupils of the Prince Charles School all 87 of them together with three teachers and principal, filled two buses last Thursday for a trip to Ottawa and by four of the clock, Everybody had a full day, leaving town at 6.46 a.m., and returning at 9.15 p.m.

The boys and girls learned much of Canada's history, both her past and of the history which is in the making. They visited the War Museum and the Ecole St. Maseom, the Dominion Archives with its store of priceless documents; found out how money is made at the Mint; and how parliament functions by sitting in on the proceedings for a while. They also made the complete tour of the building.

Because it was his birthday, the member for Prince Edward - Lennox, A. Doucett Allenbrock, celebrated by treating everybody to ice cream and cake in the restaurant in the Parliament Buildings.

Everybody had taken a box lunch which was eaten picnic style in Rockliffe Park. Supper was in a restaurant in the Westdale Shopping Centre, where the boys and girls had free time for shopping.

Two Traffic Accidents On Weekend

NAPANEE —Arnold Empey 66, of St. John St., Napanee, is in the Kingston General Hospital with injuries received in an accident Saturday afternoon. He was proceeding west, when he evidently lost control of the car which left the road and smashed head on into a boulder.

The car, a 1966 model with only 4,000 miles on the speedometer was badly damaged, and it is estimated it will cost at least $1,800 to restore it, if it can be done at all.

The accident was reported to the O.P.P. at 5.15 Saturday and occurred about a mile and a half from the outskirts of Napanee on the River Road.

There were no passengers.

R.M.C. MAN KILLED

William Leslie Minion of Kingston is charged under the Highway Traffic Act as the result of a rear end collision at 2.30 Sunday afternoon. He was the owner and driver of the car, which was in collision with a car owned and driven by Clarence Holden of Bath.

As a result of the accident, five people were injured, none seriously. No one was hospitalized. Damage to the cars is estimated at $700.

The accident occurred on Highway No. 33 near the exit from the V.I.L. plant.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

"Regardless of the lament of some Canadian cynics, the calibre of National Hockey League hockey will be as good if not better within five years."

"Red" Storey bristled a bit when he made the above statement to me at the Madoc Celebrities Dinner.

And in case that high-ranking Kiwanis critic reads this, the dinner was sponsored by the Madoc Kinsmen Club which saw the need for improvement to the Madoc arena: risked its shirt to set the program in motion; had no prospect of personal gain or payment; needs publicity if it is to survive and was damned by faint praise in the Intelligencer."

In passing I think I represent the news media, which gave the dinner ample before-and-after publicity, in thanking Kel Kincaid and his Madoc Kiwanis committee for their kind words of appreciation. It seems gratitude is not dead-only in the higher places.

But back to Mr. Storey.

"Expansion of the NHL" he said, "is the best thing that ever happened. The trouble with pro hockey today there are too many old men in its ranks. Not a few will be retiring shortly and without an additional feeder team there will be the sport be."

"It will mean a lot of reorganization, and allocation of players will present a problem. But it is all for the good of the game. It means some 148 additional jobs are going to be given employment.

"True the calibre of the sport will deteriorate in the building process but within five years you will be seeing just as good if not better hockey played by NHL teams," the red-head said.

"It is our fault that hockey is on the decline in Canada. People are too dam lazy or just won't go out to see it. And yet we squawk about the game being taken to the United States. We as a hockey nation, are proving our bark is worse than our bite."

"A lot of Canadian youngsters will have the opportunity to play hockey in the United States," said "Red". "That is something they cannot do here. Now they will get the chance to develop, play, and make some money."

The scholarship ball dangled beneath young Canadian hockey players' noses — many of them of junior "A" calibre" by United States college has been — and is paying off.

As one writer puts it: — "Our own country is sadly old-fashioned in this respect, as the boys go where they can get free education in return for hockey. Many of these have good prospects for the NHL within a few years now the big time has decided on expansion."

"After all, who can blame them. Some of them will be tempted by large hockey salaries to forego college and play professional hockey. There are summer courses for the dedicated."

In the earlier days of professional hockey, education was something a hockey-playing youngster with potential took in his stride to be dropped quickly when a pro scout dangled the long green under his nose. It is a sad note that many of the oldtimers, devoted their younger life to the game — and nothing else — with the result they were turned out to pasture in fields that had far from lush "tetnee" growth.

But a lot of them made good. Names of well-known stars of yesteryear still turn up in the sewy columns as men in the present places. But education is my field is the big thing today. The late mayor of this city, Jamieson Bone, said ten years ago, "by 1966 a youngster will need a grade 13 diploma in order to get a job as an elevator operator."

So who can blame Canadian hockey-playing youngsters who get an education "bonus" with a healthy American hockey contract? It's time this country woke up.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method
by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER
PIN POSITION AFFECTS CLUB SELECTION

In this area of 10,000-square-foot greens, it has become even more important to check pin position before selecting your approaching club.

When the green runs 90-100 feet from front to back, you may have a choice of three different clubs, two of which would leave your shot either short or long (see illustration).

There probably are some holes on your course that do not allow a good view of the green from the fairway. Try to note the pin position on these greens as you play other holes earlier in the round. I always check the pin position on the 18th green at the Masters tournament as I walk from the 9th green to the 10th tee.

If you are in doubt about the club selection, note where the trouble lies around the green: is it in front or behind the green? Then select a club which will keep you out of the worst trouble.

Four Perfect Innings ★★★★★ Phils Stop Giants

Chisox Fireman Douses Angel Blaze

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Dennis Higgins finally has crushed Chicago White Sox' bullpen and Baseball Rookie may never be the same again.

Higgins, a fastball pitcher who won a job this spring on a bullpen crew dominated for the past three years by knuckleballers Eddie Fisher and Hoyt Wilhelm, tossed four perfect innings Monday night, completing a 5-1 victory over California Angels that stretched the Sox' winning streak to five games.

The 29-year-old rookie spent eight seasons in the minors—the last five as a relief specialist—before his impressive showing in spring training and an injury to 42-year-old Wilhelm opened the gate.

When Wilhelm fractured the middle finger on his pitching hand, Higgins was tabbed to fill in alongside Fisher and sinker-ball Bob Locker.

He has made 11 appearances, all in relief, and allowed only five earned runs in 25 innings for a 1.80 ERA while striking out 20.

Higgins replaced winner Juan Pizarro Monday night with one on and nobody out in the sixth.

RETIRES LAST 19

Higgins got Joe Adcock, the first man he faced, to fly to left. On a double play, then retired the next 10 batters in order, protecting Pizarro's 5-1 lead over six decisions and the Sox' ninth triumph in their last 11 games.

In the only other games scheduled, Washington Senators clipped Baltimore Orioles 5-3, despite a pair of homers by Frank Robinson, and Philadelphia Phillies downed San Francisco Giants 6-2 behind 20-year-old righthander Rick Wise.

Lee Elia's first major league homer, Bill Skowron's second of the season and a run - scoring single and double by Frank Robinson gave Pizarro an early cushion against the Angels. The Chicago southpaw tired, however, in the fifth and Higgins came in to wrap it up.

The Senators snapped a four-game losing string as Frank Howard drilled a three - run homer and righthander Phil Ortega weathered Robinson's two blasts for his fifth victory against two losses, yielding five hits in all.

Bill Brinkman also homered for Washington while Robinson's pair gave him the American League lead with a total of 14.

Wise completed his first game in the majors, scattering eight hits and fanning eight Giants for the Phillies' win for the second-ath time in their last eight starts.

Rich Allen and Tony Taylor backed Wise with homers and Allen also had a run - scoring double and single.

Willie McCovey drove in both runs for the Giants with a double and single.

Lightfoots Hold Off City Hotel

Lightfoot Construction potted four runs in the fourth and one in the sixth while holding off City for a 5-4 Commercial Softball League win last night.

The losers struck for pairs in the fifth and sixth but that was it.

John French pitched five innings of five-hit ball for Lightfoots and George Young gave up one hit in the last two frames. French had three whiffs and as many walks and Young did not strikeout or walk a batter.

Gerry Genereaux started and gave way to Dave Feeney in the fourth for City Hotel. They fanned three and walked four, allowing six hits.

Three errors, Hall's double and Cook's single keyed the winners 4-0 lead. They were the game' sonly three miscues.

Tim Cook paced the Lightfoots with a double and single while Les Hall had a two-bagger. Doug Rose and John French got the other safeties.

Doug Hall and Dave Feeney hit City doubles. Moe Hawkins, Bob Brooks, Doug Murray and Doug Moreau had a single each.

Continues As GM-Coach

'Cat' Will Cling To Twin Perch

NEW YORK (AP)—General manager Emile (The Cat) Francis of New York Rangers said Monday he will continues to coach the National Hockey League team next season.

The announcement came as a surprise since the Rangers fiolished in the cellar of the six-club league last season after Francis replaced Red Sullivan as coach six weeks after the opening of the season.

The club's won-lost-tied record under Francis was 13-21-6. When Sullivan was dismissed Dec. 6 the Rangers were fifth with a 5-10-5 mark.

It had been rumored that Jack Gordon, Francis' assistant, would be named coach.

"I haven't found the dual ownership too much of a burden," Francis said. "I feel the same way as when I took over the front office duties—that one man handling both jobs gets a much better over-all picture of the situation."

TWO OTHERS

Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs and Sid Abel of Detroit Red Wings also hold general manager-coach titles in the NHL.

Ranger rightwinger Rod Gilbert, who attended a luncheon Monday with Francis, said he is recovering well from a serious spinal operation in February.

"I feel great," said Gilbert, a 25-goal scorer in the NHL two seasons ago.

Francis said "it looks as though Rod will make a 100 per cent recovery and we hope he'll be able to pick up where he left off."

FORD DISABLED

NEW YORK (AP) — Whitey Ford, New York Yankees' veteran left-hander, was placed on the 15-day disabled list Monday because of continuing trouble with his pitching arm. The 37-year-old southpaw has pitched only three innings in the last month due to a strained inflammed ligament inside his left elbow. He is 0-3.

Cheesemen Fall Short In Seventh

A Black Diamond rally in the bottom of the seventh fell one run short as the Cheesemen dropped an 8-7 decision to Belvedere Hotel in Commercial Softball League play, at Alemite Park, last night.

It was a 5-5 game after four with the Hotelmen netting single tallies in the next three frames. Black Diamond potted two in the seventh and had the tying run on second when the game ended.

Home runs highlighted the game with each club belting three. All were with the bases empty.

Ken Osborne and J. Nichols in the fifth pitched the win. Osborne fanned four and netted nine hits before Nichols gave up only one safety over the remainder. He whiffed four and walked two.

Sonny Holoway allowed nine hits, struck out eight and passed six for the Cheesemen.

C. Hineman had a homer and two singles, Puj Fisher a homer run and one single and Nichols a homer and double for Belvedere. Jim Muir added a double and A. Andrews a single.

Ross Empey slammed two Black Diamond homers and J. Francis had the other home run and a single. Sonny Holoway tripled, G. Francis, Doug Archer and J. Douglas hit doubles, Don Holoway a triple and Bob Jones a single.

Sanders Leads Way To Bank

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—Bruce Littler, who won $12,000 for his second-place finish in the Memphis Open, moved into eighth place among professional golfers with $35,893 in total earnings this year.

Doug Sanders continued to pace the pack with $74,549, made up of $54,551 in official winnings and $19,998 in unofficial money, the Professional Golfers' Association reported Monday.

Gay Brewer moved to second place with a total of $55,988 while Jack Nicklaus came from fifth last week to third with $54,202. He was followed by Frank Beard at $51,027, and Arnold Palmer, who slipped to fourth with $47,267 in official winnings but was second in total money at $66,801.

Senior Baseball

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Red Wings consented for 15 hits Monday night to defeat London 14-6 in Inter-County Baseball League play.

It was the second victory in three starts for the Red Wings who entered the league this season after a five-year absence.

The Wings had their early 6-0 lead cut to one run after six innings but erupted for eight runs from Doug Pool and John Ambrose in the seventh inning to put the game beyond doubt.

Rick DeMarchi, Jim Wilson and Rick Holt led the Hamilton attack with three hits each.

Owners Have Too Much Of Own Way

Drysdale Speaks Out

NEW YORK (AP)—Don Drysdale of Los Angeles Dodgers, half of the most famous holdout team in baseball history, thinks owners shouldn't impose a maximum limit on salary scales until they impose a limit on their own earnings.

"There should be a better way to settle disputes than the way it has been in the past," Drysdale said during a weekend series with National League New York Mets.

"There's too much of a one-way argument now. You take what they give or you don't play.

"Every chapter in player disputes over salaries has ended with the player giving in. But someone wrote during the dispute we had that 'when they start putting maximums on what owners can earn then they can put one on what players can earn.' That's the way I feel."

Drysdale and his partner Sandy Koufax finally settled with the Dodgers for about $265,000 after they'd agreed to sit out the year rather than settle for less.

WANTED FAIRNESS

"Remember we weren't trying to revolutionize anything," said Drysdale. "We were just trying to get what was fair and equitable.

Drysdale said he hasn't thought about what problems, if any, might arise next year, but Koufax doesn't think there will be a repeat performance.

"The worst part of it, is that one player is compared to another player," said Koufax. "That shouldn't enter into it."

"But it won't come to the same thing again because it won't be necessary. You struggle to reach a certain point in the game and when you reach it, I don't think you have to argue any more."

How They're Hitting

Oliva On Way To Third Title In Row

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Oliva, the 28-year-old Cuban who hits enough for two guys while playing for Minnesota Twins, is in a good position to become the second player in American League history to win three consecutive batting titles.

The feat eluded Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio and other AL stars.

Only Ty Cobb put together as many as three AL crowns in succession. He won nine championships from 1907 through 1915 and took the title three times in a row, 1917 through 1919. Honus Wagner, Rogers Hornsby and Stan Musial have been the only National Leaguers to make it three straight.

Oliva, the batting champ in his first seasons in the big league in 1964 and 1965, has opened up a 25-point lead this season. He lifted his average five more points to .355 by collecting five hits in 32 tries in last week's games.

Frank Robinson of Baltimore advanced from fourth place to the runner - up position. He picked up 28 points for a .333 mark.

Brooks Robinson, the other half of the Orioles' one-two punch, slipped one notch to third. He lost 12 points to .313.

SIEBERN FOURTH

Norm Siebern of California is fourth at .306 followed by rookie Rick Reichardt, another Angel. The first figures include Sunday's games.

Pittsburgh Pirates dominate the National League batting race. Manny Mota continued to set the pace although his average dropped 28 points to .345.

Matty Alou, another Pirate, moved up one place to second with .337. Hood of St. Louis grabbed third place on a gain of 36 points to .329.

Ollie Sargent of the Pirates was another hot hitter. He climbed to fourth on a 37-point pickup to .327. Sargent has hit safely in his last nine times at bat and is within one of tying the NL record for consecutive safeties.

Hank Aaron of Atlanta continued to lead the NL in homers with 18, and runs batted in with 40.

Oliva is tied with rookie George Scott for the AL home run lead with 12 each. Brooks Robinson remained on top in RBI with 45, five more than last week.

Exams Said Cause Of Postponements

Mutual agreement among the Bay Quinte Baseball League clubs on changes in the immediate Belleville and District Softball League schedule.

League vice - president Clifford Belch announced the changes last night.

Madoc and Ellis Jrs., both loaded with high school students said they were unable to have teams this week due to players writing exams.

Tonight's scheduled game at Alemille Park, Madoc vs. Trudeau Motors, has been postponed and replaced with last Thursday's rained out game between Bobcats and Trudeaus. It will be played tonight, at 8.30.

Ellis' were scheduled to play Moonshella, in Picton, tomorrow (Wednesday) night and this game too has been postponed.

Belch expressed disappointment over the situation, especially after receiving considerable statement's about the Juniors' situation. He spent some time checking out matters by phone and said, "the league pretty well has to go along with the requests when the other clubs involved agree".

Players, Owners Differ

NEW YORK (AP) — Representatives of major league baseball players Monday rejected a suggestion from owners for financing the players' association.

The players are seeking $160,000 to run their association, including $50,000 for Marvin Miller who takes over as executive director July 1. Miller currently is an official of the United Steelworkers of America.

Owners suggested the players be freed on the obligation of paying about $300 a year—$2 a day for 172 playing days—to help support the pension fund. They suggested this money could go to run the players' office.

The players, rejecting this, came back with a proposal that they pay the $2 a day into a fund that would be accounted for separately so that the association could draw out expenses. The owners said this might be illegal under the Taft-Hartley act governing labor-management relations.

Miller hopes the matter can be settled in further talks.

Departmental Softball

The Fire Department upended the Intelligencer 5-1 in a Departmental Softball League fixture, at Hillcrest School, last night.

It was the Firemen's first win and the Intelligencer's initial loss in three starts each.

Craig Bump hurled the victory and Johnny Edwards pitched in dirtest.

Reg Christopher bit a home run for the winners with Al Ryan and Bob Lloyd contributing doubles.

Announce New Healing Substance: Shrinks Piles

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids and repair damaged tissue. A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured inflamed tissue. In case after case—while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. Most important of all—results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months. This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Richmond Hill Students Learn Sports They Can Enjoy Later

RICHMOND HILL, Ont. (CP)— Grade 12 students at Richmond Hill High School have been spending their days in a practical education program called "Lifetime Sport."

Developed by the school's athletic director, William Babcock, the program is designed to offer the older students sports they can use and participate in the rest of his life.

Mr. Babcock said the students can golf, play tennis, learn fly fishing, trap shooting, archery and even water skiing. He said the new course fills the need for the older student who wants something different.

More than 78 students in this school north of Toronto are registered in the course and Mr. Babcock said girls are showing as much interest as boys.

"The regular physical education curriculum is sufficient to hold a student's interest for the first years in high school, but by the time a student reaches Grade 12 he wants something new and different."

Many students who had little interest in conventional physical education programs now seem keenly enthusiastic in the new course. The theory classes are held in the classroom where classes in canoeing and water skiing are conducted.

Mr. Babcock said the main stress of the program is on participation rather than marks. The school held a trapshoot last fall and a golf tournament is planned for this year.

The school board wholeheartedly endorsed the course, contributing $500 for the purchase of tennis rackets, golf clubs and other equipment.

Leafs Trip Suns 2-1, Wings Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's one, two, three and you're out of the old ball game as far as International League umpire Augie Guglielmo is concerned.

Manager Earl Weaver of the Red Wings found out the hard way Monday night in Rochester by getting bounced after piling dirt on home plate three times following a fifth-inning argument.

Guglielmo, tired of sweeping the plate clean, also tossed out Rochester coach Joe Altobelli, but it made no difference to the Red Wings who downed the league - leading Columbus Jets 5-29

In other action, Toronto Maple Leafs tripped Jacksonville Suns 3-2 on Billy Rohr's four-hit pitching performance, Tommy Aaron's two-run homer in the ninth gave Richmond Braves a 5-4 victory over Buffalo Bisons and Syracuse Chiefs edged Toledo Mud Hens 3-2.

Dressen Leaves Hospital

DETROIT (AP)—Drawn and pale under a fading suntan, Detroit Tigers pitching coach Charlie Dressen still was cheerful Monday as he left a hospital, three weeks after his second heart attack.

"I don't know how long I'll be here," said Dressen, who moved from the hospital to a suite in Detroit's Sheraton-Cadillac Hotel.

"I've got to walk up and down the hall, three times a day," Dressen said.

"And they've got me on a salt free diet because salt holds water," said Dressen. "That means no chili." Dressen holds a reputation as an amateur chef with chili as his specialty.

Dressen said he didn't plan to do much reading while recuperating.

"No fiction," he said. "But I read the sport pages . . . maybe that's fiction"

EDITOR IN PRISON

LAGOS (Reuters) — Stephen Iwenaya, editor of the West African Pilot, who was arrested Friday because of a cartoon in his newspaper, is being detained in prison, Nigerian police said Sunday. The cartoon depicted Nigeria's military government as a big cock crowing "one country, one nationalism," an apparent allusion to a recent decree making Nigeria a unitary state instead of a federation of four semi-autonomous regions.

Net Stars Lose In Britain

BRISTOL, England (CP-AP) — Bob Puddicombe of Vancouver, defeated R. Venkatesan of India 11-13, 6-4, 6-4 in a first-round match.

Harry Fasquier, Canadian Davis Cupper from Toronto, was defeated 7-5, 6-2 by Paul Van Ligten of South Africa in the second round.

Keith Carpenter of Montreal went down to defeat 6-4, 4-6, 6-2 to Bob Hewitt of Australia in another second-round match.

In a second-round women's singles match, Glenda Swan of South Africa defeated Brenda Norman of Toronto 6-1, 6-3. Pat Walkden of Rhodesia defeated Faye Urban of Windsor, Ont., 6-1, 6-4, also in the second round.

Cyclist Finishes Tenth

NOTTINGHAM, England (CP)—Dominico Muro was the best Canadian Monday in the 10th stage of the Tour of British bicycle race.

The Montrealer finished 10th over the 81 miles from Northampton to Nottingham, as Stanfield Sheppard Russia won his third stage of the tour and increased his hold on the over-all lead.

Shepel led a fast group of six riders over the line in a time of three hours and 13 seconds. Muro finished in a group of six about four minutes behind Shepel. Elapsed time was 3:04:35.

Canada was seventh on team points for the stage and remained a hopeless last in overall team standings.

Yesterday's Stars

Batting — Rich Allen, Philadelphia Phillies, connected for 6-2 victory over San Francisco Giants with a single, run-scoring double and his 20th homer in eight games.

Pitching — Dennis Higgins, Chicago White Sox, rookie, Juan Pizarro with none out in the sixth inning, got the first batter he faced to hit into a double play and retired the next 16 in order, completing a 5-1 victory over California Angels.

PLAYER OF MONTH

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pitcher Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants was an easy winner of the National League's player of the month award for May. Marichal, who had six victories with not a defeat in May, received 24 of the 50 votes cast.

Canoe Racing May Be Revived Here

Hopes of reviving the sport of canoe racing in Belleville are behind the demonstration scheduled for this city on Saturday, June 11.

The Canadian Canoe Association and the Belleville Recreation Committee have come together on the matter and are jointly sponsoring this Saturday's affair.

Films covering the various types of canoe racing will open the show at the Planeide Street Recreation Centre, at 2.00 p.m.

Practical demonstrations will begin in the Belleville Harbor, just off Victoria Park, around three o'clock.

Equipment, including single blade paddles, a four boat, double blades, a war canoe, etc., will be brought in from canoe racing clubs in Rideau, Gananoque and Carleton Place.

Plans call for some of this equipment to be left here, if interest warrants, on a lending basis for Belleville persons' use.

The C.C.A. hopes to see the beginnings of clubs, of all age classes, form crews to compete in club regattas this summer.

Some races, for demonstration purposes will be run in the harbor on Saturday, with crews coming from the clubs bringing equipment.

The C.C.A. received a healthy grant from the National Fitness Council this year and the money is being used to help start and equip new clubs.

All Belleville and district persons are invited to attend the demonstrations Saturday.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Ronnie Feagan of Goderich, Ont., got a double win on the pace card at Garden City Raceway Monday to increase his season's total to 96, leading all harness racing drivers in Canada.

Feagan reigned Mistress Mine to a 2:10 victory in the sixth race and clicked with runner-up Bret Hanover for a $43.40 exacta. He returned is the seventh with a $16.10 upset with Irish Ensign.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The daily double at the Western Fair Raceway paid $182.70 Monday night when Scotch Liz captured the first race for $10.50 and Miss Collingwood took the second for $7.30.

In the featured sixth race, a $700 pace, Wishing (Bud) Pritchard waited for victory for a $18.70 payoff.

The race was marred by a spill near the head of the stretch when Louie C. driven by Jimmy Holmes, went into a break and Claybrook Melody, with John Chester aboard, crashed into them. Both drivers and horses escaped serious injury.

OTTAWA (CP) — Gloaming's King, a seven-year-old gelding owned by Joe Lavoie of Orleans at the reins, captured the featured Kemptville Pace in a mile-and-a-quarter Monday night at the Rideau-Carleton Raceway.

Gloaming's King led for almost the entire mile to win in 2:31 for owners J. Lefebvre of Hull, Que., and J. St. Mars of Kemptville.

EOBA Peewees Win, Lose Road Games

Belleville peewee teams won and lost one via the road in EOBA action last night.

Holy Rosary whipped Port Hope 13-4 while Lions Club dropped a 7-3 decision in Frankford.

The bantam game, Belleville Ellis' at Frankford, scheduled for Wednesday, has been postponed because of school exams.

Holy Rosary led 6-3 going into the fifth when they sewed up the win with another half dozen tallies.

Art Wellesley and John Mulvihill pitched the win, allowing just four, striking out 10 and walking 10. Pemberton and Downes gave up 14 hits, fanned nine and walked seven for Port Hope.

Barry Culkin starred for Belleville with three doubles and two singles. John Mulvihill, with a double and two singles, Gary Edwards and Wayne Andrews, with one and one each, Rick Meagher and Allan Wilson, with a double.

Walsh was best in defeat with a double and single.

Dennis Hassard stopped the Lions Club on four hits, fanning eight and walking four, in going the route.

Dennis Cone and David Wright batted for the Lions Belleville rubber, striking out seven and passing five.

The Lions Club line went to Dick Griffin, Dave Wood, Mike Bell and Stephen Burke. Names of Frankford hitters were not included.

In Belleville Minor Baseball action here in town, Jets and Rockets tied 4-4 in the Tadpole division.

Paul Weeks and Greg MacInnes gave up two hits, fanned 12 and walked seven for the Jets. Peter Hall and Neil Wilkie allowed four hits, struck out 11 and passed seven for the Rockets.

Steve Coates hit a triple, Andy Lupenette, Brian Coughlin and John Templeman a single each for Jets. Brad Pettitt and Mark Porter got the Rockets' two singles.

Minor Softball Results

Tyke and peewee games were played in the Belleville Minor Softball Association last night.

In peewee, Western Tire Colts ogled Cosy Grill Phillies 13-13 and Barrett's Yankees trimmed Booth's 18-8.

On the West Hill, in tyke, Bears clawed the Rangers 15-8 and Kinmen Bobcats nipped the Wings by a 22-27 score.

A lone East Hill battle saw Canadians win 20-11 over the IGA Redcoz.

Heavies Stage Press Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Ernie Terrell played his guitar and Doug Jones crooked jokes at a press luncheon Monday.

The next time they get together the heavyweights will try for knockouts in the ring.

Terrell will defend his World Boxing Association title against Jones at Houston, Tex., June 28.

"Jones is a better fighter and I think a better puncher than Cassius Clay," said Terrell.

"I'm confident I'll beat him and I'll be after a knockout." When they were ready to leave, Jones looked up at Ernie and said: "Good luck Ernie. Take care of the strings."

Accidents Do Not 'Just Happen'

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

When it comes to accident hazards created by car defects, most of the blame often seems aimed at tires and steering. Yet neither is really the prime threat to road safety.

Inspection records prove that weak or defective brakes deserve title to the most common danger found in today's cars. Since experts estimate 1 in close to half of all vehicles on the road are in need of brake repairs — usually minor repairs or adjustments which wouldn't strain the budget if taken care of promptly.

Why would any sane driver take chances with poor brakes? One reason is that many probably don't realize that anything is wrong or less than normal. A change in pedal travel distance and in braking action is usually a very gradual thing and can easily go unnoticed for a time.

Of course, there are those who know they're overdue for a brake job or minor adjustment, but they depend on a bear's right foot to see them through for a while longer.

By the way, how long has it been since you've had your car's brakes checked out? Once a year isn't nearly enough, no matter how little your car is used!

T. T. asks: "Suppose the radiator pressure cap valve doesn't operate properly. What can happen??"

If it doesn't release as it should, excessive engine temperature develops. In extreme cases, burst radiator seams can result.

From S.A.: "When the motor is running at idle speed, the valves on my '62 wagon are noisy. I'd like this be caused by sticking hydraulic tappets?"

It could. Or it might be due to weak oil pressure.

L. S. writes: "Can dirt in the fuel filter hurt carburetion?"

Not only dirt but water which accumulates in the bowl can interfere with fuel flow. Remove and clean it at least a few times yearly.

From T. P.: "During the winter, our power steering system produced a groaning type of noise for the first several minutes every morning. Since spring, this noise has disappeared. How does weather affect this system??"

When the grade of oil in the power steering hydraulic system is heavy, it can congeal when cold, causing noisy operation. Try a lighter grade next fall.

'Father of Year' Award Made to Dick Van Dyke

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dick Van Dyke left the set of his current movie to claim a civic award as father of the year. The name of the movie: Divorce, American Style.

Van Dyke's fans, who know him as a family man and practicing Presbyterian, will perhaps be surprised by the nature of the new film.

"I haven't heard from them yet, but I'm sure they will after the picture comes out," said the actor. "Still, I believe in what the picture has to say about divorce.

EXPLAINS THE MESSAGE

"The message is that the divorce laws don't do a thing to prevent divorce—far from it. The picture will also demonstrate that marriages can't be ended capriciously, on mere whims."

The film portrays Van Dyke and Debbie Reynolds as a divorcing couple who become remarried with the alimony laws and new romances, he with Jean Simmons, she with Jack Johnson. In the end—well, you can guess.

Director, American Style is the first Van Dyke film since his recent departure from his television series. He has already signed up for 13 more movies in the next six years, plus three CBS specials in the next three years.

Two weeks ago the TV show collected four Emmies, including those for Van Dyke and Mary Tyler Moore as best actor and actress in a comedy series.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 8

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Fine for maintaining practical, independent course. Realize self - reliance is best guide; Friends and money don't mix today. If you bring wishes into line with actual facts, happiness results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you can't obtain what you desire immediately . . . check other sources. You may be slowed down for very good reason. Individual in authority could be studying situation.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Study Taurus message. Don't be too anxious to the efforts to those of another individual. Adhere to own philosophy. Patience, maturity key requirements now for success.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Intense emotions tend to swerve you from basic goal. Check details. Be thorough. Study accounts, investment possibilities. Mate or partner inclined to talk about finances.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Don't deceive yourself about job, real estate prospects. If realistic . . . you gain goals. Read, write — communicate views. Today you can be dynamic — not attractive. Make the most of it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 —Sept. 22): You need cooperation of associates, fellow workers. Harmony is key. If you insist on battle, . . . you might wind up a loser. Guard health . . . get plenty of rest in evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Look within . . . be steady. Not wise to dwell on superficiality. Feelings run high. Deal with emotional problems, relate to loved ones. Highlight sincerity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Situation may appear deceptively "easy." Realize basic responsibilities continue to exist. Face them — overcome obstacles. Stick close to source of problem.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Confidence may be revealed by close relative. Be mature. Don't cast first stone. Gain indicated if you are outgoing. Give of yourself . . . then you also receive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Some of loudest hopes can become realities. You obtain means, methods of fulfilling desires. (Plan for achieving constructive results . . . new perspective.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Don't feel you must gain immediate recognition. What is deserved . . . will be obtained. Know this and pace yourself accordingly. New projects, contacts favored.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Added effort required where studies are concerned. Push hard to obtain answers. Behind-scenes action may directly affect you. Don't fear challenge. It's healthy!

• • •

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are versatile, have sense of humor . . . but once you set sights on goal you battle until it is achieved.

• • •

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Cycle high for Pisces, Aries. Special warning to Virgo: Harmonize relations with those around you. Steer clear of controversy.

Straight-Talking Ray Taggart Says 'Baloney' for Teamsters

By RAS KORSTANJE
of the Hamilton Spectator

HAMILTON (CP) — Chances are that Ray Taggart — Ontario's new 35-year-old Teamster strongman — will never be a labor diplomat.

He is a man who will say "baloney" at a time when others use such expressions as "careful optimism may perhaps be indicated."

Taggart also has a sometimes irritating tendency to keep both feet on the ground and smirk when there seems to be every reason for song and dance once a strike seems settled.

These same characteristics, however, are mainly responsible for his sudden rise on the Ontario Teamster firmament.

Truck drivers don't go for "smoothies" who have the right answer—at the right time—all the time and who also pose as "cheerful Charlies."

They prefer a guy who is not afraid to say: "I'll be damned if I know . . . but UR try to find out," or "Save your breath, boys, I'm not sure what the darn thing is black and white."

Taggart speaks the language of the truckers. He is one of them and he won't let them forget it.

That was dramatically illustrated only a few weeks ago during a picket line demonstration at a strike-bound truck firm in Hamilton.

HALTED POLICE

Ordered to make room for a police wagon carrying an arrested teamster, Taggart told them to remember that they ought to get out of the way, according to the law.

Then he himself was the first one to sit down in front of the police car and was promptly arrested, together with eight others who followed his example.

To the public this looked like open defiance of the law.

Trade union members will tell you, however, that Taggart did what was expected of him—aiding with his own people.

Until last September Taggart's role in the International Brotherhood of Teamsters in Ontario was limited to the presidency of Hamilton-based Local 879.

He was a member of the 20,000-member Ontario Joint Council which is formed by 10 Teamster locals and also of the joint negotiating committee which bargains with the trucking industry on behalf of some 9,000 truckers and warehousemen.

His rudder climb to the top started shortly after a two-day wildcat walkout by the Ontario truckdrivers last fall and continued during the ensuing 14-week strike.

There was trouble in the ranks of the negotiating committee.

Kenneth McDougall, the tough and controversial president of the Toronto Teamster local, called head-on with other committee members who did not see eye to eye with him on his bargaining tactics.

Taggart sided with rebel factions within the Toronto local, who wanted McDougall removed.

A minor "coup d'etat" followed and Taggart emerged as the new chairmen of the negotiating team.

Shortly after he was also picked to head the Ontario Joint Council, putting him firmly in the driver's seat.

At 35, married with seven children, Taggart feels he has come a long way and at the same time has a long future ahead of him.

Right now he is all in favor of bringing the Canadian Teamsters back into the Canadian Labor Congress.

The Teamsters were expelled from the CLC in 1902 on charges of raiding.

Athletic Leadership Camp Planned at Golden Lake

The second annual Eastern Ontario athletic leadership camp will be held at Red Pine Camp on Golden Lake, from August 27 to September 3. Instruction will be given in football, basketball, wrestling and track as well as leadership training.

The camp is under the sponsorship of the community programs division of the Department of Education and the Ottawa YMCA. A Federal Recreation grant has enabled the camp committee to keep the cost of registration down to $42 for the seven day period.

In Belleville, applications are available from Mr. Dave Bell, physical education department, Moira Secondary School or Mr. Don Haddock, representative, community programs division, Department of Education, Room 209, 379 Front Street, Belleville. Applicants must be at least 16 years of age.

Some outstanding instructors have been lined up for the athletic camp.

In football Joe Upton, the head of the physical education department of Laurentian High in Ottawa, will be in charge of one group of boys. Mr. Upton is a former Ottawa Rough Rider. Mr. Jack Gray, pejsical of Dr. C. J. Mackenzie High, Deep River, will be in charge of the second football group. Mr. Gray is a former Toronto Argonaut.

Squadron Leader Harry Kerrison will be in charge of track and field. Mr. Kerrison is coach of the Uplands Harriers Track Club. Members of this club have been setting records all over Canada.

Mr. Ernie Zoppe will be in charge of the basketball sessions. Mr. Zoppe is the physical education teacher at Nepean High in Ottawa and is the coach of the Carleton University basketball team. The Carleton basketball team represented the east in the national playdowns this year.

Wrestling is to be introduced to the camp this year. Mr. Dave Bell of Moira High in Belleville will be in charge of the wrestling group. Mr. Bell's high school wrestling team won the Ontario wrestling championship this year. Mr. Bell also instructs wrestling at Queen's University.

The leadership sessions will be conducted by members of the community programs division of the Department of Education, and the Ottawa YMCA staff. Mr. Gordon McFarlane of the Ottawa-West district representative for the community programs division, will be in charge of the leadership sessions.

Further information about this athletic leadership camp is available from the community programs division of the Department of Education, Sofia 4, 1581 Bank Street, Ottawa 8, Ont., and the Ottawa YMCA, 127 Metcalfe Street, Ottawa 4, Ont.

Won't Negotiate 'With Shotgun' Says Johnson

QUEBEC (CP)—Daniel Johnson, whose Union Nationale party took the largest number of seats in Quebec's provincial election Sunday, said Tuesday night he will be firm at federal-provincial conferences but won't negotiate with a shotgun."

Mr. Johnson, interviewed on the English-language CBC television program Newsmagazine, said that Quebec is justified in demanding certain rights, but won't negotiate to "upset the apple cart."

His party won 35 seats in the newly-enlarged 108-seat house Sunday, upsetting the Liberals who obtained 51 seats. Two independents also were elected.

At the dissolution of the last 95-seat assembly, the Liberals held 63 seats and the Union Nationale 28. There was one independent and three vacancies.

Mr. Johnson had said at the start of his election campaign that "we are not going to beg for these (provincial) rights, we will take them."

Tuesday night he said he still believes in his attitude but "I won't walk into the negotiations with a shotgun."

The party election platform called for Quebec control of all income and corporation taxes as well as over succession duties.

WANT ALL REVENUE

Mr. Johnson also said intended to ask for "100 per cent" of all tax revenues which originate in Quebec.

Premier Jean Lesage, meanwhile, denied rumors that he plans to resign the Liberal leadership.

He said in a telephone interview that "the rumor has said that I will resign as head of the Liberal party."

"That is unfounded. I remain party leader, no matter what I decide about turning over the government. I am rolling up my sleeves and going to work."

Mr. Lesage said a meeting of his cabinet is planned but no party policy will be held today. He had announced earlier that the cabinet meeting will deal with "routine though pressing matters."

A Liberal party caucus will be held Thursday, the premier said, and "after the caucus I will meet with Mr. Johnson."

NO DECISION

Asked whether he would make any decisions before the turnover of the government soon, Mr. Lesage said:

"I will certainly not make any decision until after I have seen the official count of the votes and the report of the returning officer and until I have received all the complete reports on the infringements of the electoral act."

Frank Hanley, the independent re-elected in the Montreal riding of Ste. Anne, said he will support the Union Nationale in the forthcoming sessions of the legislative assembly as long as that party presents legislation in the best advantage of his constituency.

Arthur Seguin, the other independent elected Sunday, said he earlier he would support whatever policies were in the interests of the Montreal-Isle Jesus constituency of Robert Bélanger.

Budget Changes Coming

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp is expected to make two changes in the federal budget soon.

He told the Commons Tuesday night he intends to move two amendments but he did not elaborate.

An informed source said one will involve the five - per - cent refundable tax for corporations and the other a retroactive change in taxation of benefits from business profit - sharing plans.

Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) said in the Commons the retroactive change on employee stock option plans is repugnant.

At present, an employee could pay a tax on benefits from the plan at his average tax rate for the last three years, less 20 per cent of the benefits.

LIMITS REDUCTION

The 20 - per - cent reduction would be limited to a maximum $200 by the legislation.

Mr. Lambert said many employees committed themselves to a job on the basis of the tax law as it was, not as it will affect them retroactively.

David Pugh (PC — Okanagan - Boundary) asked how the refundable tax to clip capital expansion by corporations can be justified on the investment plans to spend $100,000,000 on defence department headquarters in Ottawa.

Defence Minister Hellyer objected that the figure will be $30,000,000, possibly rising to $50,000,000.

Mr. Pugh said it may possibly rise to $100,000,000 if he knows anything about government projects.

David Lewis (NDP — York South) assailed up Mr. Sharp's budget as an attempt to "reduce expectations."

COMPLAINS ABOUT TAX
